It's all happening at Telford's Big Top

An 'extravaganza of entertainment' is this month taking place in a big top tent in Telford, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of both the town itself and its popular arts venue, Oakengates Theatre@The Place.

The line-up of shows being presented includes comedy, music, dance and children's theatre, with Russell Watson, Dara O Briain, Collabro (pictured) and Al Murray among the high-profile performers taking part.

The action unfolds at QEII Fields In Trust Telford Town Park Arena between 4 & 19 August.

For more information, visit telford50.co.uk

Imagine peace in our time at Lichfield Cathedral...

An immersive and interactive exhibition at Lichfield Cathedral is this month inviting visitors 'to imagine what peace might feel and look like in our time'.

Imagine Peace uses objects, artworks, light and sound to encourage viewers to reflect on the hard-won peace of 1918 - following four years of fighting during the First World War and then to turn their attention to the future. The exhibition shows at the cathedral every evening from 17 to 27 August.

Deacon Blue front man to appear at Ginger & Spice

Deacon Blue lead singer Ricky Ross is the headline act at the 2018 Ginger And Spice Festival, taking place from Wednesday 26 to Saturday 29 September in Market Drayton,

4 whatsonlive.co.uk

Shropshire. As well as Ricky's performance on the 29th, the festival also features, among many other attractions, a gingerbread and port-tasting event, a heritage spice trail, a film & curry night and a gingerbread-making masterclass. For full details of what's happening across the four days of the festival, visit gingerandspicefest.co.uk

New brochure launched as Shropshire celebrates its famous war poet

A new brochure listing events taking place in Shropshire to mark the centenary of war poet Wilfred Owen's death, and the end of World War One, is now available.

The brochure has been published by Shrewsbury Heritage on behalf of Shropshire Remembers, the county's First World War partnership. For more information about the brochure and where to access it, visit shropshireremembers.org.uk

Are you a Jet or a Shark?

West Bromwich Operatic Society is returning to Wolverhampton Grand Theatre this autumn with a new production of West Side Story (Tues 27 November - Sat 1 December). The company is currently on the lookout for males aged between 16 and 30 who would like to play members of the story's two opposing street gangs, the Jets and the Sharks. If you fit the bill and are interested in taking part, contact company secretary Hilary on 0121 550 3667 or via hilary@wbos.co.uk. For more information about the show or to book tickets, visit grandtheatre.co.uk.

Canadian comic Stewart heads Into The Punset

Canadian comedian Stewart Francis is visiting the Midlands during what he says will be his last ever standup tour.

Punchline wizard Francis will be bringing his new show, Into The Punset, to venues in Wolverhampton, Dudley, Bromsgrove, Malvern, Birmingham, Telford, Coventry and Shrewsbury. For more information, visit stewartfrancis.com

Plenty of summer fun at two Black Country venues

A series of themed fun days are among the school summer holiday highlights at two popular Black Country visitor attractions - the Red House Glass Cone and Dudley Museum At The Archives.

The special days provide a chance to look around the sites, view key pieces in the venues' collections and take part in a range of craft activities. And there's plenty more going on at both destinations throughout the month, too. For more information, visit dudley.gov.uk

Bad Girls visit Cannock theatre

Girl Power will definitely be the name of the game when Brownhills Musical Theatre Company present their next show at the Prince of Wales Theatre in Cannock. The highly rated ensemble perform Bad Girls at the venue from 31 October to 3 November. The production is a musical version of the award-winning television drama of the same name.

Cyclists aiming to raise plenty of cash for Midlands Air Ambulance...

A group of local cyclists are hosting a fun-filled evening for the benefit of Midlands Air Ambulance Charity. Taking place on Saturday 24 November at the Copthorne Hotel in Brierley Hill, and hosted by snooker legend and commentator Willie Thorne, the black-tie occasion will feature a live band, DJ, auction and raffle. To find out how you can support Midlands Air Ambulance Charity, visit midlandsairambulance.com or follow the organisation on social media.

Two Coronation Street favourites to reunite as Doctor Dolittle 'talks to the animals' in Wolverhampton

Two former Coronation Street favourites will be joining Father Brown and Harry Potter star Mark Williams when a new touring production of Doctor Dolittle The Musical arrives in the Midlands next year.

Brian Capron, who played baddie Richard Hillman in the hit ITV1 soap, and Vicky Entwistle - better known as the Street's mouthy-but-lovable resident, Janice Battersby - will appear in the eagerly anticipated stage show when it visits the Wolverhampton Grand Theatre from Tuesday 29 January to Saturday 9 February. For more information, visit grandtheatre.co.uk

Anyone for ping pong?

Birmingham ping pong players will this month have a new venue in which to enjoy their sport. Located on Temple Row in the city centre, Serve will provide 17 tables for players to use, a selection of food and drink, music courtesy of guest DJs, and masterclasses by stars of the ping pong world. The new venue opens the first weekend of August.

Get flapping at Shrewsbury's Quarry Park!

Shrewsbury's Quarry Park will next month play host to a world record attempt. Organisers are hoping that the 22 September event will be recorded as the largest-ever Charleston dance. The figure to beat is 975, with the attempt being held in aid of Severn Hospice. For more information, visit revel-in-dance.com

Kinky Boots to stride out across the Midlands

Hit West Ender Kinky Boots is touring to the Midlands.

Inspired by true events and featuring songs by pop star Cyndi Lauper, the Olivier Award-winning show takes audiences on a journey from a gentlemen's shoe factory in Northampton to the glamorous catwalks of Milan.

The touring production visits the Wolverhampton Grand from 16 to 27 October. It then returns to the region in the new year, stopping off at the Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, from 28 January to 9 February and Birmingham Hippodrome from 11 to 23 March.

The Light House wins community award...

Wolverhampton's Light House cinema has been named 'community contributor of the year' at the city's Independent Retail Excellence Awards.

The popular venue is based in the historic Chubb Buildings - a former Victorian lock factory - and hosts current film releases, streamed live theatre and community events.

Cosford colour chaos...

RAF Cosford in Shifnal is this month hosting an event that's sure to leave its participants plastered in powder paint!

The 2018 RAFA Colour Chaos takes place at the venue on Sunday 26 August and promises 5km of fantastic family fun. Entrants can run, jog, dance or walk the course, and along the way will pass numerous points of interest around the airfield. Money raised by the event will help fund the RAF Association's Storybook Wings project. The initiative brings serving RAF parents who have to spend time away from their families, back home to their children through recordings of their favourite bedtime stories. To sign up for the event, go to rafa.org.uk/colourchaos

Newcastle-under-Lyme festival set to celebrate 'the father of modern circus'

A festival celebrating 'the father of modern circus' Philip Astley is this month being held in Astley's home town of Newcastle-under-Lyme. Taking place in Lyme Valley Park on Saturday 4 August, AstleyFest features circus performances, horse shows, military displays, hands-on activities and plenty more.

Script to stage for Benidorm's writer!

The writer of hit TV series Benidorm is to star in the stage version of the show when it visits the Midlands this autumn.

Derren Litten will play the role of Derek during Benidorm Live's second-city stop-off (Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, 24 - 29 September & New Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, 3 - 29 December).

Commenting on the news, Derren said: "I'm so excited to be joining the cast in Birmingham this Christmas. It's been 25 years since I've been on a stage, so I guess you could say I'm back by popular demand! I won't lie, I'm pretty scared at the prospect of acting and singing in such an amazing theatre, but if I get nervous and forget my lines, I'll just say it was a last-minute rewrite!"

Autumn tumble in the Arena

Arena Birmingham will next month host the Trampoline, Tumbling & DMT British Championships 2018 event (Saturday 22 & Sunday 23 September).

It's expected that the two-day meetup will see the return of Olympic trampoline medallist Bryony Page, as she takes on stiff competition from world team bronze medallists Laura Gallagher and Kat Driscoll.

The event also features Nathan Bailey and Luke Strong doing battle for the men's senior trampoline crown, and disability trampoline gymnasts performing 'exhilarating routines' in a bid for prestigious medals.

The Big Feast

presents the tastiest outdoor arts on the streets of Stoke-on-Trent...

The Big Feast Festival is back on the streets of Stoke-on-Trent this month. Now in its fifth year, this scrumptious programme of free outdoor events is being presented as part of Appetite, a three-year initiative designed to promote the arts to people in the Potteries.

The theme of this year's two-day celebration is local and national talent, with dance, opera, visual arts, music, circus and theatre all featuring.

"The menu for Big Feast has been selected not only by me but also by locals," says Gemma Thomas, Creative Producer at Appetite. "They're called our Supper Club. They go to see work in other places and get back to us about their experiences."

The Appetite initiative is supported by Arts Council England's Creative Places & People fund, as Gemma explains: "It's a strategic funding pot for places that don't normally engage in the arts. The residents are in the bottom 20% of arts engagers. That could be for a number of different reasons. Maybe they don't believe theatre or circus is actually art, or they don't think the arts are for them, or they don't know how to get involved, or they don't know how they'll get there. There are lots of different barriers. That's why Appetite exists - to help people overcome those barriers and discover that the arts might actually be for them."

Gemma firmly believes that outdoor arts festivals are absolutely essential for boosting the success of other arts sectors.

"It's been proven that outdoor arts reach the widest possible segmentation of people and therefore act as a gateway. People taste something on the street and realise they really enjoy it, which might then give them the encouragement they need to buy a ticket for a full show or to visit a gallery. It's very important to feed the different sectors by providing little tasters of what the arts can be, and this is where events like Big Feast come in."

Highlights at this year's festival include an opportunity for visitors to jump on the swings at the Virtual Reality Playground to power their own adventure. They can also help produce a live 12-hour radio performance.

"Hunt & Darton return with their new project, Radio Local," says Gemma. "It'll be very interactive, with passers-by making the news or being grabbed to do a live dating show. We're working with 6 Towns Radio and BBC Radio Stoke on this project, so people can hear the broadcast. Hunt & Darton will also be here in advance to do some workshops with local people, giving them some radio skills and making some programmes ready for when they broadcast. There will also be a shed where audience members can make their own jingle. They're so unpredictable as performers and very good at improvising, so who knows what's going to happen? All I know is that it's going to be raucous, but in a really brilliant way!"

The Big Feast Festival's offerings are not only fun and diverse, though. Many also explore social issues.

"Bingo Lingo by Wild N Beets is a twist on what bingo can be, because it's by two disabled artists. The callers use words related to disability to break down surrounding stigma. The show also points out how sometimes people try to be overly politically correct when it comes to disability, but end up getting it totally wrong. It's a means by which to open up these topics, but in an accessible way and using a format that people love."

Gemma reckons there's something for everyone at this year's Big Feast Festival, so she's picked out a range of tasty highlights on the opposite page. "Just come along and give it a try," she urges. "We're sure you'll love it, so come and be part of it and make some memories."

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS...

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE REIMAGINED

Fri 24 & Sat 25 Aug

The Royal Opera House returns to Stoke-on-Trent with two opera classics - La Traviata and La Bohème - both of which have been reimagined for an outdoor space. Join the performers as they waltz you through a dazzling tale of love, betrayal and heartbreak in La Traviata, or immerse yourself in the highs and lows of Bohemian life in La Bohème.

Fri 24 & Sat 25 Aug

This 'jaw-dropping fusion of dance and circus, testing bodily and artistic limits' sees NoFit State Circus and Motionhouse make use of 20 huge blocks to create a giant game of concrete Jenga. The tower is torn apart and put back together in an infinite number of ways as the performers tell a wordless story about urban life.

FANTABULOSA!

Fri 24 & Sat 25 Aug

A new commission from the producer of Storytime With Drag Queens, Fantabulosa features glitter, storytelling, dressing-up and lip-sync choreography from some of the UK's leading drag artists. Although it's primarily aimed at children aged between three and eight, everyone is welcome.

SPECIAL EVENT...

MAN UP

Tues 21 - Fri 24 Aug

In this evening performance by Restoke, 20 men take to the floor for a gritty and humorous spoken-word & dance piece, sharing real-life stories about masculinity and mental health.

The groundbreaking MAN UP was created by, and stars, men from Stoke-on-Trent. Expect a 'spellbinding' show by local talent about local people. Tickets are £12.50 (£10 concessions) and can be purchased from restoke.org.uk/man-up. Suitable for ages 16-plus only.

The Big Feast Festival takes place in various locations around Stoke-on-Trent city centre on Friday 24 & Saturday 25 August.

For more information or to book ticketed events, visit appetitestoke.co.uk.

SPECIAL EVENT...

MUSEUM OF THE MOON

Tues 21 - Wed 29 Aug

This touring installation by artist Luke James focuses on the gleaming moon and comes complete with detailed NASA imagery and surround-sound composition from BAFTA winner Dan Jones. The installation is accompanied by its own individual programme, The Big Feast Under The Moon, presenting moon-inspired events throughout August. Although the activities are free, some are ticketed, so visit appetitestoke.co.uk for more information.

REVIEW: Bella Napoli Authentic Italian cuisine is a family affair in the heart of Shrewsbury

Shrewsbury is dotted with Italian restaurants, many of which are part of popular chains, so there is stiff competition for those wanting to set up their own independent Italian.

We were invited to dine at Bella Napoli, a small family-run establishment in the town's Castle Street. I can assure you that their food and service offer a dining experience far superior to anything provided by any of Shrewsbury's Italian chains.

Firstly, I wish to mention the impeccable service you receive at Bella Napoli. Upon our arrival, we were greeted with warm, welcoming words and broad smiles. The staff were attentive throughout the meal, but without being overly present at the table. It became clear that the restaurant had regulars - a good sign. One couple entered and proceeded to share in-jokes with the owner and other members of staff; another indicator of the restaurant's friendly, open nature.

However, I do think sprucing up the decor downstairs would help the staff encourage more people in off the street to give the restaurant a go. Bella Napoli is a wonderful, intimate size, and I believe some slight remodelling would truly do it justice. People say not to judge a book by its cover, but when it comes to choosing a restaurant, people certainly do! However, I was excited to see that you can observe the chefs crafting your meal from your table, which is a feature I love. So, overall, first impressions were promising - and the food that followed certainly didn't disappoint.

Bella Napoli's menu has everything you could ask for. A wide range of dishes are offered that can suit any pocket and palate: from Italian classics like bruschetta, lasagne and homemade hand-stretched pizzas, to a range of delicious seafood and meats. The menu also caters well for vegetarians and diners on gluten-free diets, with the staff always on hand to help with your decision-making if you have certain dietary requirements. The chefs are Italian and cook all courses from traditional or original recipes, to make for truly scrumptious dishes.

Bella Napoli is also open for lunch, breakfast and mid-morning coffee with homemade cake, so you can step inside to sample their food and hospitality most hours of the day.

To complement my meal, I had a gloriously delicate white wine from the Italian wine list. There isn't a great deal of choice, but the wine seemed of very good quality and of reasonable price per glass. My companion chose a simple beer.

For our starters, we opted for Calamari Fritti with lemon and aioli and Capesante in Cappotio - scallops wrapped in pancetta with a garlic butter sauce. Scallops are notoriously difficult to cook perfectly, but the chef at Bella Napoli managed it. They were divine, soft morsels, and the pancetta wrapping was thin enough to ensure it didn't overpower the delicate flavour of the scallops - a top-notch starter. The calamari was also cooked well and avoided being too chewy, which is always a relief. It could've done with a little extra flour coating to really give it that crisp texture, as it was a little patchy in places; but again, the balance of flavours on the plate was lovely.

Our fantastic dining experience continued with the main courses. We had Risotto Pollo e Spinach and a fillet steak with the chef-special peppered sauce, rosemary potatoes and French beans. We were delighted by the quality of ingredients and the extremely high standard of execution, as well as the generous portion sizes.

My risotto was creamy but not too rich; it felt indulgent and comforting without being too stodgy. The flavour given by the chicken and spinach combination was soft, delicate and gently seasoned. I adored this because I've sometimes been disappointed by the obvious saltiness of risottos in other restaurants.

The true show-stopper, however, was my partner's fillet steak. This was a truly glorious piece of meat of the highest possible quality (I want to know who their supplier is!) and was cooked to absolute perfection. It was so lusciously tender that the knife glided through it no problem at all. The sauce and its accompaniments married together this wonderful dish.

We decided to indulge in dessert (of course!), but one to share, as I was quite full from previous courses. As soon as we spied lemon cheesecake on the menu, it was a no-brainer - cheesecake is a real winner with us, if done well. We weren't disappointed. The perfect balance of light and creamy, it was delightfully offset by the sharp lemon topping.

Our first experience of Bella Napoli was a very pleasing one. Although some slight improvements could be made, both in terms of the restaurant's appearance and the execution of some of the simpler dishes, the food in most cases wasn't too far short of sensational. This was topped off by the first-class service.

I look forward to returning to sample some of the other dishes on offer, in the hope that they're just as delicious. Lauren Cole

ALFRESCO DINING

If August proves to be anywhere near as hot and sizzling as June and July, there'll only be one place to tuck into a delicious meal and glass or two of something relaxing, and that's the great outdoors! Check out the venues featured below if you're looking for the kind of dining experience that also allows you to top up your tan...

The Olive Tree

This unique family-run bistro-bar - one of Shrewsbury's most popular eateries - provides an authentic Mediterranean experience, allowing diners to relax and enjoy a diverse range of tapas and classic bistro dishes, as well as Spanish sherries, wines, cocktails and local ales. Boasting an exquisite terraced garden - perfect for enjoying the August sun with a jug of sangria - The Olive Tree has a range of summer offers. These include: Olive Trio - three tapas for £10; Paella Wednesdays - paella for two plus a bottle of red or white for £30; and Wine & Tapas - a bottle of house red or white 'vina vasta' plus complementary tapas for £10.

Frankwell Island, Shrewsbury, SY3 8JR

Fiume

This independent family-run Italian bar, restaurant & café offers cuisine 'with a southern Italian influence and a fresh twist'.

Customers have the option to dine alfresco whilst watching canalboats pass by - and you can even take along your dog! Every Monday and Saturday lunchtime, from 12pm till 3pm, diners can enjoy bottomless prosecco and endless pizza for £26.95 per person.

The mouthwatering à la carte menu features starters, pasta dishes, pizzas, fresh fish and meats.

5a Bridgnorth Road, Compton, Wolverhampton, WV6 8AB

The Queens

Built around 1841, The Queens is a family-run pub & restaurant in the Shropshire town of Ludlow.

Every Thursday, Barkworths Seafoods Fishmongers in Shrewsbury deliver an abundance of fresh fish and seafood for the eatery's fish night. But it's not all about fish. Diners can also enjoy dishes including smoked duck served on a celeriac coleslaw, Ludlow double steak burger and homemade Mortimer Forest venison pie.

Alfresco dining is a popular choice in the summer months, so booking is strongly advised.

113 Lower Galdeford, Ludlow, SY8 1RU

The Quarter

Based in the cultural quarter of Hanley town centre, this family-run business opened in December 2016 and boasts the motto 'eat, drink and listen'. A café by day and a quirky home-style bistro in the evening, The Quarter presents live performances of music, poetry and comedy, and serves a variety of classic homemade dishes, pasta and pizza, sandwiches, platters and more.

We've heard that the vegan bagel and the prosecco cocktails are particularly good...

65 Piccadilly, Hanley, Stoke-on-Trent, ST1 1HR

The Inn At Shipley

Dating back to 1771 and housed in an original Georgian building, The Inn At Shipley is everything that a decent country pub should be, boasting open fires, oak beams, a warm welcome and a very pleasant, chatty bunch of regulars.

The menu is imaginative and varied, with favourites including garlic & rosemary baked camembert, spiced beetroot falafels, herb crusted hake fillet, Moroccan spiced lamb rump, fish pie and a range of light bites and sandwiches.

Bridgnorth Road, Shipley, nr Wolverhampton, WV6 7EQ

The Swan With Two Necks

Situated in the heart of the countryside, the Swan With Two Necks aims to bring a fresh and vibrant eating and drinking experience to North Staffordshire.

A popular choice with locals, the main menu boasts slow-roasted belly pork, wild mushroom risotto balls, homemade steak, ale & mushroom pie, Thai red curry and homemade Staffordshire beef burger.

Benefitting from a large outdoor dining area, the Swan is the perfect choice for a spot of late-summer alfresco dining.

Pulled Apart By Horses

The Sugarmill, Stoke-on-Trent, Sat 18 August

Indie rock band Pulled Apart By Horses came to prominence with their self-titled debut album in 2010.

The four-piece have since released a further three albums, supported the likes of Biffy Clyro, Foals and Muse, and recorded a Takeover for Annie Mac and Radio One. Fourth album The Haze reached number 12 in the charts when it was released back in March 2017. Alongside their current tour, the boys are also working on new album Pish Of Papa Lulu, which is due for release at the end of the year.

Iron Maiden

Genting Arena, Birmingham, Tues 7 August

Pioneers of the new wave of British heavy metal, Iron Maiden achieved initial success during the early 1980s.

Thirty-eight albums later - that's 16 studio albums, 11 live albums, four EPs and seven compilations - the band continue to impress both as recording artists and live performers, selling out venues wherever they play.

Following their massively successful Book Of Souls tour, the boys take to the road again with their Legacy Of The Beast show, presenting a set list covering a large selection of '80s material but also including a handful of 'surprises' from later albums.

Ocean Colour Scene

Wolverhampton Racecourse, Fri 31 August

Created in 1989 and featuring Steve Cradock, Simon Fowler, Oscar Harrison and Raymond Meade, Birmingham four-piece Ocean Colour Scene have released five top-10 albums - two of which went platinum - 17 top-40 singles and six top-10 singles.

The band are best known for the songs The Day We Caught The Train, You've Got It Bad and, perhaps most famously, The Riverboat Song, which enjoyed weekly exposure on Chris Evans' hit 1990s television series, TFI Friday.

Brian Wilson

Digbeth Arena, Birmingham, Fri 24 August

One of the greatest names in late-20th century music, Brian Wilson is best known as vocalist, producer and co-founder of the legendary Beach Boys.

An inspirational songwriter, the man who's been dubbed the Mozart of Rock is appearing in Birmingham this month to perform the group's 1966 release, Pet Sounds. The seminal album is listed by Acclaimed Music as statistically the most revered of all time.

Justin Timberlake

Arena Birmingham, Mon 27 August

Justin Timberlake has sold more than 32 million albums and 56 million singles, making him one of the world's best-selling artists. Following his last tour - the critically acclaimed 20/20 Experience, which sold out arenas and stadiums around the world in 2013 and '14 - the global superstar here makes a welcome return to Birmingham with The Man Of The Woods tour.

Reverend Peyton's Big Damn Band

The Robin, Bilston, Mon 20 August

"Over the years, our shows have gotten more dynamic," Reverend Peyton explains. "The ups are more up and the downs are more down. And that's important to me."

America's foremost country blues outfit released their most recent album, The Front Porch Sessions, in 2017. "I really think it's one of the best things I've ever done," Peyton continues. "I'm interested in making hand-made American music - the goal is to be timeless."

ALL THE BEST FOLK...

so much to see and do at Shrewsbury Folk Festival

Shrewsbury Folk Festival co-founder Sandra Surtees talks to What's On about the 2018 edition of the event, taking place this month over the bank holiday weekend...

Starting life as a small get-together in Bridgnorth in 1997, Shrewsbury Folk Festival now ranks as one of the country's top three folk events, alongside Cambridge and Cropredy in Oxfordshire.

That original event in the small Shropshire town sold 700 tickets. Twenty-one years later - and now taking place at Shrewsbury's West Mid Showground - the festival attracts in excess of 7,000 visitors, many of whom return time and again to enjoy the event's happy atmosphere.

That 'happy atmosphere' is one of the festival's many assets, and something of which co-founder Sandra Surtees is particularly proud: "It's such an achievement to see that you've brought all of these people together," she says. "Most of them don't know each other, friendships form, there's music everywhere, and people are just so happy. That has to be the best thing."

When Sandra's husband and fellow festival founder, Alan, passed away following a brave battle with cancer in 2017, there were fears among avid Shrewsbury Folk attendees that the event might be in jeopardy. They needn't have worried - this well-rooted festival intends to be around for a long time to come. "I always knew I was going to carry on," says Sandra, "and I promised Alan that I would."

The work of the festival extends beyond the Showground site, with outreach projects adding to the event's unique feel.

Putting something back into the community has always been important to Sandra, as has been the business of reaching out to new and younger audiences and performers. So as well as featuring a diverse line-up of established names performing across the site's numerous stages, the festival also champions young up-and-coming artists, providing a platform on which they can become better recognised.

And that's where The Launchpad comes in... Evolving organically from the buskers who used to perform around the festival site, The Launchpad invites artists aged between 16 and 26 from across the West Midlands and Mid Wales to submit samples of their work to the festival team. If the 'judging panel' like what they hear, the artist in question is then given the opportunity to perform on The Launchpad stage during the festival weekend.

"Alan was always so passionate about young musicians, and hundreds and hundreds of letters requesting to perform at the festival would land every year. In fact, this year the number has risen to in excess of 1,000.

"This year The Launchpad will move to a slightly quieter area, so that we can look after the artists a little bit better and give them a better crack at it, so to speak."

Last year saw the launch of the Alan Surtees Trust, which recently awarded £3,000 to young and emerging musicians, dancers and singers. Spearheaded by musician Hannah James, the trust has been raising funds from the sale of an album entitled Resound. Comprising tracks known to be favourites of Alan's, it was recorded by artists who have a close association with the festival.

Early days, but how would Sandra like to see the trust grow in the future?

"I would rather like it to continue as it is, but it depends on what funds we can raise. As long as we keep on working within local schools, promoting local folk dance and song, I think it's just a brilliant thing to do. I'd like to do more of the same. Of course, we can only continue to do so if we're lucky enough to get the supporting grants."

Aside from its eclectic musical offering, Shrewsbury Folk also provides a plethora of activities for visitors of all ages to enjoy. It even has its own children and youth festivals. While Pandemonium promises a weekend of music, dance, drama and craft-centred fun for 'wee folkies' up to the age of 10, Refolkus encourages young people aged between 11 and 20 to 'make music and unleash their inner artist' via a series of traditional music and dance workshops.

The responsibility for programming and booking for the festival falls squarely on Sandra's shoulders - so how tricky is it to develop a mouthwatering line-up of talent?

"It's not difficult, you just have to balance it up. Even if an act that I'm looking at isn't a particular favourite of mine, as long as they're good and I think the audience are going to enjoy them, I'll consider booking them. I like a nice variety, so it's all about getting the balance right."

Has it ever gone wrong? "Yes, but we won't elaborate on that! There are always disappointments when you can't get the artists you want. You then have to try and find someone else who fits the bill. You can't always get it straight away - it takes a bit of work."

So who's on Sandra's hotlist from this year's line-up?

"I'm really looking forward to seeing Steve Harley And Cockney Rebel, Peter Knight's Gigspanner Big Band and Budiño, a Galithian piper who's coming over from Spain. I've not seen him perform before, so I'm looking forward to seeing him close the Bellstone stage on the Monday afternoon."

Other highlights for 2018 include Richard Thompson Electric Trio, Shooglenifty with Dhun Dhora, Blowzabella, Show Of Hands, Jon Boden And The Remnant Kings, Gretchen Peters and Megson, to name but a few...

Last year's big hitters, The Fitzgeralds, will also be making a welcome return, delighting audiences with their virtuosic fiddling and step dancing.

See you there!

ORBITAL

Brand new festival Shiine On Birmingham launches in the city next month, with electronic dance music duo Orbital headlining.

What's On caught up with brothers Paul and Phil Hartnoll to find out more...

Festival brand Shiine On is launching a new one-day event at Birmingham's Genting Arena next month. Shiine On Birmingham's impressive line-up includes more than 20 iconic bands as well as a Hacienda afterparty.

The all-day event is headlined by dance pioneers Orbital. The festival coincides with the release of the duo's ninth album, Monsters Exist, which is out the following week.

"Where can I start? It's a wonderful little album," explains Phil Hartnoll, one half of Orbital. "We've been away from each other for five years, and this album has been quite refreshing - it's a bit like when we first started. With some of the tracks, you can tell we've got something on our mind. If you know Orbital, you'll know what I mean."

"The state of the nation and the world at the minute makes me feel like putting together an anarcho-punk album and shouting at the system," says the younger of the two brothers, Paul. "But I know that's kind of infantile a lot of the time, especially artistically, so you're better off doing what the rave culture did originally and live by example. We don't agree with the government, we don't agree with what's going on, we're not going to fight you, we're just going to go and do our own thing over here, so bye! That terrified the government. The inspiration behind this album is just that. Okay, let's make a nice album that you can listen to and enjoy, and let's just all go off and enjoy our own thing and leave these monsters to exist on their own."

Orbital are certainly no strangers to incorporating political and environmental commentary into their music, be it sampling John Major's attack on travellers at their 1995 Glastonbury show, protesting against the poll tax bill or recording their track, The Girl With The Sun In Her Head, in a studio powered only by Greenpeace's mobile solar power generator.

"There's a track on Monsters Exist called The Raid which discusses, through the medium of voiceover, things like over-population and people's frustration with the world," says Paul. "We also have a nice grand finale, with Brian Cox delivering a gothic, doom-laden but hopeful speech that he wrote especially for the album. Every time I watch a Brian Cox documentary, I think, 'Oh my god, there are so many samples in this!'. But because there's so much music in the background, I've never been able to sample the bits that I want, so I thought I'd just ask him whether he wanted to do something. Being as he's an old raver anyway and he used to be in rock bands, he was straight in with it. He was brilliant!"

"Our next single, Please Help UK, is just a dance track. There's no sort of chant or anything like that, but we're having fun with the imagery. It's a bit rave-generation. There are some voiceovers and samples in there which are pretty direct. It's a warning - mind your back, mind your back, they look like us!"

Orbital will perform a full festival show, complete with upgraded production, when they appear at Shiiine On Birmingham next month.

"We don't tend to self-indulge and just play a whole new album at people," says Paul. "If I went to see Status Quo, I'd be really pissed off if they didn't play Caroline or Rocking All Over The World. You've got to play the party favourites. I've seen bands play old tracks and they look really grumpy. For me, every time I play one of those tracks, I think, 'Without you, I wouldn't be here'. Don't bite the hand that feeds you. We've got about three new tracks in the set at the moment, so we'll probably play those, but we'll keep them away from each other and make sure people get a proper ride of what they want.

"With regard to the production, we've come a long way from hanging a white sheet and using a slide projector behind us. We've got a whole stage of video wall, but in different shapes and sizes, with us sat in the middle of it all. We're constantly up doing the video content, which is obviously more important than just the screens. We've worked on it since December, and by the time we hit Shiiine On, it'll be spot on."

Shiiine's line-up features Shed Seven, Happy Mondays, Embrace, Cast, Julian Cope and many more - so who is Phil most looking forward to seeing? "A Certain Ratio, definitely! I used to follow them around. Shack Up is one of my all-time favourite tracks, so I'll definitely be seeing them. Dreadzone, too - they're old stable mates. There are a lot of bands like that. It's going to be really fun for us; like a work's party type of thing."

Created in 1989 and well known for wearing trademark torches on their heads during their performances, Orbital played a huge part in the early rave scene. They've since enjoyed multiple Glastonbury headline performances and opened the 2012 Paralympics alongside the late Stephen Hawking.

"Our 1994 Glastonbury headline gig was a total blag," explains Phil. "Glastonbury at the time was very rock and roll, and everybody was just gagging for that electronic sound.

There were no dance fields or anything like that. It was great for the cause because Michael Eavis and everyone were like, 'Oh Jesus, that went down well - two guys twiddling knobs! That was alright, wasn't it!' It was great. We opened their eyes to electronic music.

"Playing alongside Stephen Hawking at the Paralympics - what a dude! It was some great idea of somebody, somewhere. He was doing a speech there, so he sent us his speech and we decoded it. We were performing it, and he was just so great. He wore the torch glasses, but to wear them he had to take his own glasses off and was as blind as a bat without them. But he was so up for it - he was such a star. I sent him a little edit of it, the actual performance. We had to cut it with a punk band and stuff like that, so I edited the track and he wrote back asking when we were going to release it. He was fucking great!"

Despite all these career-defining achievements, in October 2014 the duo announced on their official website that they were 'hanging up their iconic torch glasses and parting ways for the final time'.

Commenting on the split, Paul says: "It's funny, that self-employed lifestyle with your brother does have its pressures. I was really cross and angry with Phil, but at the same time, even if he annoys me now, it's not the same. When you're not talking to a family member, even if you're really angry, you spend half your time arguing with them in your head and half the time with a black hole in your stomach because something's wrong - there's something unconcluded and nasty in your life. I don't know how people live with it. I had a brief chat with Noel Gallagher about it during that period, and it was interesting talking to him. The look on his face said it all. I knew that feeling. There was anger there, but life's too short to live with that."

Although a negative at the time, the pair agree that the split has had a positive impact on both their relationship and Orbital.

"I thought he meant it when he said he wasn't talking to me again," says Phil. "That's shit, isn't it? What have I done? What did I do? Can you just remind me? When we're playing and we look at each other, it's not a scowl anymore, it's a laugh and a joke - it's brilliant. I couldn't do it any other way. Rock and roll, let's get on with it and enjoy it! That's what was missing - enjoying doing it together. We were bogged down with our relationship, bogged down with the job. I'm not moaning or anything, but now all our children are growing up, there are fewer responsibilities, and I've got my brother back. Everything's a win-win situation for me.

"We didn't talk for five years, but I think it's been a good thing" says Paul. "I went back to my roots, I went back to playing very small clubs and things like that, with no production, no front-of-house person, me setting up my own gear. That was really good and gave me more confidence going forward. It reminded me of when we started off in the early '90s, doing raves and clubs. It really did prove to me that it's really about the music. I feel like I'm in a different place now. It's nice to stop and start again; it feels different. I think next time we need to do something like that, we'll just have a year off, rather than fall apart"

Next year is Orbital's 30th anniversary. "We'll probably need to sum up our career somehow," says Paul. "I started writing a book when I wasn't talking to my brother. I wasn't having a go at him - it was more the other way round actually - and I think that was part of the process that got me back talking to him. I wrote 120 pages of my life, up to the age of 22, when I used to idolise him as a kid, and I kind of thought, 'Ah, where did it all go wrong?' So yes, we're working on a book. Phil doesn't want to write it, but he'll do a series of interviews. He'll do his half and I'll do mine, and we won't read or know what each other has written. Someone will put it together almost as a 'witness and prosecution' kind of thing. We're possibly going to get a documentary off the ground to celebrate that, and I've got another album that I want to do, to go along with the book - a biographical album which is mostly based on sampling sound and travelling around."

Phil adds: "We've got a mini Christmas tour in December, too. We're just really enjoying it, and that was what was missing before. You get into such a state and a pickle with relationships, and everything is all a big black cloud. Enjoying it was what was lost, but now it's found."

Shrewsbury Folk Festival

Greenhouse West Midland Showground,
Fri 24 - Mon 27 August

A highlight of any folk fan's calendar, this four-day fest brings together centuries of musical tradition in one picturesque setting. Steeped in history, the border town of Shrewsbury makes an ideal backdrop for the festival's mash-up of modern, medieval and everything in between, where grassroots cultures collide in dynamic fusion styles. Bring along the whole family for dance and workshops as well as live music. What's On is pleased to sponsor the festival's Launchpad, an element of the event which is designed to showcase local and up-and-coming talent.

Line-up includes: Richard Thompson Electric Trio, Steeleye Span, Jon Boden And The Remnant Kings, Turin Brakes, Steve Harley And Cockney Rebel (pictured), Show Of Hands, Budiño, Usher's Island, Gretchen Peters, Daoirí Farrell Trio, Peter Knight's Gigspanner Big Band and The Fitzgeralds.

Creamfields

Daresbury Estate, Halton, Cheshire,
Thurs 23 - Sun 26 August

Having celebrated its 20th edition in 2017, Creamfields unleashes the energy of Cream's Liverpool club nights in the open space of Halton's Daresbury Estate. Cutting-edge live acts unite with world-class DJs for a hedonistic four-day dance party. Since launching in Winchester, the brand has evolved into an international phenomenon beloved of ravers, trailblazers and experimenters the world over.

Farmer Phil's Festival

Gatten Farm, Ratlinghope, Shropshire,
Fri 10 - Sun 12 August

Launched in a corner of one of Farmer Phil's fields near Shrewsbury, this boutique gathering aims to offer something for everyone, featuring rock, dance, acoustic folk and everything in between. Camping for the full week is included in the ticket price. A brilliant opportunity to enjoy a summer getaway with the family.

Line-up includes: Jilted Generation, Shoot The Moon, The Wayne Martin Band, Fight The Bear (pictured), Legend, Celtica Pipes Rock, Dr & The Medics, Aswad, Jake Elwood's Blues Brothers Show, Reuben Archer's Personal Sin, Dan Owen, Quill, Red Rum Club, As December Falls and The Endings.

Brecon Jazz Festival

Various locations, Brecon, Wales,
Fri 10 - Sun 12 August

Now in its 35th year and successfully reinvented in 2016, Brecon Jazz continues with the smaller-scale, more collaborative and community-led approach that transformed past difficulties into an opportunity for positive change.

Expect headline performers, emerging talent, workshops and social and folk activities, all curated by Brecon Jazz Club.

Line-up includes: Tom Smith Septet, Josephine Davies Trio (pictured), Ian Shaw, Manchester Jazz Connection, Pavel PQ Quartet, South African Jazz Sextet, Elaine Delmar Quintet, Harmonica Jazz, Czech Connection Sun and Jim Hart Vibes.

“ I took it very seriously in those early years. It was very intense and full-on, and I didn't really get a chance to enjoy it as much... ”

RONAN KEATING

Boyzone's Ronan Keating is headlining the Sunday evening of Coventry's Godiva Festival. What's On recently caught up with him to find out more...

Proudly reaffirming its status as the UK's biggest and best free music festival, Godiva presents another bumper crop of top-notch talent as it returns to Coventry for its 20th anniversary edition. Veteran performers will join emerging talent to present a dazzling array of genres across the weekend.

Pop star Ronan Keating will headline the final evening, with Jake Bugg top-billing on the Friday and Editors on the Saturday. Other acts across the weekend include Jonas Blue, Gabrielle, Professor Green, Little Comets, Blood Red Shoes.

"It's always nice to get out and perform live," says Ronan. "I spend so much time writing songs, I'm on radio in the mornings mid-week and doing stuff in other countries and travelling, so it's always nice to come back to the UK as much as possible to do shows."

Having originally risen to prominence as a member of '90s pop band Boyzone, Ronan has recorded nine albums since embarking on his solo career in 1999, selling over 20 million records independently in addition to the 25 million sold together with his bandmates.

To this day, he remains best known for his international number one single, When You Say Nothing At All, which won him worldwide fame after featuring in the movie Notting Hill. Since then, he's further raised his profile by serving as a judge on the Australian X-Factor and coaching aspiring singers on The Voice.

Ronan is certainly looking forward to his Coventry stop-off: "I haven't spent that much time there, so I'm not an expert in any way, but it's a cool town with cool people and they love their music, which is very important to me. I'm looking forward to playing there, looking forward to seeing everybody and singing a few tunes.

"When I do my solo gigs, I separate them from Boyzone as much as possible. I've had 18 years of solo records and six years of Boyzone records, so it's dramatically different. People who come to my solo shows, I try and give them as much of that as possible. I mean, there might be one or two Boyzone songs - that's always nice - but it's mainly solo stuff."

After six UK number one singles, five UK chart-topping albums and 25 years together, Boyzone have recently announced their 25th anniversary and farewell UK & Ireland arena tour, which stops off at Birmingham's Genting Arena next year, on Friday 8 February.

The tour will follow the release of their final album, Thank You & Goodnight, which is due out this winter. The album will include collaborations with special guest songwriters Ed Sheeran (Because) and Gary Barlow (Love), plus a special tribute to Boyzone favourite Stephen Gateley, who died in 2009.

Having chalked up so many years in the music industry, what piece of advice would Ronan have given to his younger self had he had the chance? "I think, enjoy yourself more. I took it very seriously in those early years. It was very intense and full-on, and I didn't really get a chance to enjoy it as much. I was all about being professional and trying to be the best I could be, but not really thinking how quickly this could be gone. It went by very fast. I was thrown in at 16 years of age - it was full-on!"

What does the future hold? "Living. I just want to have a good time. I want to raise my children and be a good husband and enjoy my music and travel and tour and do all the things that I'm doing now. We take everything so intense, we live so fast, it's gone by and we haven't had chance to enjoy it. The older you get, the more you realise that."

Ronan Keating headlines Godiva Festival on Sunday 2 September.

Paul Morrell

Twenty-three years after kickstarting his career, Paul Morrell is now one of the Midlands' most renowned DJs. Here, he talks about his career, DJing, his remixes and more...

When did you first begin DJing, Paul?

I started in 1995 as a mobile DJ, working mainly at parties for friends. However, my interest in dance music and DJing started way before that. I've always had a keen interest in house music - it was the cool alternative to the Brit Pop/Spice Girls stuff that was in the charts at the time - and from a very young age, I'd collected house music records. The first records I bought were Pump Up The Jam by Technotronic and Ride On Time by Black Box in 1989. They really set out the style of music that I'd end up playing, as they're two of the first major house records to cross over into the mainstream top-40. Initially, I didn't earn very much money at all as a DJ. I was simply playing at house parties for the love of DJing and to gain experience. The very early parties I did, I may have been paid £50, which was much better than the salary I was earning at my Saturday job, as I was still at school. This led me to believe that DJing was a viable career path, so I started pursuing it seriously after leaving school. I do think those early gigs were invaluable, however, as they gave me the opportunity to learn how to work a crowd, mix under pressure and test out new tracks. Looking back, some of my first gigs were a huge learning curve, with lots of things going wrong, or not perfectly. I think every good DJ needs to have experienced this, in order to improve and hone their craft.

What are your earliest memories of being a DJ?

When I first started, it was totally different to today, predominantly due to the fact that I had to lug around three huge boxes of weighty vinyl, which also cost an absolute fortune. DJs in 2018 simply hear a new tune on the radio or in a club that they like, Shazam it, download it and turn up with a USB full of new music and a pair of headphones. In 1995, it was very different, and DJs would often spend hours on a Saturday in a record shop compiling sets from the latest vinyl releases for a set that evening. Ten vinyl would cost anything up to £100, whereas 10mp3s cost £7. Music has become far more accessible to DJs in that sense. Also, you would often have to wait for weeks for a track to be pressed on vinyl before you could play it out, unless you were lucky enough to have been mailed it by the record company. A great example of this was Music Sounds Better With You by Stardust, which Pete Tong had been championing on Radio One for weeks - but nobody could get a copy. This would never happen now, as people would just illegally rip the record from the internet and incorporate it within their sets.

What type of music do you predominantly play?

I play a variety of different genres of electronic music, and don't particularly pigeonhole myself into one specific style. That said, I've always leaned more towards tougher-sounding music, as I feel it has a great energy in clubs, and my personal preference is EDM. When I initially began DJing, my sets consisted of a variety of genres, and most DJs played all types of music. A great example of this is Jeremy Healy, who is one of the DJs I truly admire. Jeremy often drops random tracks into his sets, which makes a crowd stop and go, 'What the hell?!' I've heard him play Twist & Shout by The Beatles in the middle of an electro house set. It's only in more recent years that DJs have been under pressure to pledge their allegiance to one specific genre - which is kinda sad, really, as it limits creativity. I have a love for all music, so if I have a trance record that I love from the 1990s or a disco record from the 1970s and it's appropriate to the crowd I'm playing to, I'll find a way of including it.

What was your first 'big' gig?

My first major gig outside of my home town was supporting Paul Oakenfold at London's Ministry of Sound in 2008. This was also the very first time I'd played at Ministry of Sound. It was an extremely special experience - at the time, Oakenfold was one of the biggest DJs in the world. I've since gone on to support him several times, and have also released music on his Perfecto label. I just remember thinking that I'd really achieved something, as Oakenfold and Ministry are two major players in international house music culture. It was the DJing equivalent of playing at Wembley as a footballer.

Who's the biggest DJ you've been on a line-up with?

It's really subjective, as a DJ who's 'big' at the moment can be completely forgotten a year or so later. A DJ that I always love supporting is Boy George. He's an international fashion & music icon and such a lovely guy to work with. He also provided the vocals on my track, Tall & Handsome, last year, which was a huge honour for me. I would say he's probably the most internationally famous celebrity I've worked with frequently. I've also worked with huge trance and EDM artists such as Martin Garrix, Tiesto, Paul Van Dyk, Armin Van Buuren, Hardwell etc. I suppose to the average 18-year-old reader of this magazine, Martin Garrix is far more famous than Boy George. However, I wasn't really star-struck by any of those guys when I first met them; not in the same way I was with George.

Do any other DJs give you inspiration for your sets?

As I already mentioned, I was hugely inspired by some of the legendary British house music DJs of the 1990s, such as Danny Rampling and Jeremy Healy, but I constantly gain inspiration from new people. A more contemporary artist I really admire is Kryder. I absolutely love his recent production with Erick Morillo entitled Waves. It's been a firm favourite in my sets for

*“I love supporting and music Icon, and several months now. I also love Martin Solveig as a producer and a DJ, as his sets are always fun and quirky. He's had a great career, and his productions are always really amazing floor-fillers. There's also a new breed of young DJs, such as Craig Knight, James Bluck and Nathan C, who're producing some great music, too. Avicii was also a more recent inspiration, and it was a huge loss to the EDM community when he passed away earlier this year.

Who would you like to DJ alongside?

To be perfectly honest, I've worked with almost every DJ that I've ever wanted to, so there aren't that many left. I suppose the obvious one who would be most suited to my genre of music, and who I still haven't own Classique events were also extremely memorable, and I had a great time playing in the tiny venues there back in the early 2000s.

Where would you most like to DJ?

I intend to do a lot more overseas performances over the next few years, and am very much looking forward to performing at Matinee's Circuit festival in Barcelona later this month. I'm also absolutely thrilled to have been added to Gatecrasher's line-up for their event in the ruins of Coventry Cathedral. Obviously, being my home city, this venue being hugely iconic, and with Coventry having been selected as 2021 UK City of Culture, it's fantastic to be back playing in my home

You've recently been working on a lot of projects and remixes. Tell us a little about them...

The main forthcoming remix is of Troye Sivan's single, Bloom, which I'm hoping will be released late summer. I also have two new singles completed, one with Laura White entitled No Ordinary Love, and one featuring Amanda Wilson called Up In Flames. These are both big vocal piano house records and will hopefully achieve some success. The Laura White track in particular is extremely exciting, and I absolutely love her vocals on it. Finally, I have a forthcoming remix for a new artist called Ava Max, which will be released at the end of the summer.

met, is Calvin Harris. He's had an astonishing career and completely revolutionised commercial dance music, opening it up to a new generation. I know that some people don't like his music, but I believe what he's done for the EDM scene and youth culture as a whole is phenomenal.

What's been your favourite gig to DJ at?

So far, one of the biggest gigs I've performed at is the Weekend Festival in Helsinki, Finland. The line-up basically consisted of a who's-who of EDM. I was on the same line-up as Swedish House Maffia, Steve Aoki, Garrix, Tiesto, Marshmallow, Don Diablo etc. The festival is attended by approximately 30,000 people, and is one of the biggest in that area of Europe. That said, I've also had an amazing time performing for Birmingham Pride over the past few years. The atmosphere is always fantastic, both whilst playing and backstage. My early gigs in Coventry at my town once again. Gatecrasher have pulled out all the stops with a huge line-up of UK DJ talent, including Judge Jules and Seb Fontaine, and I'll be performing alongside an orchestra and live vocalists at the event.

You've worked with a lot of artists on remixes and original tracks. Who's been your favourite?

They're all great for different reasons, and all bring something unique and special to the table. I loved working with Mutya Buena, as she's such an immense talent with a fantastic voice and great image. We've actually been in contact recently about doing another collaboration, which we've already written. It's just a case of pinning her down to a date in the studio now, as she's always so busy. That said, it's also been great working with new artists such as Indigo Marshall and Vicky Jackson, both of whom are extremely talented and have amazing vocals. As I previously mentioned, it was also a huge honour that Boy George agreed to provide a vocal for me on my track, Tall & Handsome, last year.

What have you got coming up in the pipeline?

I'm absolutely thrilled to be returning on Bank Holiday Sunday, August the 26th, to one of the venues where I started my career. The Yard in Coventry (formerly The Glasshouse) is an extremely intimate 200-capacity venue that I first began promoting in somewhere around 15 years ago. This will be the first club gig I've played in Coventry for a number of years. The venue is extremely important to me, as it's the place where I first worked with artists including Tall Paul, Sonique, Dave Pearce etc. It will always have a special place in my heart. Although it's far smaller than the venues I now play in, I'm hoping that it will give some of the people who used to come along when I played regularly in Coventry the opportunity to do so again.

Moseley Folk

Moseley Park, Birmingham,
Fri 31 August - Sun 2 September

Tucked away behind Birmingham's busy streets, the beautiful Moseley Park is one of the city's hidden gems, transformed each year into an enchanting escape by one of the Midlands' best-loved music festivals.

Traditional folk & low-fi acoustic sets blend seamlessly with dreamy electropop, psychedelia and indie favourites against a magical backdrop of bright hippie colours, lush foliage and a beautiful lake. The perfect way to see out the summer.

Solihull Summer Fest

Tudor Grange Park, Solihull,
Sat 25 - Sun 26 August

Now in its third year, thousands are expected to descend on Tudor Grange Park over the August Bank Holiday weekend for what's fast becoming one of the most popular music events of the summer.

The festival features more than 10 hours of live music across the two days, funfair rides, a food village full of street vendors, and a huge variety of bars serving everything from real ale to prosecco.

Line-up includes: Sister Sledge (pictured), Busted, 10cc, Razorlight, Lightning Seeds, Sugar Hill Gang, Rak-Su, Alesha Dixon, The Beat, The Dualers, Roland Gift (Fine Young Cannibals), The Ed Sheeran Experience and Robert Lamberti as George Michael.

Towersey Festival

Thame, Oxfordshire, Fri 24 - Mon 27 August

Folk spirit goes to the heart of Towersey Festival, which traces its roots back to 1965, when local villagers united to buy a field from wealthy landowners.

After raising funds to drain, plough and re-seed the area, they started an event which has gone on to become one of the UK's finest folk festivals.

In honour of its origins, profits are paid back into village facilities and local charities.

Godiva

War Memorial Park, Coventry, Fri 31 August - Sun 2 September

Proudly reaffirming its status as the UK's biggest and best free music festival, Godiva presents another bumper crop of top-notch talent as it returns for 2018. Veteran performers join emerging artists working across a dazzling array of genres. While the traditional Godiva procession continues to this day, the weekend has certainly come a long way since its 17th century origins as a celebration of the medieval Countess of Mercia.

Music line-up includes: Editors, Ronan Keating, Jake Bugg (pictured), Jonas Blue, Gabrielle, Professor Green, Little Comets and Blood Red Shoes.

VOICE OF REASON

Dara O'Briain talks ordinary lives at Telford's Big Top...

Having made a real name for himself as a TV presenter in recent years, Dara O'Briain is about to return to his first love of stand-up comedy, embarking on a mammoth national tour with brand new show Voice Of Reason.

"Doing stand-up is a euphoric experience," says the 46-year-old Irishman. "The great thing is the anticipation. You're thinking, 'You're going to love this next bit!'"

"It's wonderful to create local jokes that repay three or seven or even 12 years later. When I play Coventry, for instance, there are always packets of crisps on the stage. That comes from an audience interaction I had 12 years ago.

"Back then, I was chatting with a guy in the audience who worked for a crisp company. I did a joke about it, and when I came back on stage after the interval, there were 12 packets of crisps waiting for me! Many people in Coventry remember that. So that's the reason why the crisps are still there."

In Voice Of Reason, Dara will be discussing such topics as the ordinariness of his daily life: "If there's a theme to the show, it's that, at the age of 46, I have an incredibly normal life!"

He will also be mulling over the rise of the nerd - "Thanks to the internet, nerds can find each other now. It's very positive!" - and talking about his on-screen relationship with Professor Brian Cox on Stargazing Live.

"When Brian and I work together, he's the expert and I'm the broadcaster. When he's talking, sometimes a producer says into my earpiece: 'A plane is now hovering over Scandinavia with shots of the aurora borealis. We have to cut to that'. So at those moments, I have to interrupt Brian. But furious viewers then write in saying, 'Why did you interrupt Brian Cox? I was enjoying watching him!'. They genuinely think I interrupt Brian because I'm jealous of him. They imagine I'm saying, 'Sorry to interrupt you, Brian, but it's not going to be all about you tonight. I also know things that I want to tell the audience'. Brian and I find that idea hilarious!"

Dara will also be devoting a large section of the show to a routine about how he's become the subject of a fake news website: "I go into the madness of this story about these things that are supposed to have happened to me. The producers of this fake-news website have filled in some details. For example, they mention James Street in Dublin. So some effort has been made in producing it. But it's still so ludicrous. The site pops up next to features headlined, 'She's discovered the secret that dentists don't want you to know' and 'Twenty stars whose lives have been ravaged by drugs'. In one of those, they put a picture of Chris O'Dowd beside a picture of Shane McGowan!"

The routine emphasises the extent to which the internet has turned into an uncontrollable 'wild west': "It's become a torrent of disinformation. There was a tiny moment where we thought we could use the internet to amplify scientific truths and have a great weapon for fighting lies. But no, that was completely wrong. What the internet's really useful for is more lies!"

Thanks to the millions of people in different countries watching his shows online, Dara has become an enormous draw all over the world.

"The whole thing has opened out and gone global. I recently walked past a bus stop in Stavanger that had a picture of Russell Howard on it.

"In Tromsø, in the Arctic Circle, I walked on stage and said, 'I don't know how often you have these gigs', and they called out, 'We had Bill Bailey here last night!' That punctured my balloon a bit. Bill went on to play Svalbard, which is even further north. I thought I was being a hero doing Tromsø, but he was doing a gig to polar bears in the Svalbard arts centre!"

So what does Dara hope his audiences will take away from Voice Of Reason?

"I get really enthusiastic about sciencey stuff. You can see me getting giddy about space, and that's why I recently wrote a kids' book on the subject - but on tour, I'm there to do funny.

"This show is an evening of entertainment. It's two hours of laughing. It's not meant to be pedagogic. It's not meant to say, 'You'll be laughing, but you'll also be learning'. Of course, if that happens, that's grand. But first and foremost, Voice Of Reason is just a load of funny stuff."

Dara O'Briain appears at Telford's Big Top on Wednesday 8 August. He returns to the Midlands region later in the year - from 29 November to 1 December - performing at Warwick Arts Centre in Coventry.

“Doing stand-up is a euphoric experience. The great thing is the anticipation. You're thinking, 'You're going to love this next bit!'”

COMEDY YOU CAN BANK ON

Award-winning Mischief Theatre, the company behind hit West End The Play That Goes Wrong, bring yet another laugh-out-loud comedy to the Midlands this month... What's On spoke to Artistic Director Henry Lewis about Mischief's success and their currently touring show, The Comedy About A Bank Robbery...

It's 1958 and Minneapolis is abuzz with news that City Bank has been charged with the protection of a priceless diamond. With an escaped convict, his girlfriend and sidekick, a maintenance man and even bank security all eyeing up the gem, what could possibly go wrong?...

Henry Lewis, writer of The Comedy About A Bank Robbery and co-founder of Mischief Theatre, shared a few words about the 'side-splitting show'.

"We've taken inspiration from old Marx Brothers comedy, so in that way it's that 'screwball caper' style of show. It has little references chucked in here and there, but obviously it's completely original. I suppose it's a farce at its core, but there's a lot of physical comedy in there, combined with the verbal one-liners and the like.

"Bank Robbery is very different to our 'Goes Wrong' shows because it's got a narrative to it. There are also a lot of impressive visuals and stunts as the robbery takes place, and there's a really fun scene involving perspective. I don't want to give too much away for audiences, but it's quite film-like in its visuals."

So why does Henry think the show has played so well with British audiences?

"Crime stories are quite popular, so I think Bank Robbery has fairly universal appeal because it does follow that plot - even if it's a sillier version, rather than in a thriller style. We've tried to make it a very mainstream show, to give it that widespread appeal but with its own very unique style and quirks. It doesn't require a huge amount of thought to watch - it's just good fun and a good adventure for any audience to enjoy."

Bank Robbery has also been a success in its licensed productions abroad, as Henry explains...

"The comedy is very physical, and I think that's why it translates so well overseas. There have been various productions abroad. One is currently on in Paris, which is obviously quite different, but a lot of the physical side of the comedy is the same. It's more universal than the verbal comedy, which is more often than not aimed at a particular audience, or makes presumptions about what the audience already knows. I think everyone just gets it and can laugh along."

As artistic director at Mischief Theatre, Henry faces plenty of challenges, but as far as he's concerned, the rewards make all the hard work worthwhile.

"I think creating works that are genuinely funny is one of the hardest things to do; it's tricky, and the shows take an enormous amount of development. It's my job to ensure that that's always happening, but also to make certain that we're always trying something new, coming up with new ideas and collaborating with different people. We have so many shows on at the moment - two shows currently running in the West End and three on tour - and we're obviously always trying to develop new stuff. There's such a lot on, so it can be stressful, but the rewards are just amazing. To see different people all over the world laughing at what we produce is incredible. With all the different things going on in our country and the world at the moment, it's great that people come to our shows, forget their troubles and just sit and laugh. To be able to give people that escape at the theatre is a huge privilege."

Henry attributes the success of Mischief Theatre to three simple things: faith in their work, a real drive to achieve and the spark between himself and his colleagues.

"We've made shows that we believe in, and worked really hard to put them out there. I think because a lot of us trained together at drama school - so we'd already been doing shows together for a long time - we had this shared chemistry that really helped us."

Mischief Theatre's ensemble format sees its members collaborating over many years to create a unique body of work.

"I would fully endorse the format we have at Mischief, particularly for youngsters leaving drama school because the industry is so hard to get work in. I would absolutely recommend that people form their own theatre companies with those connections they make along the way, and write, produce, direct and perform their own productions. I think it's the greatest thing that people can be doing, whether that's in-between jobs or as more of a full-time life choice, as it has been for us. Ensemble is very important and, I think, much more interesting. It's given us far greater creative scope - we really have control over what we want to do. It's such a treat to be able to write and produce your own stuff and see it through to the end. The creative freedom is definitely the most fulfilling aspect. I really can't recommend it enough."

And there are more exciting projects to come from Mischief in the near future...

"We're currently writing for a TV show and a stage project, but I can't tell you much more than that because it's still very much a secret. But there will be news of those soon, I'm sure."

The Comedy About A Bank Robbery shows at Birmingham Repertory Theatre from Thursday 23 August to Saturday 8 September.

Matilda The Musical

Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sat 8 September

Adapted from one of Roald Dahl's best-loved books, the Royal Shakespeare Company's stage-musical version of Matilda - complete with music and lyrics by comedian Tim Minchin - has been delighting West End audiences for six years.

A staggering eight million people worldwide have so far seen productions of the critically acclaimed show, which has visited more than 50 cities and bagged an impressive 80-plus international awards.

Impressive statistics indeed. If you haven't done so already, bag yourself a ticket and find out what all the fuss is about!

The Full Monty

Old Joint Stock Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 8 August - Sat 1 September

When six men lose their jobs at the local steelworks, they find that dignity, hope and self-belief are suddenly in short supply. Until, that is, they take the plunge and become male strippers... This brand new production is of course based on the hit 1996 movie of the same title, with the Old Joint Stock promising audiences an 'up close and personal' experience...

Boogie Nights

New Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 22 - Sat 25 August

Back in the 1970s, loud suits and disco tunes were very much the order of the day, and hit musical Boogie Nights is all about celebrating those jumpsuit-wearing times. The story isn't exactly complicated, following Roddy and Deb on the rocky road to love, but then you don't come to a show like Boogie Nights expecting anything weighty. It's the music that counts, and on that score you'll be strutting your funky stuff long before the end.

The show is the New Alex's 2018 Stage Experience production, a showcase for some of the region's most talented young performers.

Uncle Ben's Family Feud

The Old Rep, Birmingham, Thurs 30 August - Sun 2 September

Conway Productions have been presenting stories about the character of Uncle Ben (and his family) for six years now, along the way focusing on issues including infidelity, domestic violence, substance abuse and absent parents. The company's latest offering sees Uncle Ben looking forward to a night in with a special lady - but with the kids returning home early and the local constabulary paying him an unexpected visit, it's fair to say things don't quite go according to plan...

talks about language, religion and politics in theatre...

The Royal Shakespeare Company is this month presenting a new production of Tamburlaine - a tumultuous tale of triumph, cruelty and deceit... What's On caught up with its director, Sir Michael Boyd, to find out more about the play and his stellar career...

Christopher Marlowe's Tamburlaine follows a man who starts out as a shepherd but manages to overthrow the Persian emperor and ascend to the throne. He marches on to conquer other nations, and even continents, in his quest for an empire.

Tamburlaine was a bold, innovative piece of Elizabethan drama when it was written. The RSC production's director, Sir Michael Boyd, explains why: "I think the reason it was such a turning point was the concept of freedom of speech. The language in the character's speech was much more vivid and human. He shook up what used to be quite a stiff way of talking on stage that was designed for courtly or academic audiences. Previously, dialogue didn't quite speak to the thoughts of the everyday common people, or represent the ordinary voice on stage. Marlowe was also incredibly daring with subject matter. He's talking about power and religion in Tamburlaine in a way that really would have landed him in hot water. Shakespeare was very clever in not getting involved in this, while all his contemporaries were being arrested, having their books burned or being tortured. It was this daring in Marlowe that ended up getting him killed, probably by the government."

Sir Michael believes there's a common misconception that Elizabethan dramas such as those by Marlowe and Shakespeare are too difficult to understand.

"This really complex, dense, fast-flowing rhythmic language is quite common, and I think very understood, among young people because of the music they're listening to: J Cole, Kendrick Lamar and others. Those rappers talk in a very complex, dense way, with elusive, coded, symbolic, metrical speech. I think younger people would have no problems with Marlowe at all - perhaps there may be one or two vocabulary points, but very rarely. If anything, Marlowe is cleaner and simpler than Shakespeare.”

Sir Michael’s first stint directing this play was back in 2014. He believes there is much in the themes and the plot of Tamburlaine that speaks to contemporary concerns.

“The biggest contemporary ghost on stage in 2014 was probably the Islamic State. This fundamentalist, charismatic vision was a big shadow on Tamburlaine that we had to listen to and respond to, but also control and not let it take over the play. Tamburlaine contains instances of utter disregard for religion. In some ways it’s a carrier for the idea of fundamentalist protestantism being the scourge of God and cleaning out all the corrupt Catholic courts of Europe. There’s very much a vision of that underneath the play.

“But of course, in the intervening years, individualist, charismatic male leaders - just like the character of Tamburlaine himself - have sprung up all over the place like dragon’s teeth - whether in America, whether in Eastern Europe, or whether it be someone like Nigel Farage in this country. If Time Magazine was honest, the man of the year would definitely be Putin. The idea of this kind of autocratic male leadership is the shadow over our show at the moment.”

Sir Michael is no stranger to theatre that’s heavily steeped in politics. He started his career training to be a director at the Malaya Bronnaya Theatre in Moscow, where the KGB were still very much in control.

“I’d say there are three ways in which that experience inspired me. One would be that, being in a country where a film, a poem, a novel could very easily be censored, live theatre became the most important place to make art under a totalitarian regime. So to see theatre as the most important art form - and the responsibility that it carried as a result of this - was massively inspiring. That sense of moral responsibility is something I brought back with me.

“Secondly, the Russian theatrical tradition is one of intense stagecraft and training. This has survived post-Soviet Union due to generous state funding. Their training is longer and more rigorous than anywhere else. The art of the director is taken more seriously there.

“That brings me onto the third way the experience affected me. Living in a country where you have to question everything the government tells you teaches you to be critical of what you’re told. It teaches you to look extra hard at the work you are making artistically. Working under that kind of censorship awoke me to the extent to which Shakespeare was probably working under censorship in his own time, and how rebellious Marlowe really was.”

Tamburlaine for the RSC needed very little reimagining from its original staging, as Sir Michael thinks the Swan Theatre offers the ideal space for the play to be at its very best.

“There is a very direct and a very intimate relationship between the play and the audience. There are lots of gags with the audience, or they’re recruited at various points as soldiers or as citizens, and there’s very direct address to them - scaring, cajoling or teasing. So I didn’t really have to adapt it at all, as it really lends itself to the simple, very open space that the Swan is.

“We won’t have done our job properly if people don’t leave the theatre at the end of the show feeling differently about power and cruelty. Probably also about men’s power over women - I think Marlowe was quite ahead of his time on that. The play is a revolution that goes horribly wrong, so it’s a little case study on how not to change the world.”

Sir Michael was the artistic director of the Royal Shakespeare Company from 2002 until 2012. When he arrived, the company was in financial trouble. He believes that trust was the key to kickstarting the RSC’s recovery.

“It seemed obvious to me there was an enormous amount of talent there, and it wasn’t being trusted. Each area wasn’t being trusted with its own money. There was this weird centralised way of keeping the information about money contained, so people were working completely in the dark about budgets. That seemed crazy to me. So one of the very first things I did was devolve responsibility for keeping budget much deeper down into the organisation. So for example, people who actually knew about the carpentry workshop had control over their budget. Obviously, they ran it better. There was a very simple principle of trusting people.

“The RSC has such a great history, and the burden of that history always comes with the danger of trying to replicate the past. We needed to actually be thinking forwards to establishing who we were and what we could do in that very moment. What the RSC should be doing, as a very privileged, subsidised organisation, is stuff that commercial theatre can’t, and doing it in the most brave and imaginative way.”

Sir Michael’s passion for theatre started in the simplest of ways - children’s play-acting with family and friends.

“Really the starting point was probably playing games with my sister. We found a compromise where we sort of played doll’s house but with cars. Then, with my friends, we would cut out characters from Christmas and birthday cards, voice them and make up stories in little shoebox theatres.”

His passion for theatre eventually evolved into a desire to direct: “I was in a play at university, and a really good director had adapted it and directed well. I knew the play was fantastic and it would go well, but I still thought every decision he made was wrong. Then I had a revelation: I was either going to be a really annoying actor not enjoying sitting inside someone else’s vision, or I was going to have to stand up, be counted and create my own.”

Looking ahead, what plays would Sir Michael like to direct in the future?

“I haven’t done King Lear, and I’d really like to at some point. I’d like to do more Samuel Beckett, and work more with the lovely American playwright Will Eno. I’d love to do a lot more Ancient Greek work because I’ve done hardly any of that at all. There’s just masses I want to do! I’m really enjoying challenging myself with different forms, like I started doing a bit of opera recently, and I’m working on a couple of musicals at the moment. I like going into new areas, to keep my brain cells working.”

Jersey Boys

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 28 August - Sat 8 September

Rockin' and rollin' New Jersey boys Frankie Valli And The Four Seasons scored some truly massive hits during the mid-1960s, with best-known numbers including Walk Like A Man, Bye Bye Baby, Big Girls

Don't Cry, Sherry and December 1963 (Oh, What A Night). This massive jukebox musical tells their story. Taking a documentary-style format, the show is structured as four 'seasons', each being narrated by a different member of the band.

The Tony, Olivier and Grammy award-winning production is here making a welcome return to the Midlands region.

Bottom's Dream: The Musical

Arena Theatre, Wolverhampton, Fri 3 & Sat 4 August

Accessible language, likeable characters and a series of comic capers with an ass combine to make Dream one of Shakespeare's most popular works. Lysander and Demetrius both fancy Hermia, Helena's sitting on the shelf, Titania and Oberon are up to no good, and Puck's got his finger in more pies than Mr Kipling. Add in a group of rude mechanicals and the recipe for success is guaranteed... Presented by the University of Wolverhampton's musical theatre students.

taught a lesson. After all, the big fella's been courting them both, claiming that each is his one-and-only true love and caring not a jot that they're both married!

A tale of buck-baskets, frolicsome fairies and men dressed as women, this is Shakespeare at his comic best.

Expect your sides to be as near to splitting as they're ever likely to be when engaging with the works of Stratford's most famous son.

racist campaigner Jackie Walker is a controversial figure. In this well-reviewed autobiographical show, Jackie seeks not only to explain herself but also to reflect on her treatment at the hands of a sensationalist media. The production is followed by a Q&A with Jackie.

Diamonds Are For Eric

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Mon 20 August - Sat 1 September

New Vic favourite Eric Smith here makes a welcome return to the stage. This time he finds himself caught up in a James Bond-style escapade when he takes his new girlfriend on a cheap holiday to Russia...

Actor David Graham's delightfully dysfunctional character has certainly earned his place in the hearts of New Vic audiences down the years, having made his first appearance at the venue way back in 1999. A selection of memorable Swinging '60s numbers should ensure the evening provides plenty of toe-tapping fun.

Madagascar The Musical

New Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, until Sat 4 August

The smell of the greasepaint and roar of the crowd has tempted the furry cast of Madagascar the movie to forsake New York's Central Park Zoo in favour of treading the boards on a UK tour.

The blockbuster DreamWorks film comes to life in Birmingham when Alex the Lion, Marty the Zebra, Melman the Giraffe and Gloria the hip hip Hippo stampede into summer with a great big jungle roar.

Imaginative sets and costumes are very much present and correct, in a show that producers promise will send your kids home positively wild (which may or may not be a good thing!). X-Factor 2016 winner Matt Terry stars.

Mischief And Mystery In Moomin Valley

MAC, Birmingham, Fri 10 - Sat 11 August

This 'unique participatory storytelling experience' is based on the hugely popular characters created by Finnish illustrator Tove Jansson in the 1940s.

Created for children aged between four and seven, the 50-minute show features puppetry, original music, interactive play and an 'ingenious' pop-up book set.

Tiddler And Other Terrific Tales

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 27 - Wed 29 August; New Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, Thurs 30 August - Sat 1 September

This ever-popular show brings together a host of colourful characters from some of Gruffalo creators Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler's best-loved titles, including Tiddler, The Smartest Giant In Town and A Squash And A Squeeze. Live music and puppetry combine in a production that promises to take its audience under the sea, out on the farm and into the jungle.

Blue Orange Theatre, Birmingham, Thurs 16 - Sat 18 August

Fly away to Neverland with the boy who wouldn't grow up, meet a real fairy, marvelous mermaids, wonderful Wendy and the down-on-their-luck lost boys. Oh, and beware the ever-so-wicked Captain Hook and a very hungry crocodile who goes tick-tock (he swallowed a clock!).

The Acorn Emporium

MAC, Birmingham, Thurs 23 - Sun 26 August

Birmingham-based theatricals Untied Artists make a welcome return following the success of previous endeavour Library Lion. And this time they'll be performing in the open air. Described by the company as 'a bushy tale of living in a land that doesn't quite feel like home', their new show tells the story of Raudona Grimausk, a red squirrel who's set up shop in a tent, determined to make the best of whatever life throws at her...

The production is suitable for children aged five and older.

Master Model Builder Michelle Thompson talks about Birmingham's newest visitor attraction and what it brings to the city...

The nation's favourite construction toy has found a home in Birmingham at the brand new Legoland Discovery Centre - and the venue promises to deliver plenty of fun for children and parents alike, thanks to a whole host of attractions.

Located at Arena Birmingham, near Brindleyplace, the Centre houses a city builder area, a duplo farm, a soft play area, two different rides and a 4D cinema. And the list goes on! But perhaps the most impressive attraction at the venue is the Lego Miniland. Built from over five million Lego bricks, Miniland is a replica of Birmingham and includes Lego constructions of iconic buildings such as the Bullring, the Mailbox, the Library of Birmingham and the BT Tower. There are interactive elements to Miniland, too - children can entertain themselves by racing boats along the canal or getting stuck into a game of football at the 'mish-mash' of Aston Villa and Birmingham City's grounds.

"I want to make sure the children are the key factor," explains Master Model Builder Michelle Thompson. "I want to make sure that they come in, see something and think, 'I want to go home and build that'."

For Michelle, an avid lover of Lego for as long as she can remember, fighting off more than 7,000 other applicants for her new post has landed her what many people are calling 'Birmingham's dream job'.

Having worked in HR in her previous employment, Michelle has had quite the career change. So what exactly does the role of Master Model Builder entail? "I'm going to be helping decorate the Discovery Centre with lots of Lego builds, and lots of exciting things that will interest children. I'm also going to be responsible for maintaining Miniland and all the other builds around the site, but hopefully there's going to be a lot of building things too - maybe building things which have never even been built by Lego before, who knows?"

Michelle might not have been in the job long, but there's no denying her passion for what she does. "I want to provide new ways for children to interact with Lego, encouraging them not necessarily just to stick to the manual - our test & build area is particularly fantastic for that."

Michelle was among just two percent of applicants for the role of Master Model Builder who were women. Is Lego suffering a diversity problem? "I think more girls are playing with Lego as children now, and I think it's being encouraged more. There's now less difference between girls and boys and what they're encouraged to play with, so I think eventually it will be more 50-50."

And this is clearly the case in Birmingham's new Discovery Centre. Both boys and girls can be seen building and playing - including in the Lego Friends' Heartlake City, a play area intended to appeal primarily to girls.

Legoland Birmingham is aimed at children between the ages of three and 10, and maintains that adults are not permitted entry without a child. That being said, the attraction is just as enjoyable for parents as it is for their children. Mums and dads are encouraged to leave their phones in the lockers and get involved in play too, as creating quality family time is a priority for the Centre. But older Lego enthusiasts without any little ones in their life don't need to worry about missing out on the fun - the venue's 'adult nights' event is an opportunity for those who're 18 and over to meet Michelle and create some of their own builds.

It's no surprise that excitement is almost tangible in Birmingham following Legoland's opening. Michelle promises that the venue will inject 'extra fun' into the city - and the 10ft-tall, 30,000-brick giraffe which has been installed outside is just a preview of what's to come. There's no end to the impressive designs and creations dotted around the site - perhaps most notably the fully functioning clock tower, which takes centre stage. "It's got all sorts of mechanisms that have had to be factored in and then connected to the Lego," Michelle explains. "I've met some of the people from Windsor who actually made the Lego build, and they're such an amazing team."

The installation of Legoland Birmingham was no mean feat. Miniland alone took nine people nine months to build - which is hardly surprising given the attention to detail. Tiny Lego figures can be seen eating inside some of the buildings, cars travel along the roads and even the boats on the canal are attached to tethers, allowing them to float along the Canal Old Line.

It's clear that Lego is an ever-popular toy, and as Michelle points out: "It's universal - no matter where you buy Lego, no matter what bricks you've got, you can connect them with any other bricks. The bricks I had as a child work with the bricks I'm buying now - it's timeless."

And Birmingham's new Lego shop is the perfect place for lovers of the legendary toy to expand their collection. Located next door to the Legoland Discovery Centre, the shop boasts a number of exclusive lines. Visitors from as far afield as London now travel up to the Midlands to get their hands on the merchandise. The 'pick a brick' wall is particularly innovative, allowing Lego fanatics to stock up on bricks of all sizes and colours in order to complete their creations.

With so much to recommend it, it's hardly surprising that Michelle's enthusiasm for her new job knows no bounds... "At the moment, I just want to get in, get started and get building stuff. Imagination is going to be a key feature because in order to create anything you've got to have imagination. That's the most important thing."

EDITOR'S CHOICE

Ant-Man And The Wasp CERT 12a (117 mins)

Starring Paul Rudd, Evangeline Lilly, Michael Peña, Walton Goggins, Bobby Cannavale, Judy Greer, Michelle Pfeiffer, Laurence Fishburne, Michael Douglas Directed by Peyton Reed (USA)

In this instance we are not talking about a pesky yellowjacket, but the superheroine Janet van Dyne, played by Michelle Pfeiffer. She is the mother of Hope (Evangeline Lilly), the latter being the romantic partner of Ant Man/Scott Lang (Paul Rudd), who together have assumed the mantle of the crime-fighting partnership of Ant-Man and a new Wasp. It transpires that Hope, like her mother, can enter the quantum realm, and so Hope sets about looking for Janet van Dyne who, decades ago, was lost amongst the atoms of a Soviet nuclear missile. Disciples of quantum physics should get a particular buzz from all this (pun intended), while others will swarm to the multiplex just for more Marvel Comics high jinks. The first Ant-Man (2015) proved to be an especially taut, shrewd, exciting, funny and even moving superhero caper.

Christopher Robin CERT tbc

Starring Ewan McGregor, Hayley Atwell, Bronte Carmichael, Mark Gatiss; with the voices of Jim Cummings, Brad Garrett, Toby Jones, Peter Capaldi, Sophie Okonedo
Directed by Marc Forster (USA)

For fans of Disney's Winnie-the-Pooh cartoons, this should prove a tonic. Jim Cummings, who voiced the English bear in countless animated features, videos and shorts, now articulates a CGI version of the ursine icon in this live-action comic adventure. Tapping into a Mary Poppins vision of London, the film stars Ewan McGregor as a city slicker who has lost his inner child. And so his old stuffed animals lure him back to the Hundred Acre Wood in Sussex.

Released Fri 17 Aug

The Equalizer 2 CERT tbc

Starring Denzel Washington, Pedro Pascal, Ashton Sanders, Melissa Leo, Bill Pullman, Sakina Jaffrey
Directed by Antoine Fuqua (USA)

Robert McCall (Denzel) had thought about retiring from his vocation as avenger. Then somebody kills a close female friend, so the ex-CIA black ops operative returns to business as normal. This is the fourth film that Antoine Fuqua has directed Denzel in – and is the latter's very first sequel.

Released Fri 24 Aug

The Happytime Murders

Starring Melissa McCarthy, Maya Rudolph, Joel McHale, Elizabeth Banks

Directed by Brian Henson (USA)

Puppets have feelings, too. And when the cast members of a 1980s' TV show are killed off one by one, it takes a puppet to tackle the case, along with his ex-partner, Detective Connie Edwards (McCarthy), who is only too human... Brian Henson, not surprisingly, is the son of the late, great puppeteer Jim Henson.

Released Mon 27 Aug

Searching

CERT 12a (102 mins)

Starring John Cho, Debra Messing, Michelle La

Directed by Aneesh Chaganty (USA)

Played out entirely on a laptop screen, this topical film follows the desperate attempts of a father to locate his missing daughter with the help of her computer history. Both social satire and digital thriller, Searching zips along fluently, while reminding parents that they know less about their children than they think. Not one for technophobes.

Released Fri 31 Aug

CRITIC'S CHOICE

The Children Act

CERT 12a (105 mins)

Starring Emma Thompson, Stanley Tucci, Fionn Whitehead, Ben Chaplin, Eileen Walsh, Anthony Calf, Jason Watkins

Directed by Richard Eyre (UK)

On Chesil Beach, Ian McEwan's last adaptation to the screen, was ill-met by the critics, and unfairly so. The Children Act is the novelist's second attempt to adapt one of his own works to the screen and stars Dame Emma Thompson as Fiona Maye, a High Court judge. While her marriage begins to fall apart, she battles with the ethics of a case involving Jack, a Jehovah's Witness teenager (Fionn Whitehead, from Dunkirk). A blood transfusion would save his life, but Jack refuses the operation on religious grounds. So, in an unconventional move, Fiona visits Jack in hospital... Sir Richard Eyre previously directed such high-profile British films as Iris (2001) and Notes On A Scandal (2006).

Released Fri 24 Aug

Cornelia Parker: One Day This Glass Will Break

MAC, Birmingham, until Sun 2 September

Twenty large-scale photogravures drawn from three experimental series make up this exhibition by Cornelia Parker.

The Turner-nominated Royal Academy member is one of the UK's most admired creatives. She last year came to wider public attention when she was named the official artist for the general election, the first woman ever to take on the role. Explaining her approach to art in a recent White Review interview, Cornelia said: "I think art is about freedom, and hopefully my work will have a very different meaning to each person who sees it. I don't want it to have a fixed meaning, and I think that is the reason, formally, that I make the work I make. I like work that has an ambiguity to it. You are not sure what side you're on, you are either with it or without it, and you are kind of confused by it. I think I like things to be free."

Cover To Cover: Roald Dahl Around The World

Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sat 15 September

If you're heading for Birmingham Hippodrome this month to enjoy the RSC's Matilda The Musical, be sure to check out this special exhibition accompanying the hit show.

Cover To Cover is a celebration of Roald Dahl, the man who invented Matilda. Dahl's much-loved stories have been published more than 200 million times in 59 different languages, with numerous artists contributing front covers for the various editions of his books. The exhibition, spread across three floors of the Hippodrome, displays a selection of these covers, including a number by the artist with whom Dahl is most closely associated, Quentin Blake.

Ikon Artists From The 1960s

Ikon Gallery, Birmingham, until Sun 19 August

Ikon's origins are here revisited in an exhibition featuring works by the young Birmingham artists who founded the gallery way back in the mid-1960s. Prior to Ikon's opening, its founder members would often display their work at the Royal Birmingham Society of Artists' premises on New Street, a building which has recently become the home of the Medicine Bakery & Gallery. Ikon's exhibition is being presented to coincide with the launch of the new venue, which combines an artisan bakery and kitchen with a cafe and art exhibition space.

Creative Rage

The Potteries Museum & Art Gallery, Stoke-on-Trent, until Sun 2 September

Creative Rage brings together paintings, photographs, prints and ceramics to follow three artists' 'vibrant and confrontational' exploration of LGBTQ themes. Proud, committed and uncompromising members of the progressive LGBTQ artistic community, the trio of contributors create visually startling works that explore themes of bravery, aggression and 'trailblazing, combative non-conformity'.

Mad King/Fat Knight

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, until Sun 23 September

Widely regarded as one of the finest stage actors of his generation, RSC Honorary Associate Artist Antony Sher has also made a considerable impact as an artist. And now, for the first time ever, the RSC is hosting an exhibition of his work. Sher has taken inspiration from the rehearsal room and on-stage performances to create a visual account of his experiences as an actor. Featuring more than 40 pieces and bringing together large-scale oil paintings with drawings and doodles, the exhibition offers an insight into Sher's preparation for two of his most memorable roles - King Lear and Sir John Falstaff.

Shrewsbury Flower Show

fantastic flora, fauna, fireworks and family fun!

The Shrewsbury Flower Show is one of the country's premier horticultural festivals, delivering a diverse programme of entertainment for the whole family to enjoy.

Highlights of the two-day event include guest appearances by celebrity chefs and gardeners, arena acts, competitions, numerous workshops, a children's area and impressive floral displays, with both days brought to a close by a magnificent fireworks display.

The main arena, meanwhile, plays host to all manner of attractions across the weekend. As well as falconry displays, showjumping and jousting, there's also The Cavalry of Heroes to enjoy. Marking the 100th anniversary of the end of World War One, this special show will see its performers displaying their horsemanship skills by combining tricks and stunts on horseback with a music score and a final cavalry charge.

Taking over the bandstand for the weekend are Band of the Yorkshire Volunteers, Biddulph Male Voice Choir, Band of the Yorkshire Regiment, Band of the Prince of Wales' Division and Of One Accord Choir.

Green-fingered visitors can check out the lecture marquee and enjoy a number of specialist talks. Subjects include 'flower arranging purely for pleasure', '100 plants that almost changed the world' and 'managing pests and diseases the organic way'. Celebrity gardeners Penny Meadmore and Chris Beardshaw will be in attendance at the show too, as members of the Gardeners' Question Time panel.

And there's plenty for little ones to enjoy as well, including children's planting sessions, a giant inflatable obstacle course, a craft tent, face painting, circus skills and balloon modelling.

With such a diverse line-up of entertainment across the two days, the 131st edition of the Shrewsbury Flower Show promises to deliver something for all the family to enjoy. In fact, we don't think it would be going too far to call it 'a blooming good show'!

Shrewsbury Flower Show takes place at the town's Quarry Park on Friday 10 & Sat 11 August. For further information, visit shrewsburyflowershow.org.uk

Real Bodies The Exhibition

NEC, Birmingham, until Sun 19 August

A globetrotting exhibition of human anatomy is currently on display at Birmingham's NEC. Real Bodies takes visitors on a 'stunning' journey, exploring the human body through physiology, culture and emotion by displaying real, perfectly preserved human bodies and more than 200 anatomical specimens. Commenting on the blockbuster show, Tom Zaller, President and CEO of Imagine Exhibitions - the company behind Real Bodies - said: "While the exhibition moves through the anatomical systems of the human body, it also looks far beyond the physical aspects."

The Festival Of Quilts

NEC, Birmingham, Thurs 9 - Sun 12 August

Bringing together exhibitors, galleries, practical workshops and in-depth lectures, the Festival Of Quilts is Europe's largest celebration of patchwork and quilting, providing an ideal environment in which to share ideas and learn new skills.

Highlights of this year's event include a fashion show exhibiting work from Russia, an evening with 'quilting superstar' Ricky Tims, and an awards ceremony to announce the winner of the 2018 quilting competition.

Insomnia63

NEC, Birmingham, Fri 24 - Mon 27 August

Taking place over the course of four days, the UK's biggest gaming festival combines 'all the best bits of video gaming'.

The event features LAN gaming halls, a huge exhibition hall, an esports stage, cosplay, special guests exhibiting interactive content (such as virtual reality) and a wide selection of activities tailored to gamers of all ages.

YouTube favourites including Alfie Deyes, Syndicate and Yummyxox will be in attendance. Don't forget to head to the meet-and-greet zone to say hi to some of your favourite creators!

Tall Tales at Aston Hall

Aston Hall, Birmingham, Fri 3 - Fri 24 August

Visit Aston Hall on Fridays during August and you'll be able to join in with the interactive telling of three classic fairytales: Sleeping Beauty, Cinderella and Goldilocks And The Three Bears.

Every session is accompanied by a crafting workshop, providing visitors with the chance to make a wand, crown or headband.

The event is suitable for children aged between three and eight, with each storytelling experience lasting approximately 45 minutes.

Brick Built

Forge Mill Needle Museum, Redditch, Worcestershire, until 2 September

To Warren Elmore, Lego bricks are more than just a toy. They also provide a challenging and enjoyable modelling medium.

Aiming to inspire Lego enthusiasts everywhere, Brick Built features some of Warren's best work, with models ranging from small animals to huge skyscrapers.

The event also includes a 'brick challenge' room and a 'create a figure' trail around the site.

Art In The Park

Jephson Gardens, Royal Leamington Spa, Sat 4 & Sun 5 August

Art In The Park this year takes the theme of 'trees', in honour of Jephson Gardens' status as an arboretum. The fifth edition of this annual event features exhibitions of paintings, ceramics, textiles and sculptures, as well as a number of bands providing a feast of blues, jazz and soul music. There are plenty of workshops to enjoy too, ranging from upcycling to bespoke T-shirt designing.

Dragon Slayer

Warwick Castle, Fri 3 - Mon 27 August

Warwick Castle launches an 'explosive' new show this month, featuring fire jousting, live action stunts, a projection light show and impressive pyrotechnics.

Dragon Slayer recreates the adventures of 'humble page' Guy of Warwick, as he bids to win the heart of the castle's Princess Felice - in the process doing battle against a less-than-friendly fire-breathing dragon!

Shakes-paw's Day

Anne Hathaway's Cottage & Gardens, Stratford-upon-Avon, Sat 25 August

Take your furry friends along to Anne Hathaway's Cottage and celebrate National Dog Day this month.

The picturesque 500-year-old cottage is the perfect spot for a picnic - or why not dig into the barbecue provided... Visitors who take along their dogs will enjoy 30% off normal admission price, with the event featuring plenty of activities to entertain both animals and people alike. An 'alternative dog show' offers prizes for waggiest tail and best recall.

Off-Roading with Land Rover

Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, Tues 28 - Thurs 30 August

Spanning 5,000 acres, the challenging terrain surrounding Eastnor Castle has been used as a Land Rover proving ground for decades. This three-day event offers visitors the chance to passenger-ride around 53 miles of carefully maintained off-road track.

The National BMW Festival

British Motor Museum, Gaydon, Warwickshire, Sun 12 August

The largest gathering of its kind in Europe, this ever-popular festival gives visitors the chance to view over 1,000 BMWs, presented alongside some of the latest models from Alpina, AC Schnitzer and MINI. Other attractions include a large motorsport display area, family entertainment, concours winners and trade stands featuring a range of products.

BCLM Summer Evenings

Black Country Living Museum, Dudley,
Fri 3 - Fri 31 August

Visitors to BCLM on any Friday in August will have longer than usual to immerse themselves in 300 years of Black Country history, with the venue staying open until 8pm.

With a different theme each week, the evening events give museum visitors the opportunity to meet costumed characters, join in with street games and explore the selection of shops and houses. Other attractions on the 26-acre site include an underground mine, a fairground, a school and a pub, all offering the chance to step back in time to a bygone era.

World War One at Tamworth Castle

Tamworth Castle, Staffordshire,
Tues 14 - Thurs 23 August

Commemorate the centenary of the end of World War One with fun and games at Tamworth Castle this month.

Visitors to the venue can learn about wartime communications, try their hand at decoding secret messages and play with the toys and games that kept children entertained during the four-year conflict. They can even find out if they would've been medically fit enough to join the battle on the front line!

Oswestry Balloon Festival

Cae Glas Park, Oswestry,
Sat 25 & Sun 26 August

Hot-air balloons take to the skies for the Oswestry Balloon Festival, this year relocating to Cae Glas Park, a seven-acre site regarded as one of the town's major tourist attractions.

Festival highlights include flight demonstrations, exhibitions, a balloon race and firework & parachute displays.

The event also features the 'night glow', which will see tethered baskets power their burners to music, to light up the inflated balloons.

Blists Hill In Steam

Blists Hill Victorian Town, Ironbridge,
Sat 18 - Sun 19 August

Visitors to this two-day event can take advantage of a rare opportunity to get up close and personal with an array of Victorian steam-powered machines, all of which will be in their full working splendour.

Highlights include the venue's replica of Trevithick's 1802 Coalbrookdale locomotive and a 1903 Wallis & Steevens road roller named Billy. Other attractions include the Merryweather fire pump and the Fielding oil engine, as well as a number of portable and ploughing engines.

Vintage & Handmade Festival

RAF Museum Cosford, Shifnal,
Sat 11 & Sun 12 August

Lovers of all things retro vintage will feel right at home at this brand new festival of handmade, handcrafted products and carefully selected vintage wares.

The event features work by local creators, live music from across the years, a children's craft tent, artisan food and drink, a photobooth and a beauty parlour.

A flypast by the Battle of Britain Memorial Flight Spitfire takes place on both days of the festival.

Dippy On Tour

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Sun 9 September

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Sun 9 September
The Natural History Museum's famous Diplodocus cast - fondly known as Dippy - is spending the summer in Birmingham. The British icon is on a mission to inspire natural history adventures and encourage families to explore nature on their doorstep. The exhibition also highlights Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery's fantastic bird collection, focusing on the idea of birds as living dinosaurs and looking at their evolution - from their dinosaur ancestors into the 'feathered friends' we know today. Associated Dippy activities include Little Dinos Messy Play (1 - 29 August), curator-led talks with Lucas Large (1 August & 5 September) and Dino Drink & Draw - a free social event for anyone who likes to doodle, taking place in the gallery's Edwardian Tearoom on 8 September.

Dippy On Tour is a free ticketed event but advanced booking is advised. For further information, visit birminghammuseums.org.uk
