Exhibition explores the story of Indian dance

Stories, photographs, films and objects all feature in a new exhibition at Wolverhampton Art Gallery which explores the story of Indian dance in the Black Country during the second half of the 20th century.

Nritya Black Country celebrates the Indian subcontinent migrants who, having journeyed to the UK to begin a new life, used temples, community halls and cultural events to present their classical, folk and traditional dance styles.

The exhibition, which shows until Sunday 20 December, has been curated by the award-winning Wolverhampton arts organisation, Jaivant Patel Dance.

Christmas all wrapped up at Blists Hill

'A truly traditional Christmas to remember' is on the cards at Blists Hill Victorian Town this year.

The award-winning Ironbridge venue is turning back the clock and recreating the celebrations of an authentic Victorian Christmas.

Richard Aldred, from the Ironbridge Gorge Museum Trust, said: "It's been such a tough, challenging year for so many of us that we really want to make this the most memorable Christmas ever.

"We're offering a day filled with unforgettable, old-fashioned family fun - a magical marvel from start to finish which will have something for everyone."

Attractions include a festive welcome from brass bands and carol singers, a Victorian Christmas shopping emporium, pantomime and performances, Horse Bus rides, a real ice rink, a host of free themed craft activities and even falling snow.

And, of course, Father Christmas will be paying a visit too, bringing seasonal cheer to the Finding Santa Grotto in the mine and the Santa & Elves Workshop Grotto. For more details and tickets, visit ironbridge.org.uk

Baby Show goes online

The 2020 edition of The Baby Show has gone online as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic. The popular pregnancy & parenting event, which is usually held at the Birmingham NEC, is taking place online from 30 October to 1 November. Highlights include exclusive talks from 40 of the UK's top parenting and baby experts.

Shropshire business expands to meet demand

A food & drink delivery company based in Shrewsbury has expanded its business and is now providing support to local independent retailers.

Zoom's new initiative allows customers within a 10-mile radius to buy any kind of product online via its app or website and have it delivered in an hour.

Commenting on the development, Zoom's founder, Kevin Williams, said: "We wanted to create a convenient and easily navigable online option for consumers to help many businesses recover from the impact the Covid-19 pandemic has had. We've teamed up with some of Shrewsbury's most-loved independent retailers to deliver clothes, flowers, homeware, haircare & skincare products, dog products, trainers, and anything else to your door in an hour!" For more information, visit zoom-food.co.uk

British Ironwork Centre launches climate crisis initiative for school kids

Oswestry's British Ironwork Centre has teamed up with Telford & Wrekin Council to create a project designed to better educate school children about the importance of protecting oceans and marine life.

The Ocean Trail Project features 26 fish sculptures, each of which has been primed and readied to be painted/decorated by school students. Each participating school will receive a fish, which they must paint and/or decorate using their chosen design. Once the project is completed and all decorated fish have been handed to the council, a sculpture trail will be created across Telford Town Centre.

Bite-size panto in Lichfield

Lichfield Garrick Theatre is presenting a bite-size panto version of Jack And The Beanstalk this Christmas. Having decided that putting on a large-scale show was too much of a risk during the Covid-19 pandemic, the Garrick has instead elected to present a shorter-run pantomime with fewer performers on stage. Ever-popular panto Dame, Sam Rabone, stars in the show, which runs from 18 December to 3 January. For more info, visit lichfieldgarrick.com.

Spellbinding fun in Shrewsbury

A 'spellbinding' outdoor adventure game is offering teams of people the chance to get in the Halloween spirit a couple of weeks early. CluedUp Games' Witchcraft & Wizardry takes place in Shrewsbury on Saturday 17 October. The event sees participants taking a 'mysterious and magical journey across town' to 'crack the clues, solve the puzzles and save the realm'. But will you be able to solve the mystery in time?... For more information, visit cluedup.com

Acting like Grown Ups at the Grand

The award-winning Mischief Theatre make a welcome return to the Midlands next year to present a brand-new comedy. Showing at the Wolverhampton Grand from 23 to 27 February, Grown Ups follows a group of unruly six-year-olds on their journey through anarchic high school teenage years to the challenges of adulthood. Mischief Theatre have previously enjoyed major critical successes with The Play That Goes Wrong, The Comedy About A Bank Robbery and Peter Pan Goes Wrong. For more information about Grown Ups and to book tickets, visit grandtheatre.co.uk

Lichfield call-out to songwriters

Lichfield Arts is urging both professional and hobby songwriters to take part in its annual L2F songwriting competition. The organisation is looking for songs that 'explore aspects of the theme of Lockdown To Freedom'. An L2F spokesman said: "We're looking forward to receiving your entries and sharing your work with a wide audience, so get your creative hats on and let us hear what you've come up with." A 'Horrible' drive-in Christmas show

A drive-in Christmas show from the Horrible Histories team, Birmingham Stage Company and Car Park Party - an ensemble which presented the summer's only national tour of comedy, theatre and live music shows - is heading for the Midlands. Car Park Panto's Horrible Christmas will see historical characters including Charles Dickens, Oliver Cromwell, King Henry VIII and St Nicholas join forces to save the festive season from 'a jolly man dressed in red'. Dates and venues for the show are yet to be confirmed, but you can visit carparkparty.com to find out more.

Memories of Wolverhampton video rental shop to feature in prestigious film festival

A short movie about a video rental shop in 1980s Wolverhampton will be available to view in October as part of BFI's London Film Festival. Jambo Cinema, by award-winning artist, filmmaker & producer Dawinder Bansal, is described as 'a story of family, migration, love, loss and video piracy set in a working-class South Asian family'. Commenting on her film, Dawinder said: "I'm honoured that Jambo Cinema has been selected from hundreds of others as part of the prestigious London Film Festival 2020. Jambo Cinema as a short film only just scratches the surface, and so I'm looking forward to developing it into a feature-length film." The movie will be available to watch for free on BFI Player from Wednesday 7 to Sunday 18 October.

New Shropshire hamper company launched

A company which organises a number of Shropshire's biggest annual events has diversified its business by launching a selection of hampers in time for Christmas gift buying. Shropshire Festivals' Shropshire Hamper Company is offering a selection of hampers ranging in price from £15.99 to £149.99. Commenting on the new initiative, the company's Director of Fun, Beth Heath, said: "People want to support local small businesses, and by purchasing a Shropshire hamper, you are not only supporting my business but all the many small producers we buy from." Spirit Of 2012 benefits Commonwealth Games 2022 Midlands arts projects

A share of £600,000 has been awarded to three West Midlands organisations to create inclusive arts & cultural projects linked to the Commonwealth Games in Birmingham in 2022. The award has come about as a result of a collaboration between the London Olympic & Paralympic Games legacy funder - Spirit Of 2012 - and Birmingham 2022. The successful projects - Creative Black Country, Caudwell Children and Playing Out In Canley, Coventry - have each been awarded £200,000. Collectively they will work with more than 1,600 disabled and non-disabled people 'to explore links between communities and Birmingham 2022, maximise the impact of the Commonwealth Games and leave a lasting social legacy'.

Watch out! There's a tiger in town...

The late Judith Kerr, who passed away last year at the grand old age of 95, wrote and illustrated The Tiger Who Came To Tea way back in 1968. Since then, it has become one of the best selling children's books of all time and been adapted both for the stage and television. Now, a not-to-be-missed exhibition at Shrewsbury Museum & Art Gallery features 10 of the author's beautiful facsimile artworks. The illustrations are being exhibited courtesy of Seven Stories, the national centre for children's books with whom Kerr deposited her life's work in 2008. Kerr's illustrations constitute one of the most significant collections of artwork by a single illustrator in the Seven Stories collection. They show at the Shrewsbury venue until Saturday 31 October.

Keane to perform at Forest Live in 2021

Keane will next summer perform in Cannock Chase Forest as part of Forest Live, the annual concert series presented by Forestry England. The band last appeared as part of Forest Live in 2010. The aim of the concert series is to introduce forests to new audiences by inviting people to enjoy live music in a number of natural woodland arenas around the country. Over 1.9 million people have attended a Forest Live gig in the last 20 years. Keane will play Cannock Chase Forest on Saturday 12 June. Tickets are now on sale at forestryengland.uk/music

WELCOME TO THE PARTY

Following a refurbishment of its auditorium, the New Vic Theatre returns to the spotlight this autumn with its new socially distanced Housewarming Season. What's On caught up with the theatre's Artistic Director, Theresa Heskins, to find out more...

From October, the New Vic is presenting inventive, socially distanced productions. Audiences who purchase tickets to the shows will find themselves entering a somewhat different auditorium following a refurbishment. And there's been plenty else going on behind the scenes during lockdown too.

"The building had been closed to the public until the 7th of September," says New Vic Artistic Director Theresa Heskins, "but since then we've been really, really busy. We've got three amazing outreach departments: Education, Borderlines and Appetite. Those departments do a lot of work with our local communities. We've been carrying on a lot of that, as much as government guidelines allowed, really. It's important that our outreach programmes continue to work because it can be life-changing for the participants. For example, our Education programme put theatre sessions online that coincided with the moment young people learnt they wouldn't be taking the GCSE and

A-Level exams they'd worked so hard for. Our support has boosted their mental health and wellbeing during that difficult period.

"We also do quite a bit of work with elders with dementia as well. As soon as lockdown began, they were finding it even more of a challenge. With that group, we felt that moving work online would be difficult because some people don't necessarily have confidence with devices, or all the right up-to-date equipment to be able to do that kind of remote working. We received a grant from the Staffordshire Community Fund to buy equipment, so we did a training programme with them and were able to keep in touch with them throughout lockdown. Then, when we were able to go out again as government guidance changed, we were able to do an animated park walk as a kind of combination of theatre and social time.

"We will always want to help with 'holiday hunger' too. Every holiday our Borderlines project does an arts programme with young people who are at risk of going hungry during the holidays and gives them lunch. We were really determined to still do that. But we felt that, although it would be possible to do it indoors, it would have to be with very limited numbers for social distancing. So Borderlines toured around communities showing a band, and they reached four times as many young people as they would have with the old programme. What's brilliant is that this period has changed some of our working practices and our aspirations for the future - and for the better. So we'll be doing that project again every school holiday."

The lockdown period has also seen the venue's auditorium being renovated, 34 years after it was originally designed as Europe's first purpose-built 'theatre in the round'. Original architect John Sambrook emerged from retirement to support the refurb.

"When lockdown happened, we'd already planned for the building to be closed for a month over summer to allow the refurbishment," explains Theresa. "There's been this extraordinary transformation happening inside. We're just making sure that the building works as beautifully as it has done for another 30 years, so we can continue to welcome people in and make them as comfortable as possible during our shows. It's been a really affirming thing to be doing during this difficult period. The 'theatre in the round' is in our DNA, so we've kept that, certainly! It's just the same auditorium in some new clothes, really. We've taken the old seats out and had a whole new set in a different colour, but they're very comfortable and very modern. We've increased our access across the auditorium and redeveloped the balcony too. We've put in a new stage as well, as it was taking a toll on actors. It's all about making the space better for all involved."

The Housewarming Season kicks off in October with innovative light-and-sound installation Ghostlight. It continues in November with Hoard: Rediscovered, an opportunity to revisit the theatre's 2015 Staffordshire Hoard Festival.

"We called it Housewarming because we felt that the New Vic isn't our theatre unless our local people are in it, so we really wanted to make sure they were going to be part of that. There's been a massive, massive fundraising campaign recently that helped with our refurb, and the support of local people and businesses has been essential. We really wanted to say thank you, and that's what this season has been all about. But of course, at the time when we were planning, we weren't entirely sure what kind of restrictions we'd be working with, so this season has been created in response to those particular guidelines too.

"Our first production, Ghostlight, is a five-minute piece; and it's an opportunity for people to drop by to walk around the refurbished auditorium whilst experiencing flashbacks to shows from the past at the New Vic. That's opening at the start of October.

"Then, in November, we've got a series of shows that were originally staged in 2015 when we were in residence at the National Theatre Studio. They sat me in an office in the studio and told me to 'dream big'. So I came up with a massive spectacle of plays that would respond to the discovery of the incredible treasure in a Staffordshire field by an amateur metal detectorist. This treasure, the Staffordshire Hoard, has changed our understanding of history in a massive way, and been very, very important to Staffordshire too. It just so happened to be around the same time that Stoke City Football Club got into the Premiership, so these were massive years for Staffordshire! We were all over the papers in a really exciting way. I think there were 24 different artists responsible for mini plays and coming up with various responses for Staffordshire Hoard Festival.

"With Hoard: Rediscovered, we're going to be recreating about half the day - so a documentary and 10 mini plays working with the actors and creatives who did them originally. I'm really delighted that we'll be employing all these freelancers to work with us on the season because it feels like a really important thing to be doing at the moment."

“We’re just making sure that that building works as beautifully as it has done for another 30 years, so we can continue to welcome people in and make people as comfortable as possible during our shows”

Onward towards Christmas, audiences at the New Vic will be treated to a brand-new imagining of French ballet Coppélia, and the return of David Graham Productions.

"David Graham Productions is really dear to us and our audience. He visits us twice a year and always creates a wonderful party atmosphere. I think we're going to really be needing that - a socially distanced party. Unfortunately, our planned Christmas show, Beauty And The Beast, is postponed to 2021. It takes so long for us to put together our Christmas shows, but we're so proud of them, as they reach one in 10 local people. And for so many young people it's their first-ever experience of going to the theatre. But at the time we needed to put it together, we just didn't have enough certainty about what would be happening to be able to know what we were creating and how we could create it. We ended up having to reimagine the whole season alongside our new Christmas offering, Coppelia: The Mystery. While I'm sad we're not doing the kind of show that we normally do, it's quite exciting as an artist to have an opportunity to think differently about how we do things.

"The plan is that we're going to create a sort of frost fair atmosphere in the gardens and car park outside the New Vic. We're really lucky that we've got these really beautifully landscaped urban gardens. We're going to invite the audience down the street of old-fashioned shops that we're creating, and there will be this lovely festive feeling. The audience will eventually come to the mysterious, magical toy shop of Doctor Coppelia. Then they're going into the auditorium, which is the back of the shop, to discover his secrets. It's nice to do a promenade piece; we don't often get the opportunity to do that kind of work. Coppelia is an unusual story and usually a ballet, but ultimately it's a really lovely tale of togetherness, which seems to be an important theme at the moment. It was also born out of the idea that when people visit shops and so on at the moment, they are on the opposite sides of perspex screens. We've all spent the summer looking at each other through windows. I needed to come up with a play that took place with the audience on one side of the window and the actors on the other. Peering through the window at the toy shop is quite an important starting point to this story. Hopefully we make Coppelia: The Mystery happen. At the moment we don't know exactly whether guidance will change, but hopefully what we've created is something quite flexible, so we can respond in all sorts of ways to whatever comes our way."

Looking towards the future, the New Vic is poised and ready to continue onwards and upwards.

"Yeah, we're feeling really positive, actually. We've got such amazing support from our local community, and we support them in return with our outreach programmes, which are growing in significance all the time. We've got a really fabulous season lined up for next year, with all the shows we've been working on over lockdown, such as Marvellous! - the story of Neil Baldwin - which is an extraordinarily heartwarming tale. I think the shows will be all the better for the additional time spent. In 2021 we'll possibly put some of our best work ever on stage as a result of the time we've had to develop it further.

"I think that the UK's arts & culture industry is such an important part of who we are as a nation, and a really significant part of the economy as well. For every pound of investment that the government makes into the arts, five pounds is returned to the Treasury. The wellbeing outcomes we deliver at theatres are essential, as well as the general feelgood factor from being able to enjoy a night out with friends and family. I think those are going to be all the more important going forward. I really hope that people will be able to support us, because we need to hang onto that."

Birmingham Royal Ballet: Lazuli Sky

The REP, Birmingham,
Thurs 22 - Sat 24 October

The first one-act ballet commissioned and presented by Carlos Acosta as director of Birmingham Royal Ballet, Will Tuckett's Lazuli Sky is inspired by ideas of social distancing. It here forms part of a brand-new mixed bill, being presented alongside Valery Panov's powerful solo piece, Liebestod, and Vicente Nebrada's Our Waltzes. The show has a running time of one hour.

An Evening With The Fizz

Lichfield Garrick, Fri 6 November

Back in the days when the UK sometimes won Eurovision, Cheryl Baker, Mike Nolan and Jay Aston came together with Bobby Gee to take the coveted song contest by storm. Winning the competition with Making Your Mind Up in 1981 - a performance made all the more memorable by the boys' mid-song ripping off of the girls' skirts - the foursome went on to enjoy chart success with hits like Land Of Make Believe, My Camera Never Lies and Piece Of The Action. Now Cheryl, Mike and Jay fancy another 'piece of the action', so have reformed as The Fizz.

"The evening," says the group, "is the 'warts and all' behind-the-curtain story of Bucks Fizz - from being put together and winning the Eurovision Song Contest to becoming one of the most successful bands of the 1980s, with five number-one hits and 10 top-10 songs."

An Evening With Kevin and Joanne Clifton

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 4 & Thurs 5 November

"Although we've all missed performing and producing live shows, and it's great to be able to get back on stage, we know people's health and safety is paramount," says Kevin Clifton, in talking about the challenges of presenting this 'intimate' show for a small and socially distanced audience. "Myself, Joanne and our producers feel a responsibility to the theatre industry to help rebuild audience confidence, so that one day theatres will be full again."

The production provides a glimpse into the lives of Kevin and Joanne, from their formative years growing up in a dancing family, to their modern-day successes on Strictly and beyond.

As well as singing songs from their CD, the siblings will be sharing stories and performing some favourite ballroom and Latin dances with their professional partners.

Coppelia: A Mystery

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme,
Sat 12 December - Sat 9 January

The story of Coppelia sees the title character, Dr Coppelius's mannequin, left on the workshop balcony, from where she causes quite a stir - not only in the heart of the red-blooded Franz, but also in the mind of his jealous fiancée, Swanilda, who foolishly mistakes Coppelia for a flesh-and-blood rival...

This socially distanced presentation invites its audiences on a journey around the theatre's spaces.

The hour-long show replaces the venue's intended festive-season production of Beauty And The Beast, which has been postponed until Christmas 2021 due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

VAN GOGH ALIVE

CUTTING-EDGE EXHIBITION MAKES ITS UK DEBUT IN BIRMINGHAM

Grande Exhibitions' Van Gogh Alive is a truly unique encounter with art where "you don't just look at his paintings, you step inside them and feel their power". Visitors can experience the Dutch artist's evolution - from under-appreciated painter into celebrated genius - via the projections at their fingertips, above their heads and beneath their feet.

Families and art lovers alike get to wander through an immersive gallery of over 3,000 images of Van Gogh's legendary works, including The Starry Night, Sunflowers and Wheatfield With Crows. In the process, they come face-to-face with the vibrant colours and vivid detail that encapsulates his unique Post-Impressionist style.

Presented across the globe to great critical acclaim, Van Gogh Alive has been exhibited in a wide variety of locations - from a deconsecrated church in Florence, to the lake parks of Shanghai and the spectacular Louvre Abu Dhabi. The show is both a biography and an expansive anthology of masterpieces, specially tailored for each space it visits. Artworks are displayed in all their glory, broken down to showcase certain sections, or even magnified on a breathtaking scale. Photographs, videos and deeply philosophical quotes from Van Gogh himself have been entwined with images of his works to call attention to snippets of his real-life inspiration.

Paintings are shown in such detail (thanks to state-of-the-art technology) that observers will be given fresh insight into the carnival of colours and precise techniques used by the artist. This ethereal experience of feeling fully submerged in Van Gogh's canvas is interwoven with waves of carefully chosen classical symphonies and bursts of fragrance to pique all the senses.

In addition to the main exhibition, Van Gogh Alive also features hands-on art stations, interpretative areas, a life-sized recreation of Van Gogh's bedroom in Arles, and a captivating mirrored room adorned with hundreds of sunflowers - perhaps Van Gogh's greatest muse.

Bruce Peterson, owner of Grande Exhibitions, says: "We're incredibly excited that Van Gogh Alive is set to make its UK debut in Birmingham. The global exhibition is a perfect Covid-aware experience for the whole family that will provide some escapism and education. We find that adults and children enjoy the experience in different ways, finding their own meaning in Van Gogh's work as they explore the galleries.

"We visited a number of venues in the UK, but as soon as we entered Birmingham Hippodrome, we knew we had to bring our Van Gogh Alive here. It's a unique, iconic venue, and we truly believe once we tailor the experience to come alive in the Hippodrome, visitors won't believe their eyes at the size, scale and beauty within.

Van Gogh Alive is where technology and music meet forward-thinking art curation, boasting the title of most visited multi-sensory experience in the world

"Since announcing the opening in Sydney and reopening in Mexico City with Covid-safe measures in place, demand for tickets has been even higher than pre-lockdown. We're confident that the experience will be extremely popular in Birmingham, and we can't wait to open the doors to our first ever UK showing!"

The exhibition marks the first time Birmingham Hippodrome has invited the public into the building since the closure of all theatres and other public spaces back in March. Birmingham has a long history of championing arts and culture, and Van Gogh Alive is an opportunity to continue to support one of the UK's most stimulating and essential industries.

Andy Street, Mayor of the West Midlands, agrees: "Many sectors are going through an incredibly difficult period due to the coronavirus pandemic, and the arts is no exception. Birmingham Hippodrome has had its challenges, but it's a critical venue for the West Midlands, and it's great to see how it's adapting and thinking outside the box to overcome these challenges.

"The arrival of Grande Exhibitions and Van Gogh Alive is not only a boost for the Hippodrome, but it will also be great for the wider West Midlands economy, helping to draw visitors back to our region."

Van Gogh Alive shows at Birmingham Hippodrome from Thursday 8 October to Thursday 31 December.

19 must see musicals coming to the Midlands...

Hairspray

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 20 - Sat 24 April

It's 1962, and in Tracy Turnblad's Baltimore hometown, massive hairdos, dancing the twist and Corny Collins' daytime dance show are the hottest tickets in teen culture.

In some ways, life for the starry-eyed Tracy is as big, bright and breezy as a bubblegum balloon - but there's trouble brewing just beneath the surface...

This Tony Award-winning hit of a show returns to the Midlands with a jukebox-worth of 1960s-style dance music and 'downtown' rhythm & blues. Hit songs include Welcome To The 60s, You Can't Stop The Beat and The Nicest Kids In Town.

Six The Musical

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Tues 20 - Sun 25 April (tickets on sale, 1 December)
Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 14 - Sat 18 September

SIX's runaway success has shown no signs of abating since it premiered as a student production at the Edinburgh Fringe in 2017. From Tudor queens to battling boss-women, the show features the wives of Henry VIII taking to the stage to tell their own versions of their lives.

This high-energy celebration of girl power sees the cast backed by all-female band The Ladies In Waiting.

Ghost The Musical

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury,
Tues 6 - Sat 10 July

This ever-popular stage version of the award-winning 1990 movie starring Patrick Swayzee, Demi Moore and Whoopi Goldberg makes a welcome return to the Midlands. For those not in the know, the production tells the story of a ghost named Sam. Caught between this world and the next, he desperately attempts to communicate with his girlfriend, Molly, to warn her that she's in mortal danger from his murderer. A timeless tale about the power of love that beautifully blends the genres of romance and comedy, Ghost features The Righteous Brothers' Unchained Melody and numerous songs co-written by Eurythmics' Dave Stewart.

Rock Of Ages

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 6 - Sat 10 July; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Tues 2 - Sat 6 November

Cinema-goers who caught the 2012 movie version of Rock Of Ages, starring Tom Cruise, Alec Baldwin, Russell Brand and Catherine Zeta-Jones, will know exactly what to expect from this feelgood musical. For those who didn't and therefore don't, it focuses on the romance between a small-town girl and a big-city rocker, and is packed to its proverbial rafters with classic 1980s numbers. So if you're someone for whom the decade of Glasnost, yuppies, Miami Vice and mullet hair-dos took place against a soundtrack of pounding rock anthems, this is the show for you. Songs include We Built This City, Here I Go Again, I Want To Know What Love Is and The Final Countdown.

Waitress

Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 11 - Sat 15 May; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 23 - Sat 28 August; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 29 November - Sat 4 December

Smash-hit Broadway and West End musical Waitress makes three Midlands stop-offs next year as part of its first ever UK tour.

Based on the 2007 movie, Waitress tells the story of Jenna, an expert pie maker in a small town who dreams of a way out of her loveless marriage. A baking contest in a nearby county and the town's new doctor may provide her with the chance of a new life, while her fellow waitresses offer their own recipes for happiness...

The show is being brought to life by a groundbreaking female-led creative team.

Mamma Mia!

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 2 - Sat 13 March; Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 3 - Sat 14 May, 2022

This legendary show is of course a nicely contrived vehicle for the chart-topping music of 1970s super troupers Abba. The Swedish Fab Four scored mega-hit after mega-hit with catchy numbers including Waterloo, Dancing Queen, The Name Of The Game, The Winner Takes It All and Take A Chance On Me, all of which are present and correct in this blockbuster offering.

9 To 5 The Musical

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 25 - Fri 29 May; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 1 - Fri 5 June; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 3 - Fri 7 August;

"I'm so excited that 9 To 5 is heading to the Midlands," says Dolly Parton, in talking about her hit musical's three visits to the region in 2021.

"I'm hoping you have as much fun watching it as I had writing the music for it."

The show is perfect for anyone who's ever wanted to string up their boss, which is almost all of us. So come join the fun!"

As with the original 1980s movie and spin-off TV series, the stage production of 9 To 5 centres around the story of three office workers, who team up to turn the tables on their sexist and egotistical bigot of a boss. Expect to be dancing in the aisles...

School Of Rock

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Sat 13 - Sat 27 February; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 20 - Sat 25 September; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 26 - Sat 31 July

There's a school of thought that School Of Rock would've been even better without Jack Black. And the great thing about Andrew Lloyd Webber's stage version of the hit 2003 movie is that you actually get to find out if that's true!

Alongside its lack of Black, the show has plenty else to recommend it, including no fewer than 14 new songs from Lord Lloyd Webber. All the original numbers from the movie also feature.

For those not in the know, School Of Rock tells the story of wannabe rock star Dewey Finn. Posing as a substitute teacher at an elite prep school, Dewey not only introduces the students to 'his kind of music' but also helps the uptight headmistress to rediscover her inner wild child...

Chicago The Musical

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Fri 12 - Sat 20 March; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 28 June - Sat 3 July; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 25 - Sat 30 October

Chicago's debauched glamour, jazz-tinged score and smouldering dance numbers give it a touch of real old-Broadway style decadence.

An astonishingly accurate satire on the shallow, media-obsessed world of the 21st century, it's almost impossible to believe it was first conceived over 40 years ago.

It also has the considerable lure of choreography by Broadway legend Bob Fosse - and he's the reason the show was re-conceived in 1996.

Set in the Chicago of the Roaring 20s, the action takes place in a jailhouse, as two ambitious and sexy 'cons battle it out to be the most notorious murderer...

Everybody's Talking About Jamie

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, date tbc;
The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 26 April -
Sat 1 May

Everybody's Talking About Jamie may have come from humble beginnings - it was inspired by a television documentary and premiered in Sheffield - but after only a matter of months it had transferred to the West End. Since then, the hit musical has enjoyed blockbusting success, with five Olivier Award nominations, an extensive UK tour and a forthcoming feature-film version testifying to its incredible popularity. The show, which follows Jamie New's quest for acceptance on his journey to becoming a drag queen, co-stars soap favourites Shane Richie and Shobna Gulati. Layton Williams takes the title role. "This musical tries to tell people to stay true to who they are and to be proud of themselves," says Layton, "and that if they're different, or feel like they don't fit in, then there's a place for them in the world anyway. It's all about having hope."

Footloose

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 15 - Sat 20 March; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 6 - Sat 10 April; Malvern Theatres, Mon 17 - Sat 22 May; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 2 - Sat 7 August

Featuring classic numbers such as Holding Out For A Hero, Almost Paradise, Let's Hear It For The Boy, and of course the title track itself, hit Broadway and West End musical Footloose tells the story of city boy Ren's arrival in Bomont - and of the impact which his dancing has on a town held back by the memory of a tragedy.

Something Rotten

The REP, Birmingham,
Thurs 7 - Sat 30 October

When the 16th century Bottom brothers - aspiring playwrights living in the shadow of William Shakespeare - find out from a soothsayer that the future of theatre will see acting being combined with singing and dancing, they set about the task of writing the world's first ever musical...

Sean Foley has had a far from ideal first few months in his new role as artistic director of the Birmingham Rep, so he'll be crossing his fingers, along with the rest of theatreland, that 2021 will bring with it a return to normality. Assuming it does, Sean will no doubt relish getting his teeth into this hit musical comedy, an offering described by New York Magazine as "The Producers meets Spamalatot meets The Book Of Mormon... squared."

Menopause The Musical 2

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Thurs 25 February; Bedworth Civic Hall, Sat 27 February; Malvern Theatres, Fri 9 April; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 21 April; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Sun 13 June

Female TV stars 'of a certain age' are much in evidence in this well-reviewed show, although the identities of those taking part on this particular occasion are yet to be revealed.

When four menopausal women meet in a department store, conversation quickly turns to the one thing they all have in common - the menopause. Cue innumerable one-liners on subjects including forgetfulness, mood swings, wrinkles, night sweats and uncontrollable chocolate binges...

The Addams Family

The Alexandra, Birmingham,
Tues 13 - Sat 17 April

Samantha Womack and Cameron Blakely break out the gruesome makeup and theatrical cobwebs to star in this brand new production of the hit musical, based on the popular mid-1960s US TV series of the same name. So if you fancy a lightheartedly spiningling evening spent watching Uncle Fester howl at the moon, while Gomez and Morticia fight for supremacy and the ancestors create pandemonium, the gloomy old mansion at 0001 Cemetery Lane is the address to head for...

We Will Rock You

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 8 - Sat 13 February; Birmingham Hippodrome, Mon 17 - Sat 29 May

A pulsating Ben Elton-written homage to the music of Queen, We Will Rock You may be short on storyline, but it's got bags of energy - and just about as brilliant a soundtrack as any musical's ever likely to boast.

The show's frontline performers give it their all to excellent effect, while the sets and choreography ensure a visual spectacle to remember. For those who care about the wafer-thin plot, the story is set in a future where originality has been quashed, musical instruments banned, and a hero is needed to bring back rock music...

Yes, it's all a bit contrived, but how else are you going to glue together all of Queen's greatest hits in a single show?

A fantastic evening's entertainment for fans of Freddie & Co, so catch it when you can...

Grease

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 3 - Sat 8 May; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 13 - Sat 17 July

Dust off your leather jackets, pull on your bobby-socks and get ready for the most fun-filled high-octane rock'n'roll party of them all!

Grease is the original high-school musical, featuring all the unforgettable songs from the hit movie, including You're The One That I Want, Grease Is The Word, Summer Nights, Hopelessly Devoted To You, Sandy and Greased Lightnin'.

The Magician's Elephant

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, Wed 14 October - Sat 1 January 2022

The Royal Shakespeare Company's Christmas offering this year would have been a new musical adaptation of The Magician's Elephant.

Sadly, the Covid crisis means that families will have to wait until next autumn to enjoy the stage version of bestselling author Kate DiCamillo's critically acclaimed novel.

The Magician's Elephant tells the story of orphan Peter Augustus Duchenne, who lives a frugal life in the lonely town of Baltese. Then, one day, a magician conjures an elephant from the sky...

The animal's appearance sets off a chain of remarkable events that changes Baltese forever.

Girls Just Wanna Have Fun

Stafford Gatehouse, Fri 4 June; Lichfield Garrick, Sat 5 June; Malvern Theatres, 9 June; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Sun 20 June; Sutton Coldfield Town Hall, Wed 14 July; Brierley Hill Civic, Thurs 15 July; Roses Theatre, Tewkesbury, Sat 17 July; The Place, Telford, Thurs 9 September; Swan Theatre, Worcester, Sun 12 September; The Albany Theatre, Coventry, Thurs 16 September; Palace Theatre, Redditch, Wed 22 September; William Aston Hall, Wrexham, Sat 6 November

Linda Nolan and X-Factor finalist Niki Evans are two of the four women enjoying an evening of fun and frivolity in this brand new musical comedy.

Described as a no-holds-barred romp through everything life throws at a modern-day woman, the show is unlikely to pull up any trees when it comes to originality. That said, having previously helmed Hormonal Housewives, its producers absolutely know the market they're playing to, and are old hands at giving their audience a fantastic night out.

So if you fancy channelling your inner diva for a couple of hours, you know what you need to do...

Dreamgirls

Venues and dates to be confirmed soon...

Take a rollercoaster ride back to the 1960s with this smash-hit musical inspired by the story of Diana Ross & The Supremes.

Dreamgirls debuted on Broadway 39 years ago but is best known from the 2006 film version starring Jamie Foxx and Beyoncé Knowles. A story of friendship, ambition, and how the former can sometimes be compromised by the latter, the show follows the fortunes of Effie, Lorrell and Deena - three talented young singers in the turbulent '60s who, managed by a former Cadillac salesman, aim to hit the high notes as girl group the Dreamettes. Featured numbers include And I Am Telling You I'm Not Going, Listen, I Am Changing and One Night Only.

CREATING A LEGACY

BIRMINGHAM ROYAL BALLET CELEBRATES 30 YEARS

In 1990, Sadler's Wells Royal Ballet migrated to the Midlands to become Birmingham Royal Ballet (BRB). In the 30 years since, the company has premiered a staggering 58 brand-new ballets in the heart of the second city.

It has also got through 75,000 pairs of pointe shoes (at a rate of 2,500 pairs a year) and emptied 3,000 cans of hairspray in the wigs department!

One of the company's premieres, presented in its first year in Birmingham, was the now-internationally acclaimed production of The Nutcracker. BRB's then-director, Sir Peter Wright, set himself the mammoth task of creating a new version of Tchaikovsky's classic. It opened 98 years after the very first performance of the ballet.

BRB's The Nutcracker was dedicated to the City of Birmingham as a token of appreciation for its support of the company. Since it debuted, there have been 619 performances of the production, 598 of which have taken place at BRB's Birmingham Hippodrome home. It remains a beacon of artistic excellence on a global scale, making a welcome return each Christmas.

Another Birmingham Royal Ballet classic making a return - in February 2021 - is Cinderella. Sir David Bintley's enchanting fairytale ballet, set to Sergei Prokofiev's sumptuous score, premiered at the Hippodrome 10 years ago and featured as the BBC Christmas ballet.

Both Cinderella and The Nutcracker boast the renowned and utterly spellbinding designs of John Macfarlane. Legendary productions in BRB's repertoire, the ballets dazzle visually, technically and emotionally, steeping Birmingham Hippodrome in glittering extravagance and generating an electric atmosphere.

Running alongside its performance schedule, BRB is heavily involved with the local community via its Dance Track initiative. Dance Track was created 21 years ago to take ballets into schools, present dance to children who otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity to enjoy it, and scout for talent. Today, Birmingham Royal Ballet visits one-quarter of all the city's primary schools and runs workshops for 2,500 youngsters each year.

BRB's Freefall Dance company, meanwhile, is made up of performers with severe learning difficulties, and is just one example of the company championing inclusivity in the arts.

Continuing Birmingham Royal Ballet's distinguished legacy is its recently appointed director, Carlos Acosta. Taking over from the retiring Sir David Bintley last January, Cuban-born Carlos is one of the world's most iconic principal dancers. He also heads up his own contemporary dance company, Acosta Danza.

With Covid-19 meaning that many of BRB's plans have failed to come to fruition this year, the company is more determined than ever to deliver something special to the city of Birmingham in these uncertain times. This autumn, an innovative digital projection and augmented reality piece is being presented at Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Lazuli Sky will be the first one-act ballet to be commissioned and presented under Carlos Acosta, and utilises social distancing within the performance.

A hopeful piece by Birmingham-born choreographer Will Tuckett, Lazuli Sky explores the vast openness of the sky as a direct response to lockdown. It takes its inspiration from the deep, speckled blue of the treasured Lapis Lazuli gemstone - the pigment from which was the most expensive used in Renaissance oil paintings, including those of Leonardo Da Vinci. The unique production is set to Shaker Loops by John Adams and includes the work of designer Samuel Wyer and projection designer Nina Dunn.

A second brand-new offering from BRB takes 'honouring Birmingham' to the next level. City Of A Thousand Trades is a new one-act ballet celebrating and inspired by the rich and diverse heritage of the second city.

Birmingham became known as the City of a Thousand Trades as Britain's Industrial Revolution reached its peak. The city ballooned into the second largest in the UK, thanks to its central location and vast water network, which was essential for booming business. Skilled tradespeople migrated to the city from throughout the Commonwealth, including Ireland, India and the West Indies, to create the melting pot of cultures for which modern-day Birmingham is known and admired.

Commissioned as part of BRB's Ballet Now programme, which seeks to find exciting, diverse, international and creative talent, City Of A Thousand Trades will be brought to the Birmingham Rep's stage in May 2021 by choreographer Miguel Altunaga.

Commenting on the ballet, Carlos Acosta said: "As soon as I came here, I wanted to create a statement about Birmingham with a ballet about the history of the people of Birmingham. This is a large city and a city of immigrants who share the story of Birmingham, and I'm very interested that the work explores that."

"I also think we have a responsibility to break the stigma that ballet is elitist, white, and 'of yesterday'. I'm interested in the idea of giving a voice which is representative of the time we are living in, so that ballet is not about the past but also the present and into the future."

For more information on future Birmingham Royal Ballet performances, visit brb.org.uk

DID YOU KNOW?

75,000 pairs of pointe shoes have been used over the course of 30 years, at a rate of 2,500 pairs a year.

10,000 costumes are stored by BRB, mainly in a warehouse in Dudley.

3,000 cans of hairspray have been used by the wigs department since 1990.

1,397 pairs of pointe shoes have been used just for the role of Odette/Odile in Swan Lake since 1990. A principal dancer in that role tends to go through two pairs a show.

1,000 wigs are stored at BRB, all of which are made of real human hair. The longest wig, featured in David Bintley's E=mc², measures over one metre.

864 cans of silver sparkle body paint have been used by dancers playing the role of snowflakes in The Nutcracker.

660 performances of Swan Lake have been given since 1990, in 14 different countries, including Thailand, the US, South Korea, Israel, Japan and New Zealand.

500 costumes are needed for each full-length, three-act ballet, such as Swan Lake.

619 performances of The Nutcracker have been given, of which 598 have taken place at Birmingham Hippodrome.

421 full days have been spent by the company in daily class since 1990, at a rate of 7.5 hours a week, 337.5 hours a year and 8,437.5 hours in 25 years.

270 weeks of performances by BRB have been given at its home of Birmingham Hippodrome since 1990.

150 different ballets have been performed by BRB at the Hippodrome.

58 brand-new ballets by 28 choreographers have been premiered by BRB, including 21 by Sir David Bintley.

Wonder Woman 1984

CERT PG (151 mins)

Starring Gal Gadot, Connie Nielsen, Pedro Pascal, Chris Pine, Kristen Wiig
Directed by Patty Jenkins (USA)

Gal Gadot returns with her Lasso of Truth and impressively indestructible bracelets in the follow-up to 2017's Wonder Woman.

The first movie was that rarest of beasts, a DC Extended Universe film that wasn't utterly panned by the critics - so there's plenty riding on this much-anticipated sequel. The story finds Wonder Woman pitting her demigoddess wits against the wicked Cold War forces of sinister supervillains Maxwell Lord and Cheetah...

Eternal Beauty

CERT 15 (95 mins)

Starring David Thewlis, Billie Piper, Sally Hawkins, Penelope Wilton
Directed by Craig Roberts (UK)

A stellar cast of much-loved British thespians lend their considerable talent to this stylish and thought-provoking debut offering from actor-turned-director Craig Roberts. Having caused a significant stir in the Oscar-winning The Shape Of Water, Sally Hawkins is at it again here, starring as a woman whose battle against paranoid schizophrenia is brutally undermined by her thoroughly unpleasant and utterly self-centred family. David Thewlis' character of aspiring musician Mike provides her with a welcome port in a storm...

I Am Woman

CERT 15 (116 mins)

Starring Evan Peters, Tilda Cobham-Harvey, Danielle Macdonald, Matty Cardarople
Directed by Unjoo Moon (USA)

When Australian singer Helen Reddy - who died in September at the age of 78 - arrived in New York with her three-year-old daughter in the mid-1960s, she had nothing more than a suitcase and $230 to her name. Within five years she had become a global superstar and seen her power anthem, I Am Woman, adopted by the increasingly assertive feminist movement...

This sensitively told biography has garnered plenty of praise after showing at a number of internationally renowned film festivals.

The War With Grandpa

CERT PG

Starring Robert De Niro, Uma Thurman, Christopher Walken, Jane Seymour
Directed by Tim Hill (USA)

Expect rude humour and pranks aplenty in this star-studded romp from the admittedly not always reliable shared pen of Tom J Astle and Matt Ember, whose previous writing credits include the execrable rom-com, Failure To Launch.

Tim Hill's the man at the helm, so if you've loved his previous work - including Muppets From Space, Alvin And The Chipmunks, The SpongeBob SquarePants Movie and Garfield: A Tail Of Two Kitties - a right royal laughter fest may well be on the cards for you.

The storyline's a straightforward one. Sixth-grader and all-round-average kid Peter (Oakes Fegley) is none too pleased when his recently widowed grandfather, Ed (De Niro), not only moves into the family home but is also given his bedroom. What's an ousted boy to do but try his very best to get the uber-annoying pensioner to sling his elderly hook... Problem is, it turns out Ed isn't interested in going anywhere

Released Fri 16 October

Cordelia

CERT tbc (88 mins)

Starring Michael Gambon, Johnny Flynn, Catherine McCormack, Alun Armstrong
Directed by Adrian Shergold (USA)

Haunted by past events, a young woman starts to unravel when she's left alone in her apartment... "I wanted to explore one weekend in this character's life, where everything starts to implode for her," explains the film's director, Adrian Shergold. "Did this happen? Is this weekend real? Or is it a figment of Cordelia's imagination?"

CERT tbc (123 mins)

Starring Sarah Megan Thomas, Stana Katic, Radhika Apte, Linus Roache
Directed by Lydia Dean Pilcher (USA)

What do you get if you bring together a female British intelligence officer, an American woman with a wooden leg and a female Indian Muslim pacifist?...

A brand spanking new Nazi-fighting spy unit, that's what!

Inspired by true stories, A Call To Spy follows the adventures of three 'plucky gals' as they play a key role in undermining the Nazi regime in France during World War Two. The movie has done outstandingly well at numerous film festivals - including Canada's annual Whistler event, at which 97% of people chose it as their favourite movie.

The Courier

CERT tbc (111 mins)

Starring Benedict Cumberbatch, Merab Ninidze, Rachel Brosnahan
Directed by Dominic Cooke (UK)

This autumn is certainly a bonanza season for spy-movie fans. Not only is there Jimmy Bond's return (see opposite page) and A Call To Spy (see elsewhere on this page), there's also this fascinating and true story of British businessman Greville Wynne (Benedict Cumberbatch). Along with his Russian source - Soviet spy Oleg Penkovsky - Wynne provided MI6 with crucial information that helped defuse the Cuban Missile Crisis back in 1962.

The film made its bow, under the title Ironbark, at this year's Sundance Film Festival, where it was warmly received.

No Time To Die

CERT tbc (163 mins)

Starring Daniel Craig, Ana de Armas, Ralph Fiennes, Léa Seydoux
Directed by Cary Joji Fukunaga (USA)

Daniel Craig picks up his Licence To Kill for the fifth and final time in an adventure that sees everybody's favourite British secret service agent pitting his now-fiftysomething wits against a mysterious villain armed with dangerous new technology.

Actually, in this one, Bond has become everybody's favourite former British secret service agent, having retired to an idyllic life of peace and tranquility in sun-kissed Jamaica. But what's a highly trained ex-double-O operative meant to do but put down his vodka martini (shaken, not stirred) and spring into action when CIA pal Felix Leiter turns up asking for help... Craig has been a massive hit as Ian Fleming's famous super-spy, and is surely making the right decision by handing in his Walther PPK at the age of 52. Roger Moore played the role until he was nearly 60, a decision that did neither him nor the Bond legend any favours.

GOING WILD...

A prestigious exhibition highlighting the breathtaking beauty of the natural world arrives in the Midlands this autumn. The 56th Wildlife Photographer Of The Year explores the world's richest habitats and offers an insight into the behaviour of a plethora of earth's creatures. Chosen by an international panel of experts, each image tells a fascinating story about the photographer's connection with the natural world.

This year's Wildlife Photographer Of The Year competition attracted more than 50,000 entries - with professional and amateur snappers all vying for the sought-after title.

Winning images are chosen for their creativity, originality and technical excellence - like the image above, which is the work of Hannah Vijayan from Canada, who was highly commended in the 15 to 17-year-old category.

Titled The Perfect Catch, Hannah's image shows a brown bear pulling a sockeye salmon from the shallows of a river in Alaska's Katmai National Park, where tourists gather to observe a concentration of bears catching salmon leaping up the falls. Hannah chose to capture a quieter scene and different style of fishing, with the large female Alaskan brown bear choosing to immerse her head under water to look for her prey. Her reward is a nutrient-rich sockeye still in its ocean form - before it has developed its reproductive red colour and pronounced jaws.

An image sure to give arachnophobics the shivers is Jaime Culebra's The Spider's Supper.

The detailed photograph is highly commended in the Behaviour: Invertebrates section of the competition.

The image shows a large wandering spider pierce the egg of a giant glass frog with digestive juices before sucking its liquefied prey. It is one of 11 known species of wandering spider, which are thought to be key predators of these small, often translucent amphibians.

The spiders shelter in rainforest plants during the day and hunt at night, usually by ambushing prey that ventures close enough. Jaime set up his shot to capture the precise moment the female spider grasped the thin jelly coating between her fangs, steadying the egg with her long, hairy palps. One by one, over more than an hour, she slowly devoured all the eggs.

UK photographer Matthew Maran's The Rat Game shows a young fox holding on tight to her trophy of a dead brown rat. Matthew spent four years photographing the foxes that live on a North London allotment. This image - highly commended in the Behaviour: Mammals section of the competition - was taken on an August evening as Matthew lay watching the youngsters at play. As one of them exploded out of the bushes with a dead rat in its mouth, the other three then began squabbling over it and a tug-of-war developed. When one got the prize, it would repeatedly toss it into the air and catch it.

Reflecting the talent of young UK photographer Evie Eastbrook, Paired Up Puffins is highly commended in the 11 to 14-year-old category. Evie's image shows a pair of Atlantic puffins, in vibrant breeding plumage, pausing near their nest burrow on the Farne Islands. Every spring, these small islands off Northumberland attract more than 100,000 breeding pairs of seabirds. While guillemots, razorbills, kittiwakes and fulmars crowd onto the cliffs, puffins nest in burrows on the grassy slopes above. Evie concentrated on this pair, aiming for a characterful portrait.

Peeking Possums, by Australian photographer Gary Meredith, sees two common brushtail possums - a mother and her joey - peeking out of their hiding place under the roof of a shower block in a holiday park in Yallingup, Western Australia. Gary had been eyeing up his subject all week. They popped up at sunset and kept an eye on campers until dark, before squeezing through the gap and heading to a peppermint tree where they would feed on its leaves. Ranked in the Urban Wildlife section, Gary's photograph captures the possums' vulnerability and resourcefulness.

This competition has an outstanding reputation in attracting the world's very best photographers, naturalists and young photographers. But there has never been a more vital time for audiences all over the world to re-engage with the natural world - and what better way than this inspiring and provocative exhibition

Dr Tim Littlewood, Executive Director of Science at the Natural History Museum

Amazon Burning by UK photographer Charlie Hamilton James is highly commended in the Wildlife Photojournalism: Single Image category. Charlie has been covering deforestation in the Amazon for the past decade, and this image captures a fire burning out of control in Maranhão state, northeastern Brazil. The image highlights a single tree which remains standing, almost in defiance. The fire would have been started deliberately, to clear a logged area of secondary forest for agriculture or cattle farming.

Tomohon Market in northern Sulawesi, Indonesia, is the subject of A Risky Business, by French photographer Quentin Martinez.

Another highly commended in the Wildlife Photojournalism: Single Image category, A Risky Business shows a market trader slicing up fruit bats while surrounded by his other wildlife wares: pythons to his right, and bamboo-skewered 'bush' rats beneath them. Quentin was struck by the juxtaposition of contrasting economies: the name-brand clothes of the stallholders and the wild-animal body parts.

Italian photographer Andrea Pozzi hiked for hours to capture this image of the Araucanía region of Chile - named after its Araucaria trees. Taken from a ridge overlooking the forest after sunset, The Forest Born Of Fire emphasises the vista's rich colours. The trunks gleam like pins scattered on the landscape, and the image is framed to create the feeling that the whole world is clothed in this strange forest fabric. Andrea had been enchanted by this sight a year previously and had timed his return to capture it.

Wildlife Photographer Of The Year shows at The Gas Hall, Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, from Saturday 17 October until Sunday 7 February. Tickets are £7.50 for adults and £3 for children & students, with under-threes going free.

Krištof Kintera

Ikon Gallery, Birmingham, until Sun 22 November

"I am aware of our responsibility for drastic changes of climate, extinctions of species and all kinds of living organisms," says Krištof Kintera, a Czech artist widely acclaimed for his sculptural, often kinetic works. "And therefore we'll face, sooner or later, fatal problems. It is our shame; it is my shame."

This Ikon exhibition, installed across both galleries and also expanding into the public realm, is the most comprehensive presentation of Kintera's work ever to be mounted in the UK. Featuring new, recent and archival pieces, the show focuses on present-day 'apocalyptic environmental issues', but manages to do so with an evident sense of humour, albeit a dark one.

Birmingham Revolutions

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Sunday 28 February

Still available to view at Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery are pre-lockdown exhibitions Birmingham Revolutions: Power To The People and Dressed To The Nines.

Voting reform, nuclear disarmament, trade unionism, anti-racism and human rights all feature in Power To The People, a presentation exploring the city's vibrant and varied history of protest and activism. Dressed To The Nines, meanwhile, focuses on the subject of dressing up and going out. Covering the period from around 1850 up to the present day, the exhibition highlights some of the changes which have occurred in the types of clothing worn for special occasions.

Garments featured in the show include a 1930s beaded evening dress, an embroidered court uniform which belonged to Neville Chamberlain, and cocktail dresses by Christian Dior and Norman Hartnell.

Oh, and shoes. Lots and lots of shoes...

Thirteen Ways Of Looking

Herbert Art Gallery & Museum, Coventry, Fri 2 October - Sunday 13 December

Contemplating big questions such as where art belongs, where it's experienced and who it's addressing, Thirteen Ways Of Looking brings together the work of (yes, you guessed it) 13 artists and curators. The exhibition takes its inspiration from a 1917 poem by Wallace Stevens entitled Thirteen Ways Of Looking At A Blackbird. Stevens' 13-verse work presents multiple perspectives and viewpoints of the bird. In so doing, it highlights the importance of flexibility and fluidity when creating space for multiple forms of experience, knowledge and understanding. The Herbert exhibition very much borrows from the poet's approach, presenting international, multicultural, multi-faith and feminist perspectives which shift like those of the blackbird in Stevens' poem.

Fabric: Touch And Identity

Compton Verney Art Gallery, Warwickshire, until Sun 3 January 2021

The ways in which clothes and textiles conceal, reveal and seduce through the lenses of art, design, fashion, film and dance is explored in this 'playful and provocative' exhibition.

Boasting works by Vivienne Westwood, Raisa Kabir and Cathy de Monchaux, the display also features a new immersive installation by Reiko Sudo.

Subjects explored in the show include the role of fabric in shaping and communicating identity, and the part it plays in expressing sensuality and sexuality in a variety of different cultures.

20:20 Twenty Years Of Collecting Contemporary Art

New Art Gallery, Walsall, until Thurs 24 December

New Art Gallery's celebration of its 20th anniversary continues with this major exhibition. Exploring themes including the changing urban landscape, the Black Country, the impact of globalisation and people & places, the show brings together works of contemporary art collected over the last 20 years and spanning a wide range of media.

Many of the included pieces have been produced by artists who have featured in the gallery's exhibitions programme at one time or another.

Scarefest

Alton Towers Resort, Staffordshire, Fri 9 - Sat 11 October & Fri 16 October - Sun 1 November

There's certainly no shortage of fright-tastic fun to be had at the UK's biggest theme park this Halloween, as Alton Towers once again hosts the ever-popular Scarefest - and a new spine-tingling addition, Freak Show: Toxic Junkyard. Set in an open space replicating an abandoned junkyard, the walk-through experience features menacing psycho clowns, circus rejects and malevolent misfits lurking in the shadows, plotting their next big entrance to make you tremble in your boots...

More freakish fun can be had during a tour of Altonville Mine, which is inhabited by village outcasts 'the Skin Snatchers'. Or maybe you fancy a seafaring fright aboard the infamous 'Mutiny' ghost ship, as part of the award-winning pirate-themed attraction, Darkest Depths... The dark nooks and crannies of a dungeon are always perfect spooking spaces, and Alton Towers Dungeon is no exception, promising a 'hideously hilarious journey through Staffordshire's darkest history'...

Also new for 2020 is the Garden Lights Walk: Whispering Souls, described as an 'otherworldly' stroll through the resort's listed gardens... Freaky Fun Zone and the CBeebies Land Monster Ball provide age-appropriate spooky fun for younger visitors, while The Alton Ancestors make a welcome return for the scary season - rising from their graves to entertain visitors with some socially distanced flash mob entertainment.

National Sea Life Centre: A-Scarium

National Sea Life Centre, Birmingham, Sat 17 October - Sun 1 November

Step into the creepy depths of Sea Life by navigating A-Scarium's immersive trail, which takes you past some of the ocean's most weird and wonderful creatures. Discover facts about many of the sea's freakiest inhabitants, including black tip reef sharks, garden eels and big eye fish.

Make sure you keep an eye out for the magical unicorn fish in the aquarium's 360-degree Ocean Tunnel. Book at visitsealife.com/birmingham

The Haunted Castle

Warwick Castle, Sat 24 October - Sun 1 November

Spooky tales, scary fun and themed attractions and activities should ensure visitors' spines are well and truly tingled at Warwick Castle this half-term holiday.

Ghosts, ghouls, wizards and witches abound as the popular visitor attraction goes all out to provide a Halloween adventure brimming with things that go bump in the night (and in the daytime!). Visitors can meet the famous Witches of Warwick, explore the gruesome truths of history in the Horrible Histories maze, search the spooky mansion, navigate the Haunted Hollows and discover even more quirky characters in 'spellbinding shows' live on the Dead Centre Stage.

Step back in time this autumn at Blists Hill Victorian Town, Ironbridge.

Bear Grylls Adventure

Birmingham International Railway Station

Celebrity adventurer Bear Grylls has certainly pulled out all the stops with this indoor/outdoor visitor attraction.

Activities include high ropes, indoor archery, indoor climbing, escape rooms and a Royal Marines-inspired assault course. Most are suitable for visitors aged eight-plus.

For the 'more courageous' (as if some of the above didn't require courage!), The Fear Zone challenges you to 'sharpen your mind and find your inner strength' by attempting to navigate the area in complete darkness.

Alternatively, try venturing to the depths of the deep blue sea with Shark Drive. The site's tropical tank allows adventurers to get 'up close and personal' with black tip reef sharks and cownose rays.

All dive and safety equipment is provided.

Fancy experiencing the thrill of free falling at 12,000ft without having to jump out of a plane? Then iFly is probably for you. This weightless adventure takes place in a wind tunnel and comprises two one-minute flights to get the adrenaline pumping.

Sky Reach Adventures

Telford Town Park, Shropshire
Open until 1 November

Four adrenaline-pumping activities await visitors to this Telford Town Council-run attraction. Located within the Town Park, Sky Reach Adventures comprises a climbing wall, Tree Course, Skyline Course and Quick Jump - all with different levels of challenge to suit different age groups.

The Sky Reach system allows participants to move at their own speed and make their own route choices... The climbing wall is 10 metres high, has four routes and uses two auto-belay systems to ensure climbers are always safe... The Tree Course takes visitors on a journey through the Town Park woods at squirrel height... The Skyline Course features 12 obstacles and requires balance, physical skill and nerve... Last but not least, Quick Jump allows visitors the chance to experience the sensation of free-falling through the air.

Go Ape Tree Top Adventure

Midlands venues include Cannock, Coventry, Sherwood Forest & Wyre Forest

With 'branches' (geddit?) in some of the UK's most spectacular forests and parks, Go Ape Tree Top Adventure comprises two to three hours of flying down zip wires, leaping from Tarzan swings and navigating obstacles, crossings and rope bridges.

Tree Top Junior is suitable for 'mini Tarzans' aged six to 12 and offers an hour of tree-to-tree crossings with a zip line finale.

The Forest Segway, meanwhile, is an option for those preferring to keep their feet on the ground (well, almost!). The hour-long activity is a great way to explore the terrain of the forest.

Health & safety is a priority with all Go Ape Adventures, with age-related regulations in place for all activities. Book tickets at goape.co.uk

Magical creatures, sparkling lights, flurries of snow and plenty of thrills are all present and correct on this sure-to-be-memorable illuminated adventure. Steam In Lights debuted in 2019, and like all good visitor attractions is aiming to be 'bigger and better' this year. Board your private compartment at Bridgnorth station, then sit back, relax and enjoy the ride as your train steams out into the darkness and the magic unfolds.

Passengers can then immerse themselves in a story of mischief and mystery, helping to make the lights shine along the line during their quest to find the Christmas Cacklers.

The Steam In Lights train journey lasts around an hour, travelling from Bridgnorth to Hampton Loade and back. Book tickets at svr.co.uk

TAKING LIBERTIES

Geoff Norcott has been a regular on the comedy circuit for a number of years now. His writing credits include Have I Got News For You, 8 Out Of 10 Cats and Judge Romesh. He's also a regular correspondent on satirical news show The Mash Report. This month, Geoff resumes his Taking Liberties tour, where he'll be talking about the challenges of being a right-wing comedian in a left-leaning industry. What's On recently caught up with him to find out more...

What's your story in terms of becoming a comedian, Geoff - was it a long-held dream fulfilled or a sudden and unexpected lightbulb moment?

It will probably annoy the modern 'career comedian', but I did fall into it. I was just messing about with an old mate doing a double act. He decided it wasn't for him, so I egotistically decided to honour the dates as myself. It was a mere six years before I learned how to be funny on my own!

How has the pandemic and lockdown impacted the material in your show?

I think it's made the show better because so much has happened since lockdown, and comedy does well throwing light in shade. Plus I can do an impression of blokes in petrol stations with a t-shirt pulled up over their nose.

What do comedians do during pandemic lockdowns?!

We're just like everyone else - we do more stuff online. That was fine for a while, but there was a point when I was doing one show and had to mute a bloke because his dog was barking. From Live At The Apollo to doing crowd control on a laptop!

You've said you don't like being told what to do, but is there anything we should be told to do?

Yes. Remember that social media is just the stuff people type whilst sitting on the toilet. The importance it's given is bizarre. You could get cancelled for something stupid you wrote while passing the time of day between movements.

What's your view on free speech in comedy - are there any limits, and if so, what are they?

The limit is the audience. On the whole, people are decent. If you get a joke wrong, the audience will soon let you know in the form of silence or contempt. It's a great system.

Why are there so few right-leaning comedians?

Well, based on my Twitter feed since that BBC announcement, it's because we're racist, sexist and exactly like Bernard Manning! The serious answer is there are a few more than there seem, but not everyone wants to talk about it.

Why is it, do you think, that Tories are 'shy'?

I'm not sure they are so much these days. The moment the Labour Party got investigated for racism, it became less obvious to treat it as a simple case of goodies and baddies.

Who's the comedian from a different generation you most admire and why?

I love Dave Allen. He could do it all. One-liners, stories, observational. And he never seemed that desperate for the laughs. They seemed like an accidental consequence of the things he was saying.

You've said you like to take ideas on their merit, but which 'woke' position/idea/belief has the least merit for you, and which has the most?

I think promoting the idea that straight white men are evil is a tough sell in a country where a large chunk of the people are straight, white and male. I think people should always look to progress the idea of equality, but not presume that everyone will think the same way as their campus discussion forum on gender hate crimes.

How have Midlands audiences tended to respond to your politics by comparison with audiences elsewhere?

For whatever reasons, Midlands audiences seem to take themselves the least seriously. Shrewsbury punters, for example, also like to have their reference points acknowledged, and laugh at outsiders for not having enough money for that bloody toll bridge.

Geoff Norcott performs at The Glee Club, Birmingham, Sunday 18 October

UP FOR A LAUGH!

With the Birmingham Comedy Festival returning in October, we caught up with Maureen Younger - leading female comic on the city circuit - to chat about the award-winning event, women in comedy, and the challenges facing the live entertainment industry as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic...

How long have you been involved in comedy in Birmingham, Maureen?

I started MY Comedy Birmingham in Kings Heath in 2009, originally as a one-off, but it sold out so I kept on going! Dave, who runs Birmingham Comedy Festival, then asked me to be on the selection committee for the Breaking Talent Award in 2014, and I've been doing that ever since. I think shows and awards like this are so important to highlight what's going on in the Midlands. I'll always back Birmingham Comedy Festival as a whole because I think they're so supportive to us comics and really affordable too. I love gigging in Birmingham, and there's a really good comedy scene here. I have to say that Midlands audiences are some of my favourites, some of the nicest in Britain. Every comic I know loves gigging in the Midlands.

Where can we catch you at Birmingham Comedy Festival this year?

It's all still very uncertain on the live comedy front. I'm going to be a guest on Objectivity with James Sandy, which is a series on Switch FM as part of the festival. It was really interesting. We discussed these objects that mean something to me for different reasons, and he'd really done his research! It definitely makes you think about what objects mean to you, whether that be The Family Object, The Dark Object or The Random Object. My random object was actually from my time studying in the old Soviet Union - although I still pretend to be 38, so don't work out the maths on that one...

Next year's edition of the Birmingham Comedy Festival marks its 20th anniversary. How do you think the comedy circuit has changed over that time?

I think 20 years ago the TV comic was only just starting to come out on top. But now, you have the issue as a promoter that you can put on a gig with a load of really great comics and it won't sell too well. Having a TV name definitely makes it easier, but I think it's a shame because people are missing out on so much great comedy just because they haven't seen the act on TV. I was in Band Of Brothers as an angry German housewife, but I don't think that's quite what they're looking for! It's a bit disappointing. There are certainly more opportunities for women than when I started. At that time, you'd only ever get one woman on the bill if you were lucky, but now you might even get two!

Getting more women on the bill was the idea behind your MY Comedy gigs, then?

The motivation behind it when we first started was exactly that - that you could never get more than one woman on a bill. You wouldn't even get a woman alongside a black comic; only one 'speciality act' is what one promoter called it. There was this idea too that having more than one woman on the bill meant that people wouldn't come. MY Comedy was to prove that it was possible; you can have an all-female bill and people will come!

It's a safe environment, not only for the performers but for the audience too. The situation has changed somewhat because now you will get more than one woman on the bill for standard gigs, but I think my audience in particular likes the fact it's a different atmosphere. Some comedy gigs - not all, though - can be quite lairy and feature misogynistic or other derogatory material. I think at MY Comedy we really promote a friendly, inclusive environment. Maybe the reasons we set the gig up in the first place have become less valid, but it still feels like a very nurturing space. It's the same as when you go to an urban gig - it just has that different kind of vibe that you don't get at a mainstream gig.

What obstacles do you think women in comedy face?

The assumption is that women aren't funny. There's no female comic on this earth that hasn't had someone come up to them - usually also a woman - and say, 'I usually don't like female comics, but you're really good!'. They mean it as a compliment, but if you ask them about other female comics, they can't even name one. The standard for comedy is that a straight white man goes out on stage and talks about himself - and he'll be judged on how funny he is. That's stand-up. That's the 'norm'. If a woman goes on stage, or if a black person goes on stage, and we talk about ourselves, we're no longer talking about the norm. The assumption is that women will only appeal to women, a few gay men and maybe the odd vegan. Whereas the assumption when a straight white man talks about himself is that everyone will be interested - but as we well know, that's really not the case!

Every female comic will be judged for always talking about themselves, or for talking about being a woman too much. No one would go up to a male comic and say, 'hey, that was too blokey, and stop talking about your girlfriend or wife so much. We know you're straight and male, but you don't have to shove it down our throats all the time!'. Nobody would do that! But if a gay person 'banged on' about their love life, the reaction would be entirely different. Women are really pleased to hear their own voice reflected back at them from a female comic because they don't get that too often in live comedy, TV and films. Particularly if you're a middle-aged or older woman, you don't hear your own voice anywhere.

You present podcasts, such as Women Talking B*locks, with other female comics, as well as MC'ing your online comedy gigs. Do you think that podcasts and other online or radio content could ever replace live comedy?

It's a whole different kettle of fish. Nothing can ever compete with live comedy. The energy you get from being in the same room as the audience for live comedy, and even theatre, can't be replicated elsewhere. It's like a tennis match: back and forth, back and forth, between audience and performer. In fact, the interaction between the act and the audience can actually make the comic funnier. It's all about rhythm and timing. Whereas when I do Zoom gigs, it's more of a comedy monologue, and podcasts become just funny exchanges between you and a friend - the audience is silent. But in the absence of live comedy, it's been the best available to us.

How are you feeling about the changes live comedy is facing right now?

It's scary because as soon as lockdown started, all our gigs disappeared - and I live off performing live. For comedy, you want the exact opposite of lockdown: a small room with everybody crowded together. It was weird to try and think of ways that I could keep performing. So I've been running MY Comedy Chats every Thursday over Zoom, which is a comedy chat show essentially. I'm starting up MY Comedy Birmingham at Kitchen Garden Cafe again now, but with a lot less people. Work opportunities are few and far between, but even when we're getting gigs, we're getting paid a lot less.

What do you hope for the future of comedy in the UK?

I would love it if people went to comedy nights without caring if there was a TV credit or not... like it used to be, where people knew that it was a good local club and the promoter knew how to pick quality acts. Without small clubs for comics to learn and develop in, we wouldn't have the Michael McIntyres and Frankie Boyles. Great little venues with a fantastic performance space that were run really well are closing down right now. On the reduced audience capacity right now, they just won't be able to pay their staff and the acts. They're a huge loss to local communities, and I think they desperately need to be preserved.

It's the same with other entertainment industries. No band starts off playing the O2! People reckon The Beatles were so good because they spent so many hours doing live gigs in bars and other venues that nobody had ever heard of. Then The Beatles blew up and now The Cavern in Liverpool is famous. In order to be a good comic, you have to put in those same hours gigging - and without the small venues, that won't happen. It's hard to know when we will get back to 'normal', or if we ever will. Coming out the other side of coronavirus, there will probably be far fewer venues and, consequently, far fewer comics. It will be a massive shame. I hope we can find some positives coming out the other side.

REVIEW: Momo's Shrewsbury's independent noodle bar ticks all the boxes

It's been a long time since I've dined at 'the Home of Ramen in Shrewsbury' - Momo's The Noodle Bar. Is it as good as I remember? Yes - it absolutely is!

An integral fixture of the Town of Flowers' vibrant culinary scene, Momo's is a fresh Ramen Noodle Bar serving delicious and authentic Asian cuisine. The popular independent prides itself on using only the freshest of ingredients from local suppliers and boasts contemporary decor - bright white & orange walls and modern furniture.

Dining out, understandably, may not be at the top of everyone's priority list at the moment. However, from the numerous hand-sanitising pumps to the sufficient spacing between the tables, Momo's has everything covered to make diners feel at ease. Every member of staff was wearing a face covering - whether it be a visor or a mask - and kept sufficient distance, where possible, whilst serving.

To start, we ordered three dishes from the Izakaya (light bites) section of the menu: the restaurant's infamous Piggy Bits - pork belly bites tossed in Korean BBQ bulgogi sauce (£6.50); Ebi Tempura - king prawns coated in tempura batter and served with a sweet chilli kewpie mayo (£6); and eight steamed pork & Chinese leaf dumplings with a mild Korean BBQ sauce (£7.50).

The Piggy Bits were every bit as tasty as I remember, and the prawns and dumplings were equally enjoyable. The dumplings, seasoned and nicely cooked, were of a generous size, while the tempura batter coating the meaty prawns was of a perfect consistency. Washed down by a cold, crisp pint of Poretti, they were three appetisers that I'd more than happily order again.

Now for the main event.

Choosing from options which included a range of Donburi - topped sticky rice - Omakase - special noodle bowls - and Ramen, I went for the Miso Bomb - miso-glazed cod, bok choy, ramen noodles and an egg, all served in a beautiful seafood broth (£11). All elements were cooked to perfection - the cod in particular boasted a wonderful melt-in-the-mouth sensation and fell apart to the touch. It was bursting with flavour and nicely presented. To say I was happy with my choice would be an understatement.

A long-standing menu feature at Momo's is the option to 'Pimp My Own Noodle' - perfect for those who prefer to customise their dishes. Firstly, diners can choose from either Vermicelli Rice noodles or Chop Suey egg noodles. Next up are the sauce options: BBQ Bulgogi; Korean Red Pepper; Yakisoba; Oyster &

Garlic; and Chilli & Sweet Soy. A portion of the noodles with your chosen sauce will cost you £8. Lastly, diners can add their protein - pork belly, chilli chicken and chilli squid all cost an additional £3, with spiced halloumi and tofu costing £2.50. My partner was thrilled with his choice of Chop Suey noodles, oyster & garlic sauce and chilli squid, topped with complementary peanut sesame crunch. I tried a piece of the squid. It was delicious and, as with the cod, perfectly cooked.

The portions at Momo's are huge - a fact about which I was more than happy. Rather than having one each, my partner and I had to share a dessert - a rarity at the very least!

Our choice - Black Forest Brûlée - was significant in size too. Priced at £7, it was a creamy classic brûlée topped with sweet black cherry compote and chocolate cake. Yes, you read that correctly - chocolate cake! I'm pretty sure that it's the first time ever that I've eaten a brûlée topped with cake. It certainly won't be the last, though - it was thoroughly enjoyable.

For those who aren't comfortable with sitting in, Momo's now offers both takeaway and delivery via the Zoom one-hour delivery website and app. As the cold weather creeps in, who doesn't find the idea of a large bowl of warm, wholesome carbs delivered straight to your door appealing? It certainly sounds good to me! Lauren Foster

Food & drink delivery app expands across the region

Shrewsbury food & drink delivery app, Zoom 1hr, has expanded further afield into Telford, Oswestry, Newtown, Welshpool, Wrexham, North Wales and Aberystwyth. Founded four years ago, the independent company offers the widest range of food to suit all tastebuds, from Chinese, Indian, American and Italian, to fast food, sweet treats, sushi, fish & chips and Sunday roasts. They're licensed to deliver your favourite drinks, too. Zoom drivers deliver across a huge radius of eight miles from their stores, meaning that more households can enjoy the ease of having their meals delivered from their favourite restaurants.

Ironbridge Gorge's Furnace Kitchen wins major award

The Ironbridge Gorge Museum's Furnace Kitchen has scooped a major award. The restaurant - run by celebrity chef Marcus Bean - took the honour for 'best change of use for an existing building in the West Midlands' at the Local Authority Building Control's Building Excellence Awards. "This is tremendous news for everyone involved," said Marcus. "I was involved in the design and creation right from the beginning, working closely with our architects, Osbornes in Worcestershire. We always wanted to create a space that complemented the existing building, using local trades and our in-house building team to deliver our vision." The kitchen's exciting mix of modern British cuisine and European classics has proved a huge hit with both the public and museum visitors alike.

Oktoberfest beer and good cheer coming to Wolverhampton

It's time to dust off your lederhosen and get set to party at Oktoberfest! The ever-popular day of beer and good cheer takes place at The Hangar in Wolverhampton on Saturday 24 October. With steins of German beer, oompah bands and authentic German food stalls all featuring, what more could you possibly ask for?!

Shrewsbury street food favourites take up permanent residence

Street food favourites Press De Cuba have taken up permanent residence at The Dolphin in Shrewsbury. Regulars at many of the UK's most popular culinary events - including Birmingham's award-winning Digbeth Dining Club - the Shrewsbury-born company is serving up its popular Cubanitos (Cuban sandwiches) alongside a selection of sides and bar snacks - think frickles, smoked sausage bites, homemade sauces and more.

Waitrose to close its Shrewsbury store this December

Waitrose is to close its store on Shrewsbury's Pride Hill. The Little Waitrose store is due to close on 6 December, putting 34 jobs at risk. The Shrewsbury store is one of four to close in the country. In a statement, Waitrose said: "Sadly, we have not been able to find a way to make these shops profitable in the long-term, despite the hard work of everyone involved."
