New Vic Theatre reveals autumn-season shows

A production of Romeo & Juliet - starring comedian Russell Kane - the stage premiere of Gladstone Girls - written by Stoke-on-Trent-born Academy Award winner Rachel Shenton - and a Christmas-season production of The Borrowers are among the highlights of the New Victoria Theatre's autumn season. Commenting on the forthcoming theatrical attractions, the Newcastle-under-Lyme venue's artistic director, Theresa Heskins, said: "I'm delighted that in our 40th anniversary year, we're announcing a programme that will showcase our core values: that everyone should have access to great theatre; that local talent should be prized and nurtured; that young people's first experiences of theatre should inspire them with a lifetime's love for it." To check out the venue's full programme, visit its website at newvictheatre.org.uk

Programme of events to mark 375th anniversary

Worcestershire is this year commemorating the 375th anniversary of the Battle of Worcester - the conflict that brought the English Civil Wars to a dramatic close. Museums Worcestershire has joined with Visit Worcestershire to create and promote a year of events. Presented under the umbrella title of English Civil War 375, the programme of attractions and activities includes exhibitions, creative workshops and 'spectacular' living-history experiences. Commenting on the initiative, Visit Worcestershire's Lorna Robinson said: "The county played a decisive role in the struggle between monarchy and parliament, and Worcester's place in that journey is powerful, profound and should be globally recognised. Civil War 375 gives us the opportunity to tell this story with pride, to attract new audiences, to drive heritage tourism, and to showcase the incredible assets, businesses and experiences we have across the county."

ROCK & ROLLIN' BACK THE YEARS

The New Vic celebrates its 40th birthday with a revival of hit Stoke musical Good Golly Miss Molly...

Telling a story inspired by the social history of Stoke-on-Trent, pioneering musical Good Golly Miss Molly comes home to the New Vic this month, nearly 40 years after its premiere at the theatre. The play is written by Bob Eaton, who also returns to the director's chair to revive the production, which features a cast of 10 actor-musicians playing foot-stomping rock & roll. What's On caught up with Bob to find out more about both the history of the show and the 2026 revival...

Billed as 'a powerful, music-fuelled, feel-good drama', Good Golly Miss Molly follows a community who choose to fight back when their street faces demolition - while in the process, the titular Molly Gordon reforms her old rock & roll band, Ronnie Angel And The Devils.

The play was originally written and directed by Bob Eaton, who returns to the helm as the production is revived in celebration of the New Vic's 40th anniversary. Bob's own story is closely linked to the theatre - and the tale of Miss Molly herself...

"My history goes right back to the old Victoria Theatre," says Bob. "I joined as assistant to [artistic director] Peter Cheeseman in 1971 - that was my first job. I spent three years working with Peter. One of his specialities was the local 'documentary'. [Peter] used music, but it was always folk music - often using local stories and the words of local people."

Bob took a leaf out of Peter's book when he was appointed artistic director of the Everyman Theatre in Liverpool, producing Lennon - a groundbreaking play exploring the legacy of John Lennon, who had been murdered the previous year [1980].

"You're dealing with real people's lives, real people's memories," explains Bob. "So I did a Cheeseman on it; I went and interviewed as many people as I could and built the show out of those memories - and of course the songs of John Lennon."

Two years after the New Vic opened (in 1986), Bob returned to work with Peter, who encouraged him to create another documentary-style play, inspired by the residents of Stoke-on-Trent.

"I was looking around for a possible local story, and I came upon the residents of the Hawes Street area in Tunstall. They'd formed a residents' association and were fighting the council, who wanted to demolish their houses. I went into the working men's club, which was kind of the headquarters of the residents' association, and it took me right back to my teenage years when I used to play in a rock & roll band - or 'rhythm group' as we called them back in the mid-60s - in a place just exactly like that: a working men's club in Darley Dale in Derbyshire. It suddenly occurred to me that I could tell a story similar to the Hawes Street story, but it would kind of be my story as well - my story of growing up with rock & roll. Rather than write myself in, as it were, I would imagine a young woman the same age as me growing up in an area like Tunstall somewhere in the Potteries - it suddenly all came together."

While it harks back to the 1960s, Good Golly Miss Molly was written and set at the end of the 1980s - reflecting the political landscape of the era. Nearly 40 years later, the revived production will transport audiences back in time to a previous generation.

"It's like a retrospective of a retrospective! Liz Evans has been the designer at the New Vic ever since we first did Good Golly Miss Molly. It was the first show she worked on, as an assistant, so you could say she knows the show! She gets it completely. She's been able to make it very clear through the design that we are in a club that's been around for a few years - we're in 1989, but it's a club that's had a life. All the sticky carpets!"

Speaking of reunions, also joining the company is Richard Hague, who played the leader of Molly's band, Ronnie Angel, in the original production.

"That character goes from the age of mid-teens to late 20s/early 30s. Richard was the right age to do it then, but he's a bit old for that part now! He's playing Molly's grandad... He kind of brings the seal of authenticity to it - he's such a lovely chap."

The company is comprised of actor-musicians - now a common sight in theatre productions, but a brand-new concept back in the 1980s.

"Lennon, the show I was talking about, was actually the first actor-musician theatre show ever, anywhere in the world. The generation of actors who grew up with me, a lot of them, like me, played in groups in their teenage years - so suddenly I was in a situation where I could use actor-musicians."

Featuring actors who can provide their own musical soundtrack makes for particularly immersive storytelling, especially in a production like Good Golly Miss Molly, where rock & roll takes centre stage. But it wasn't always plain sailing...

"In the first few shows I did with actor-musicians, it was chaos! Everyone was plonking on their guitars all the time. I used to get so frazzled! I used to finish up shouting 'No plonking!' What's happened in the years since then is that a way of working has developed where there's this whole discipline now. Everybody understands what the game is, and everybody knows when to be quiet, when to concentrate and when to let off steam."

Returning to the New Vic for its ruby anniversary, Bob also revisits a directing style dictated by the theatre's auditorium - performances are presented 'in the round', with the audience encircling the action.

"I started at the old Victoria Theatre, so my first 10 to 15 years were 90% directing in the round - it's automatic to me. It's great, though - you learn something all the time. What I'm very keen on these days is something we started off with in the first production of Good Golly Miss Molly: the front row of the audience are seated at pub tables, like cabaret seating. It's very easy for them to get up and dance, and for members of the company to sit at the table with them, so there's a blurred line between the audience and the action."

Good Golly Miss Molly proved a huge hit with audiences, prompting the production to be revived at the New Vic twice in the early 90s, before being transferred to London's West End. As the latest revival of this iconic Stoke production draws nearer, Bob is looking forward to the many reunions which will take place during the run - but most of all, to the brand-new memories that will be made.

"Richard Hague has managed to contact a load of people who were actually in the show in various productions at the New Vic. So we've got a great crowd of people coming who have been in the show over the years, as well as the audience members who remember it... But there's a lot of people, of course, who know absolutely nothing of it, which is really exciting!"

Live music from across the region...

Gnome

KK's Steel Mill, Wolverhampton, Wed 1 April

Belgian stoner rock/metal band Gnome combine irresistible hooks and thundering guitars, drums & bass to excellent effect. Led by Rutger Verbist, they released debut and experimental album Father Of Time in 2018. They followed up four years later with King - a collection of songs built around the concept of a fictional war between King Wenceslas and gnomes. Third album Vestiges Of Verumex Visidrome was released in 2024... If you've never been to a Gnome live show before, be sure to hold onto your hats, because the boys certainly will be - the red pointy ones evident in the below image. "It's our signature look," explains Rutger, "but it doesn't mean that we'll be putting on a clown show!"

As for their music, expect a meander through groovy headbangers, adventurous tunes, and what Rutger likes to refer to as "100% gnome-hatted badassery".

Huey Morgan

The Edge Arts Centre, Much Wenlock, South Shropshire, Sat 11 April

Huey Morgan came to prominence as the frontman of eclectic American rap/rock outfit Fun Lovin' Criminals, with whom he toured and recorded for almost 30 years. He also hosted The Huey Show on BBC Radio 6 Music from 2008 until last year, leaving the station in December and joining Virgin Radio. This Shropshire appearance sees him presenting a show mixing music and chat.

Badly Drawn Boy

The Buttermarket, Shrewsbury, Sun 26 April

Damon Gough's debut album, The Hour Of Bewilderbeast, announced him as a star in the making, winning him the Mercury Music Prize in the year 2000. Two years later, he penned the score for the Hugh Grant film About A Boy, and then quickly followed up with two further albums: Have You Fed The Fish? and One Plus One Is One.

Touring solo for much of the time since those heady early-career days, he's recorded only one album in the last 14 years but retains a solid fanbase. Damon's late-afternoon Shrewsbury show combines songs, stories and conversation. The event is hosted by BBC 6 Music's Chris Hawkins and is fully seated.

Blue

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 13 April

One-time superstar boyband Blue - featuring Simon Webbe, Duncan James, Antony Costa and Lee Ryan - burst onto the scene a quarter of a century ago with three chart-topping albums. A six-year hiatus followed, but they've been back together and creating a stir since 2011... This Potteries stop-off comes as part of a double-purpose tour, not only celebrating 25 glorious years but also promoting their recently released all-new studio album, Reflections.

Ian McNabb

Foxlowe Arts Centre, Leek, Fri 24 April

A winning blend of soaring melodies, powerful vocals and poetic lyricism define the music of Ian McNabb. After rising to prominence in the 1980s as the frontman and creative force behind The Icicle Works, the charismatic singer-songwriter kicked off the shackles of band membership in the 1990s, launching what has since proved to be a hugely successful - and prolific - solo career.

The Undercover Hippy

Katie Fitzgeralds, Stourbridge, Sun 5 April

Billy Rowan (aka The Undercover Hippy) brings together acoustic guitar, soulful vocals, infectious reggae rhythms and the lyrical delivery of a talented MC. Billy and his bandmates are visiting Stourbridge with their Real Life Tour. The boys are urging their fans to sack off their digital identities, if just for one night, 'and come and get sweaty with one of the most delicious crowds you will ever encounter'. Wolverhampton-based Jaivant Patel Company is celebrating 20 years of South Asian Arts and Heritage...

Founded in Wolverhampton in 2006, Jaivant Patel Company is celebrating 20 years of South Asian Arts and Heritage in the Black Country. The Midlands-based institution creates contemporary productions influenced by a myriad of South Asian Dance forms, and is leading the way in amplifying LGBTQ+ South Asian voices - exploring the intersections of race, gender, sexuality, faith, and spirituality. Dancer, choreographer and the company's founder and artistic & creative director, Jaivant Patel, sat down with What's On to look back on two decades of dance in the Midlands...

Jaivant Patel, your Wolverhampton-based arts company has helped to express your experience as a member of the South Asian and LGBTQ+ communities for 20 years. How did it all begin?

It was all born out of underrepresentation. It was born out of a lack of seeing people like me, from Wolverhampton, with the same characteristics as me - I wanted to pull some of that back into a city that I love. I trained at the Northern School of Contemporary Dance and came back to Wolverhampton in 2004. On a whim, I applied to the Arts Council for some funding. I purposefully came back to Wolverhampton, because everybody was swanning off to London and the North East - Newcastle in particular was really growing in terms of the British dance scene. I didn't want to go to those spaces and places; I wanted to come back home. I applied for this funding and suddenly this whole new world just opened up for me.

You and the company have got deep roots in Wolverhampton, but how do you make and maintain connections with other organisations?

I think what Jaivant Patel Company has always been good at is visibility. We've always been visible, and I'm not just talking about being visible regionally. I'm talking about the visibility that we have nationally - and in many cases, internationally as well. From our little base here in Wolverhampton and at the Art Gallery, we keep on having conversation and dialogue that matters. For the last three years, we have been running a seed commission called Samānatā for South Asian Queer performance. It is currently the only seed commission available for performance for South Asian Queer creatives. And that's running in partnership with Bradford Arts Centre, formerly known as Kala Sangam. We've had a relationship with them since 2017. It just made sense that we maximised what our relationship meant, so that the North and the Midlands had a share of what that development for artists could look like. In our 20th year, we are bringing on South East Dance with that collaboration as well.

I think it's safe to say that Jaivant Patel Company is the only UK-based company specifically making work around the South Asian Queer experience. Nobody else has done that to this level. Within Western contexts, that might not be groundbreaking or innovative. Within a South Asian perspective, it absolutely is groundbreaking.

What projects is the company working on at the moment?

We have professional touring work, which is fundamentally engaged towards amplifying South Asian LGBTQ+ voices and narratives. We have community engagement work, which is a series of workshops, classes and events for the community - platforms where we showcase emerging community groups within professional settings. Then we have our heritage arm, which really looks more closely at the development of the South Asian community within these areas - and the ability to keep their heritage and their histories alive, as a documentation for future generations. We would define ourselves as 'a South Asian arts & heritage organisation with a focus on dance'.

The 20th year will also involve the London premiere of our current work, Astitva, and the development of another piece of work that we're making for unconventional spaces, which is called a Hridayam. And we're also going to be thinking about how we make those two works accessible and how we may look at a piece of work in retrospect. We're also taking the time to reflect and think about how we adapt; the sector is changing, and the cultural landscape is changing more now than ever.

What projects and achievements are you particularly proud of from the last 20 years?

I'm really proud of Astitva. I'm really proud of what we managed to do with that production because it breaks so many stereotypes and so many norms. It challenges what the South Asian body is in dance. It challenges what contemporary dance is and what we mean by that, and it also brings to the forefront what British South Asian identity means. I think what's been great about this is the ability for it to speak to audiences that go beyond an arts world.

It's even greater to see members of the South Asian community coming out to see the work - because of curiosity, because of dialogue, or because they might be connected with somebody who's from the [LGBTQ+] community. Or they might be a member of the community themselves. I remember in 2024 when we took Waltzing The Blue Gods to The Place - the home of contemporary dance in London - the majority of the audience which attended that performance in London were from the South Asian Queer community and had never set foot inside The Place [before]. It's great to see how the doors have been opened to this community.

After two decades you are well established in the city - do you put that down to your loyal audiences in Wolverhampton?

We've been very lucky that we've managed to break [into] the audiences of Wolverhampton - they support us. That's by no means a small task, when you think about the lack of infrastructure that exists in Black Country towns - there is very little investment that comes in from funding bodies, for example, versus somewhere like Birmingham, which has got a massive infrastructure and a lot of investment. Now, that's not to say the funding bodies are at fault, but if the infrastructure doesn't exist, then people aren't creating work to the same level or the same frequency as other big cities which already have that infrastructure.

I'm really happy that we're known for what we do in the city. We are respected. There's a connectedness, but also that connection has grown to wherever we go outside Wolverhampton on tour, because people speak to people - especially when you come from a diaspora that has a history of migration, right? There is a connection that's everywhere across the whole world. So it's great that the word spreads. I always love it when people come [to see us] on the recommendation of someone else who's seen the work.

Where would you like Jaivant Patel Company to be in another 20 years?

I want to be still running! I want to have grown - I would love a space for dancing in Wolverhampton, a space for dance, a space for us to further embed what we do, and the ability to create mid-scale and large-scale work as well.

Classical music from across the region...

Ex Cathedra: The Garden Of Love

St Peter's Church, Wolverhampton, Sat 25 April

"[Our concert] celebrates Spring and the season of beauty and love with a programme of ravishing music to delight the senses; a 'grand tour' of earthly delights."

So says Ex Cathedra's founder & conductor Jeffrey Skidmore, in talking about the programme of 'evocative imagery and shimmering harmony' which the ensemble is performing in this two-hour-long concert. Featured works include Claude Le Jeune's Revey venir du Printans (from Le printemps) and a world premiere from Bobbie-Jane Gardner, who takes inspiration from Daisaku Ikeda's concept of 'human flowers'.

Roderick Williams & Iain Burnside

St Laurence's Church, Ludlow, South Shropshire, Fri 10 April

Internationally acclaimed baritone Roderick Williams teams up with pianist Iain Burnside to present a programme devised around the UK premiere of music by American composer Libby Larsen. Libby's new work sees eight delicate haiku settings being interwoven with thematically related songs by composers including Britten, Finzi and Schubert.

Shrewsbury Cantata Choir

St Chad's Church, Shrewsbury, Sat 25 April

Shrewsbury Cantata Choir are gearing up for their 40th-anniversary celebrations next year with four concerts across the rest of 2026. The first of these sees the choir teaming up with Shrewsbury Sinfonia to present a performance of Antonín Dvořák's Stabat Mater, a setting of a medieval Latin poem which describes the suffering of the Virgin Mary at the Crucifixion.

Maxwell Quartet

Keele University, Staffordshire, Wed 22 April

First encountering one another while playing in youth orchestras in Scotland, the all-male Maxwell Quartet often perform classical repertoire and new music alongside folk-inspired work. Although most readily associated with the music of Haydn, the boys are here presenting a concert featuring pieces by three other classical composers: Beethoven (String Quartet in A major, Op18 No5), Prokofiev (String Quartet No2, Op92 in F Major 'On Kabardinian themes') and Dvorak (String Quartet No13 in G major, Op106). A selection of Scottish folk music completes the evening's programme.

CBSO: Brahms' German Requiem

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Thurs 23 April

It took Johannes Brahms three years to compose this stunning work, a large-scale piece - his longest-ever composition - for chorus, orchestra, a soprano and a baritone soloist.

The City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra here perform the work with the assistance of soprano Sophie Bevan (pictured) and baritone Gareth Brynmore John. The concert programme also features Henry Purcell's Funeral Music For Queen Mary.

Spanish Galicia Symphony Orchestra

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Sat 11 April

In part coming to prominence by virtue of their online videos, the Spanish Galicia Symphony Orchestra are here making their Symphony Hall debut.

Alongside foot-tapping dances and evocative folk melodies, their programme also features Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez and two works by Maurice Ravel: his enchanting fairytale suite Mother Goose and the iconic Boléro...

The orchestra are joined by the brilliant Thibaut Garcia, an award-winning French guitarist whose Spanish origins have significantly influenced his style of play.

BRUCE'S GOT TALENT

Bruce Herbelin-Earle talks about starring in the touring production of The Talented Mr Ripley

Having played to sold-out houses last year, a touring stage production of The Talented Mr Ripley returns to the region this month. Patricia Highsmith's acclaimed novel has previously spawned a movie and TV series, but the theatrical version takes the story to another, more intense level, according to cast member Bruce Herbelin-Earle...

Chances are you've already come across The Talented Mr Ripley. Patricia Highsmith's psychological thriller (the first of five books to feature the titular character) is a global bestseller and one of the 100 Novels That Shaped Our World, according to the BBC. It's also been turned into a hugely successful movie (featuring Matt Damon and Jude Law), and a critically acclaimed Netflix TV series starring Andrew Scott.

To top things off, last September saw the British premiere of a stage version adapted & directed by Black Country native Mark Leipacher, followed by a tour which proved so popular that another three months of dates have been added.

Set in the 1950s, the novel/play follows lowly New York conman Tom Ripley, who is hired by a wealthy stranger to track down and bring home his charming but wayward son, Dickie Greenleaf, who is frittering away his time living the high life on the Italian Riviera. Ripley jumps at the opportunity, but quickly becomes seduced by the opulent lifestyle of his target. Deciding that he wants it for himself, he is prepared to do anything to secure it, from manipulation and seduction, to lies, deceit and even murder.

It's a potent mix that makes for a thrilling night at the theatre, according to English-French actor/model Bruce Herbelin-Earle. The star of Netflix drama Free Rein is making his professional stage debut as Dickie, and believes Leipacher's adaptation offers a genuinely new take on the source material, whether viewers are familiar with previous incarnations or not.

"Regardless of whether you've read the book or seen the film, this stage adaptation pushes the story's emotional intensity to new heights," he says, admitting he'd seen the film, avoided the TV show once he was cast, and made the novel his "bible" while preparing for the role - not least because the stage version leaves a similarly significant element to the imagination.

"[Theatre is] a different medium, so we play with a lot of elements of naturalism and unnaturalism," he says. "I also didn't want to look at what Jude Law did and try to imitate it; I wanted to have my own spin on things.

"The Dickie you get in the stage show is a little more unpredictable, a little more dangerous, a touch more aggressive, and a little more boisterous in what he asks for. He can also be the opposite of that - charming and energetic, impulsive and childlike, and very lovely."

All of which makes the character more fun to play - and potentially more of a match for Ripley. Dickie could also be a trickier proposition for the conman in terms of manipulation, not least because of the confidence and privilege afforded him through wealth.

"We've played a lot with the subtext, and once you start really reading between the lines of who Dickie is and what he says, it's really interesting. Especially during that time period in the 50s when class was very much a thing - all the things you had to be conscious about: what people talk about and what they don't; what they do behind closed doors. On top of that, this guy has unlimited money - he doesn't have to prove anything to anyone, blah blah blah. He's a lot of things, and he's so alive, and that's a really fun thing to play."

The production's 10-strong ensemble cast also includes Ed McVey (best known for his role as Prince William in Netflix drama The Crown) as Ripley, with Maisie Smith (Tiffany Dean in EastEnders and a 2020 finalist in Strictly Come Dancing) as his girlfriend, Marge. Bruce says that the entire cast have become firm friends, and that the scenes when they're all on stage at once are especially thrilling. Indeed, the book's famous line - 'We're always being watched' - and themes of voyeurism and surveillance are cleverly depicted on stage by having the main protagonists - particularly Ripley - constantly watched by the rest of the cast.

"Tom Ripley is being haunted by these figures within his mind, and that gives the ensemble such a huge part to play. They're haunting him! We come up from under the platform, from out of it, from the wings. We really intersect. In the bits where the ensemble get involved, it's almost like they're controlling and directing Ripley, much like on a TV studio or film set."

Speaking of sets, the book (and film, and TV series) jumps about between exotic international locations - so how does the play address that element?

"Through the staging and lighting. We're essentially in this huge light cage, and the lights change corresponding to where we are. We start in New York, and then Tom makes his way over to Italy... it's just about switching it up.

"We're basically on this huge platform with a huge hole in the middle. It's a bright white canvas, and combined with the lights, it makes for a lovely eerie setting when we want it to, and a beautiful Italian summer when we need it. It's really cleverly designed. It makes you sit a little forward in your seat. It's really engaging, and definitely a piece of theatre that keeps you thinking way after you leave."

Bruce also believes The Talented Mr Ripley is the perfect show in which to make his professional stage debut ("I'd been holding out for a part such as this"). He is eternally grateful for a tip-off about the role given to him by his "guardian angel" Rob Kelly, his casting director on Free Rein. Getting the part meant he had to quickly rekindle the skills developed in theatre work as a youngster, since he has no formal drama training.

"I grew up doing stage, so it became all about tapping back into projection, voice, posture... After that, the acting follows, and I felt like I could let loose a little more and flex that muscle again. It's a huge cliché, but that's what it's like to be on stage - you're constantly flexing those muscles to reach the back wall. I'm blessed, and I'm very, very happy. I definitely hope to follow up this project with more theatre. That's my ideal."

SHREWSBURY FLAXMILL MALTINGS

Comedy previews from across the region...

Suzi Ruffell

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Fri 24 April;
Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Fri 29 May

Gay, quirky and delightfully self-deprecating, Suzi Ruffell has well and truly made her mark in the challenging world of comedy. Alongside her stand-up shows, she's written books and contributed as a writer to television series including 8 Out of 10 Cats, The Last Leg and Stand Up For The Week. She also co-hosts smash-hit podcasts Big Kick Energy with Maisie Adam and Like Minded Friends with Tom Allen, as well as having her very own podcast: OUT With Suzi Ruffell.

Away from comedy, Suzi lists her 'likes' as 'cooking' and 'those cats with no hair'.

Jonny Cole

Walsall Arena, Fri 10 & Sat 11 April; Artrix, Bromsgrove, Tues 14 - Wed 15 April; The Civic, Stourport, Thurs 23 - Fri 24 April

"It's difficult for me to put my brand of comedy into an industry-standard soundbite," says local comedian Jonny Cole. "There are a lot of people who love Black Country humour and who'd love to go into a rough & ready Black Country pub just to listen to the banter - and that's exactly what I do. I've absorbed Black Country humour the whole of my life. I take it out of that pub - where people wouldn't dare go, in case they got their teeth knocked out - and I put it into a safe, controlled environment where they can enjoy it."

Max Amini

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 13 & Tues 14 April

With publicity that states he's the most-watched comedian on Instagram and has the fastest-growing comedy channel in the US, Iranian-American comedian Max Amini brings together eccentric impressions and novel storytelling to explore a wide range of topics. In the process, he pokes fun at the quirks of modern society and highlights the challenges of navigating cultural differences. No slouch when it comes to improvisation, Max is promising a joyride of a show 'that will leave you in stitches and rolling in the aisles'.

Josh Widdicombe

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Sat 18 April;
Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 5 May

Peddling a nice line in exasperated humour, Devon-raised funnyman Josh Widdicombe pumps out his cleverly crafted gags at a brisk pace, hitting the mark with the vast majority of his observational material. Widdicombe jokes include: "Hotdogs cause bum cancer - that was the original slogan for McDonald's before 'I'm loving it'." Josh visits the Midlands this month and next with his new touring show, Not My Cup Of Tea. It's an endeavour which he describes as 'shorter and with lower production values than Taylor Swift's Eras Tour, but funnier and with more references to tea'.

aims to 'find positivity in life, despite all the evidence to the contrary in politics and his own health' (Matt was diagnosed with a rare form of bone cancer in 2023 but is now disease-free).

Fun! With Barbara Nice

The Edge Arts Centre, Much Wenlock, South Shropshire, Fri 24 April; The Albany Theatre, Coventry, Fri 1 May; Foxlowe Arts Centre, Leek, Fri 5 June

"In these dark days, we need to find fun whenever we piggin' can," says everybody's favourite Kings Heath housewife, the incomparable Mrs Barbara Nice.

Barbara is taking her latest 'laugh-out-loud' offering to venues across the region over the next couple of months.

"Laughter is the noise we make when we make connections," she says. "It's like two live wires meeting; two opposing forces or ideas meet head on, and the energy of the clash between them makes a thunderclap of laughter!"

Matt Forde

Huntingdon Hall, Worcester, Wed 15 April;
Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Thurs 4 June;
The Glee Club, Birmingham, Wed 8 July

A one-time advisor to New Labour (he gave up his membership of the party when Jeremy Corbyn became leader), Midlands-born Matt Forde is this month returning to the region with Defying Calamity, a show in which he

IN A LEAGUE OF HIS OWN

Mark Gatiss makes his RSC debut in a role he's always wanted to play...

TV star, writer, director and double Olivier Award-winning actor Mark Gatiss is set to make his Royal Shakespeare Company debut as the titular character in Bertolt Brecht's The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui. It's a genuine stars-aligning moment for Mark - not only has he coveted the role of Arturo since he was a teenager, but the play itself has never been more relevant...

When Mark Gatiss received an unexpected message from theatre director Seán Linnen last year, its content could scarcely have been more exciting to the actor, writer, director & producer, who's best known as a member of comedy troupe The League Of Gentlemen and for co-creating BBC TV series Sherlock.

"He texted me out of the blue and said 'Have you ever thought about doing Arturo Ui?' I said I've thought of nothing else since I was 15!" he laughs.

Actors often tell you they've 'always wanted' to play their latest role, but in the case of County Durham native Mark, there's evidence to support the claim.

"I saw [the play] at Darlington Civic Theatre [now Hippodrome] with Robin Askwith from the Confessions films in the lead role. Every time I tell people that, they go 'honestly, really?' He was so good, and I can still remember parts of it so vividly, as it kind of blew my mind.

"I thought, God this is so powerful - especially the final speech when he says 'Although the world stood up and stopped the bastard, the bitch that bore him is in heat again.' The room went black, and we all sat there in the audience kind of stunned. It was the first show I saw that made me go 'Wow, this is what it can do; this is the power of theatre.'"

Written in 1941 and set in 1930s Chicago, Bertolt Brecht's play - concerning itself with a mobster and small-time crook who will stop at nothing to control the local cauliflower racket - is a satire on Hitler's ascent to power and the rise of the Nazi Party and far right. Just some historic artefact with no significance to the modern world, then...

"No relevance whatsoever! I've always wanted to do the play and thought about it many times over the years, but now it's painfully relevant. The really scary thing is how the playbook is being used again. Mark Twain said 'History doesn't repeat itself but sometimes it rhymes' - it's not exactly the same, but it's coming up a lot at the moment, isn't it?"

The parallels to a world that wakes up every day wondering what Donald Trump has done overnight are almost painful. Mark admits the rehearsal room has been a place for the cast to sound off about what's been going on. "We have a lot of table discussions about the state of the world, and everyone sort of ends up staring into space. The play used to be a warning from history, but now it's the news."

The actor also knows that a production which reflects the horrors of the world can be both a good and a bad thing - there's a strong argument that a night at the theatre should be an escape from reality - but says the show is also a lot of fun.

"It's a gangster spectacle, a sort of cartoon of it all, and there's a lot to be enjoyed in that. Brecht loved gangster movies and all the sort of stuff we've become familiar with, so it's quite playful and fantastical. There's something clownish about people like Capone, even the look of him: the white hat and the tommy guns in violin cases - like the Ant Hill Mob in Wacky Races!

"I think the great thing is that it's a wonderful way of, as Brecht would have said, showing the message through a very entertaining vehicle. You can instantly make a connection between a small-time gangster and a dictator. The really fascinating thing is Ui, like Hitler, was kind of a joke. He was just one of many agitators, but then found his moment and way in. The terrifying thing is how easily that can happen."

Also terrifying is the incremental way in which taking advantage of that 'moment' can be achieved, without people necessarily noticing until it's too late...

"That's what we're living in. That's the thing with Trump and the sort of hyper normalisation of it, or what Steve Bannon calls flooding the zone. Something that was inconceivable five minutes ago is now the norm."

Erring on the side of caution in terms of giving too much away, Mark admits the show will have a dark carnival atmosphere (shades of The League Of Gentleman?). This will be heightened by a 'glitteringly expansive, darkly seductive and deeply theatrical score' (to quote the show's director) by alternative rock band Placebo, which will be performed live every night.

"The music is very key, and they're a perfect fit for the sort of brooding menace of it, but they can also be very playful," suggests Mark, who says he and the cast are revelling in their roles, despite some of the bleaker elements of the show.

"We're having fun as well as all the dark stuff. Having conceived the project with Seán, I don't feel like I'm just strolling in and doing my part - but at the same time, it's also nice to be giving myself over to it."

Mark is also delighted to finally be making his Royal Shakespeare Company (RSC) debut, which has clearly been a long time coming.

"I've been asked before, but it's never been the right thing or the right moment. I've said this elsewhere, but when I was a kid, the RSC was absolutely the gold standard for where we all wanted to head. I always think of having a blue paperback of a play with a black & white picture on the back of someone in jogging trousers and no shoes, listening to a director. It was magical - and it was always an RSC production. It was an extraordinary thing."

An exceptional element to this show is the speed with which it has gone from idea to reality. Following his initial chat with Seán Linnen, Mark says the wheels turned far quicker than either could have imagined, even though they knew they wanted to strike while the play carried such contemporary heft.

"Seán messaged [RSC co-artistic directors] Daniel [Evans] and Tamara [Harvey], and they immediately went for it. That was a year ago, so they've made it possible in theatrical terms very quickly, which is fantastic.

"It was like, how can we do this now? It's not a rapid-response play - it's 80-odd years old - so trying to get it on was difficult. The machinery of theatres and buildings can be so slow, but they've moved heaven and earth to get it on, which is fantastic."

Now Mark can look forward to immersing himself in his character and his new surrounds for the play's relatively short (six-week) run, but with the caveats of a polymath who typically has a number of projects on the go at any given time.

"A funny thing always happens when you do a play. Once it's up and running, you're saying 'Well, obviously I've got all the day free.' But what happens is you transform into a creature of the night. You finish work at 10 o'clock and there's the inevitable social angle. Then the next day is just written off because you're just exhausted."

So he's not juggling his next writing, directing, producing or acting project alongside starring in the show, then?

"I could say, but I'd have to kill you."

Waitress

Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 28 April - Sat 2 May; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 1 - Sat 6 June; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 6 - Sat 11 July

This smash-hit Broadway and West End musical is based on the 2007 movie of the same name and visits the Midlands with West End favourite Carrie Hope Fletcher heading the cast.

Expert pie maker Jenna is trapped in a loveless marriage to a controlling and abusive man. She dreams of a better future. When a baking contest - and the town's new doctor - provide her with the hope of something better, she has to decide whether she can find the strength and courage to rebuild her life.

The challenge she faces becomes even harder when her husband discovers the cash she's been squirreling away with the intention of leaving him...

Billed as a musical celebration of friendship, motherhood, and the magic of a well-made pie, Waitress co-stars Les Dennis as Old Joe, with Evelyn Hoskins and Sandra Marvin also featuring.

The Choir Of Man

The Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Tues 7 - Sat 11 April; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 14 - Sat 18 July; Malvern Theatres, Tues 21 - Sat 25 July; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 20 - Sat 24 October

A smash hit in the West End, with an Olivier Award nomination further proving its credentials, The Choir Of Man is no conventional theatre production. Set in a pub, featuring 'a wildly talented group of incredible instrumentalists, world-class wordsmiths, and sensational singers', it's brimming with hits from artists including Queen, Luther Vandross, Paul Simon, Adele and Katy Perry. There's no story to follow as such - the show maybe feels more like a gig than a play - but there's certainly plenty to enjoy across its near two-hour running time.

The Rocky Horror Show

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Mon 13 - Sat 18 April; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 6 - Sat 11 July

Hook up your fishnets, tighten your corsets and prepare to 'do The Time Warp again' - The Rocky Horror Show is returning to the Midlands! Richard O'Brien's cult production tells the tale of the straight-laced Brad and the deliciously corruptible Janet, who arrive at the castle of the alien transvestite Frank N Furter and witness the birth of the monster, Rocky. Along the way, they take the audience through a selection of love-'em-or-loathe-'em musical numbers, including Damn It Janet, Sweet Transvestite, and The Time Warp. Great fun's a guarantee - particularly if you get into the spirit of things and attend the show dressed in your very best stockings & suspenders (as many patrons do)!

Barnum

Birmingham Hippodrome,
Tues 21 - Sat 25 April

This Watermill Theatre revival might well strike a chord with long-in-the-tooth theatre-goers, calling to mind memories of 40-plus years ago, when the show was the talk of the town. Telling the story of 'America's Greatest Showman', Phineas T Barnum, the musical premiered on Broadway in 1980, with one-time Carry On cast member Jim Dale taking the title role. The West End version opened the following year, and established Some Mothers Do 'ave 'em star Michael Crawford as one of the UK's brightest theatrical talents. Featuring hit numbers Come Follow The Band, The Colours Of My Life and There Is A Sucker Born Ev'ry Minute, this critically acclaimed production stars musical theatre favourite and one-time Joseph star Lee Mead in the title role. Acrobats, circus acts, and an ensemble cast of over 20 actor-musicians - playing 150 instruments between them - further add to the show's appeal.

Black Is The Color Of My Voice

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Mon 20 April;
Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Tues 28 April

Inspired by the life of jazz icon Nina Simone, Black Is The Color Of My Voice follows a successful singer and civil rights activist seeking redemption after the death of her father. Her grief provides an opportunity to reflect on the journey that took her from a piano prodigy destined for a life in the service of the church, to a renowned jazz vocalist at the forefront of the Civil Rights Movement.

The show features a selection of classic tunes, including Feeling Good, I Put A Spell On You, Mississippi Goddamn, I Love You Porgy and See-Line Woman.

Agatha Christie's Death On The Nile

The Alexandra, Birmingham,
Tues 7 - Sat 11 April

Take a play by the Queen of Crime - Agatha Christie - and a company experienced in producing theatrical adaptations of her work - Fiery Angel - and there's every chance you'll end up with an evening of high-quality, brain-teasing drama...

And this new adaptation of Death On The Nile promises to be just that.

When a couple's idyllic honeymoon is cut short by a brutal murder, it's time for Belgian detective Hercule Poirot to put his 'little grey cells' to work and uncover the perpetrator of the dastardly crime... Mark Hadfield plays Poirot, with Dempsey & Makepeace star Glynis Barber also featuring in the cast.

Sunny Afternoon

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent,
Tues 7 - Sat 11 April

This clever homage to Swinging '60s supergroup The Kinks has been wowing audiences and critics in equal measure since opening in the West End in 2014 - so much so, in fact, that it won the Laurence Olivier Award for Best New Musical. Adapted from Joe Penhall's book, with an original story by Kinks guitarist, vocalist & songwriter Ray Davies, it features plenty of the band's best-known tunes, including iconic tracks You Really Got Me, Waterloo Sunset, Dedicated Follower Of Fashion, All Day And All Of The Night and Lola.

Small Island

The Rep, Birmingham, Wed 1 - Sat 18 April

The joyful rhythms of calypso bring life and colour to the harsh realities of post-war Britain in this brand-new stage adaptation of Andrea Levy's multi-award-winning novel of the same name.

Telling a Windrush story about empire and entitlement, the play follows the experiences of Jamaican migrants Hortense and Gilbert. Newly arrived in England, they come into contact with Queenie, a woman defying convention, and her husband Bernard, a reserved and awkward man struggling to come to terms with the changes which are happening around him.

Haunted Shadows

Wolverhampton Arts Centre, Tues 28 April

Although best known for penning classic family-favourite novel The Railway Children, Edith Nesbit also wrote stories in the gothic-horror genre - and this critically acclaimed production brings together three of them. In the first tale, The Shadow, a repressed housekeeper encounters an abominable entity... The Pavilion, meanwhile, sees the shade of a long-dead necromancer envelop a social gathering... The third spine-tingling tale, A Strange Experience, focuses on a deranged young woman who harbours a deadly secret.

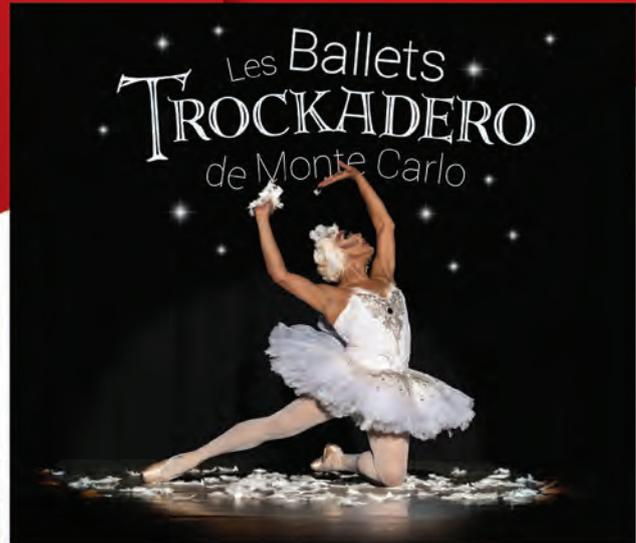

Claire Louise Amias stars in this one-woman show.

Operation Mincemeat Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 27 April - Sat 2 May; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 11 - Sat 16 May

Hit musical Operation Mincemeat tells the strange-but-true story of a brilliant deception co-ordinated by British intelligence in the Second World War.

Visiting the Midlands as part of a national tour, the show features 50 characters but only five lead actors, who swap roles, genders and costumes before the audience's very eyes.

"It's five people on stage, creating hundreds of different characters and loads of different places," says Jamie-Rose Monk, who's one of the five. "There's a real sense of fun and creativity. It feels like 'a night at the theatre' that you couldn't do anywhere else. You couldn't watch that on screen; it wouldn't really work. It's about being there with everybody. It also appeals to a lot of different people. It has great music, lots of comedy, high stakes, and is really moving in parts. It just ticks all your boxes."

Driftwood

The Other Place, Stratford-upon-Avon, Fri 17 April - Sat 30 May

A 'deeply evocative' tale of self-determination, family and belonging, set against the backdrop of a 1950s colonial Trinidad on the edge of political independence, Driftwood is the debut play from Casualty, Holby City and EastEnders actor Martina Laird. The production is helmed by Chichester Festival Theatre's artistic director, Justin Audibert. "The play grew from a deep desire to explore inherited patterns, the desire for connection and self-determination," explains Martina, "and [also] to place Caribbean voices and histories at the centre of the story. To see these characters brought to life by such a generous and gifted ensemble, and under Justin's direction, feels profoundly moving."

A Midsummer Night's Dream

The Rep, Birmingham, Sat 25 April - Sun 24 May

Accessible language, likeable characters, romantic liaisons, magical creatures and a series of comical caperings with an ass are combined to excellent effect in one of Shakespeare's most popular works... Lysander and Demetrius both fancy Hermia, Helena's sitting on the shelf, Titania and Oberon are up to no good, and Puck's got his finger in more pies than Mr Kipling. Add into the mix a group of rude mechanicals, and the recipe for success is pretty much complete... Regional talent takes centre stage in this decidedly Brummie production. Adam Carver, best known as cabaret favourite Fatt Butcher, stars as the mischief-making Puck.

The Constant Wife

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Tues 7 - Sat 11 April; Malvern Theatres, Tues 5 - Sat 9 May

W Somerset Maugham's 1927 comedy of manners contemplates the ways in which men, but particularly women, of the era were beginning to rethink their traditional notions of love, marriage and social convention. Constance's friends and sister are well aware that her husband, a successful Harley Street doctor, is being unfaithful to her with her best pal. What they don't realise is that Constance knows about the affair, too - and has her very own deliciously devilish way of dealing with the problem... Kara Tointon takes the title role in this fast-paced and witty production, reimagined for the modern era by the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Henry V

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, until Sat 25 April

Widely considered to be Shakespeare's greatest and most memorable history play, Henry V tells the story not only of the Battle of Agincourt but also of the warrior king whose visionary leadership inspired the English to a completely unimaginable victory...

Harry Potter actor Alfred Enoch takes the title role, and is enjoying every minute of the experience: "A play of this quality gives you so many possibilities, so many provocations, and so many options and avenues to explore. That's part of its fullness, and the aliveness is what makes it so appealing to me."

The Curious Case Of The Masqued Magician

Brewhouse Arts Centre, Burton upon Trent, Sat 18 April

Holmes and Watson find themselves embroiled in the secret world of Edwardian magic as they attempt to solve the mysterious disappearance of the legendary Masqued Magician...

The Great Baldini is here joined by fellow prestidigitator Peter Clifford for an interactive show that features illusions, escapology, mentalism and cardistry.

I'm Muslamic Don't Panik

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Sat 18 April

Bobak is visiting Iran to explore his cultural heritage. While on the journey of self-discovery, he encounters all manner of weird and wonderful characters - from the women defiantly running the first-ever (and last) Tehran marathon, to the participants in an underground breakdance battle... Blending live music, spoken word and comedy (alongside the aforementioned breakdancing!), the show will be followed by a chance to join the cast for traditional Persian tea and biscuits. Those of a more-sensitive disposition should note that the production features characters using racist, Islamophobic and strong language.

Sherlock Holmes & The Sign Of Four

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 22 April; The Core Theatre, Solihull, Thurs 23 April

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary supersleuth makes a welcome return in one of the author's most frequently adapted stories. The Sign Of Four finds Sherlock Holmes embroiled in a murky world of deception and trickery, as he and his faithful companion, Dr John Watson, attempt to locate their client's missing father... Former Dr Who actor Colin Baker stars alongside Terry Molloy in this latest Holmes offering from Crime And Comedy Theatre Company. The production is being presented as a live-on-stage radio play.

Macbeth

Lichfield Garrick, Thurs 16 April

Shakespeare's famous tragedy is one of his most frequently produced plays, and why wouldn't it be? A blood-curdling yarn recounting a cautionary tale of over-ambition, as Macbeth rises meteor-like to the throne of Scotland, the play is not only fast-paced but also appealingly short by the bard's standards. This particular touring version is the work of Flabbergast, a well-established theatre company whose mission statement is to present performances which are vital, engaging and accessible.

Dance previews...

Aljaž and Janette: Let's Face The Music And Dance

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Sun 26 April

Celebrating the hit makers of both yesteryear and today is the name of the dance game when eminently likable Strictly stars - and married couple - Aljaž Škorjanec and Janette Manrara make a welcome return to Birmingham with their brand-new show. Featuring favourites from, among others, Cole Porter, Hans Zimmer, Quincy Jones and George Gershwin, Let's Face The Music And Dance sees Aljaž and Janette being joined on stage by 'an ensemble of great dancers'. Tom Seals and his live band also contribute to an evening of high-energy fun.

Verve

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Fri 24 April

Northern School of Contemporary Dance's award-winning postgraduate touring company, Verve, stop off in the Midlands late this month to present three new works.

The production has a running time of 90 minutes and is part of This Is Dance, an international season of performances presented via a partnership between Fabric, Birmingham Hippodrome, Birmingham Repertory Theatre, Fierce Festival, MAC and Sampad Arts.

IN THE SLAMMER!

The Shawshank Redemption visits The Alex next month

A story of hope and humanity in an unlikely setting - a tough state penitentiary - is the subject of The Shawshank Redemption. Based on a 1982 novella by Stephen King and made famous by a big-screen adaptation in 1994, the story follows the character of the incarcerated Andy Dufresne and his unlikely friendship with fellow inmate Ellis 'Red' Redding. A hit stage adaptation is now touring the UK and visiting Birmingham next month. Here, three of the production's actors - Joe McFadden, Ben Onwukwe and Bill Ward - talk about bringing new life to a classic tale...

Playing Andy Dufresne in the national tour of The Shawshank Redemption, Joe McFadden ponders: "It's such a well-known story and he's such an iconic character, and some might say that's foolish to take on. But it feels like a really good challenge for me as an actor, and I do like a challenge."

Written by Owen O'Neill and Dave Johns, the play is based on Stephen King's 1982 novella, Rita Hayworth And Shawshank Redemption, which featured in King's Different Seasons collection and was adapted into the beloved 1994 film starring Tim Robbins and Morgan Freeman.

McFadden is a huge fan of both the book and film, saying that there will be surprises in store for theatregoers who are only familiar with the big-screen version: "There's lots in it that they'll know from the movie, but it delves deeper into the novella and offers something extra. It's a brilliant script, so saying yes to it was a no-brainer for me."

The story starts in the late-1940s, when - despite protesting his innocence - Andy is incarcerated at the notorious Shawshank facility and soon learns that no one can survive alone. So he strikes up an unlikely friendship with prison fixer Red but is bullied into subservience by Warden Stammas, who exploits his talent for accountancy.

"At first, Andy ostracises himself from the other inmates, then realises he has to adapt," says Joe. "But he keeps his core values and retains his moral fibre in an immoral, dark and dangerous place. He's a really intelligent guy who uses his brains to work the system. "I'm probably not as clever as he is, but I do have a moral compass. He uses his skills for the benefit of the other prisoners, not just for himself, and he's someone we can all aspire to be like. It's a story about hope in the darkest of places, and we could all do with a bit more hope and optimism in our lives."

Glasgow-born Joe came to fame on TV in Sex, Chips & Rock 'n' Roll, as PC Joe Mason in Heartbeat and Raf in Holby City. The latter was a particular highlight...

"I got to really explore a character for four years. I love it when you're with a company of actors and you get to know each other well. It was the same with the cast and crew on Heartbeat."

Then there was the 2017 series of Strictly Come Dancing, which saw Joe and his professional partner Katya Jones take the Glitterball Trophy.

"Looking back, it was a really intense, rewarding, challenging and brilliant time. I'm not sure I would want to do it ever again, but I'm really glad I took part."

McFadden has also done lots of theatre, including recent tours of The Rocky Horror Show and The Mirror Crack'd.

"Good theatre shouldn't only be in London. There are so many beautiful theatres around the country, and audiences are different wherever you go. And with The Shawshank Redemption, it's important to spread that message of hope and optimism around the UK."

Elder inmate Red is played by Ben Onwukwe, whose 30-year stage career has seen him playing leading roles with the RSC and the Royal Court. He's best known to television audiences as Recall McKenzie from London's Burning.

First appearing in the role of Red during the production's 2016 tour, he was originally drawn to the play because, like Joe, he sees it as a story about hope.

"The word 'redemption' is right there in the title," Ben notes. "Most prison dramas are pretty grim, but this one is also about humanity; in this morass of misery, we find two people who have some goodness within them.

"With Red, he made the most disastrous mistake in his young life - a mistake that was so brutal that it led to three deaths - but he's made his peace with his crime and the fact that he's having to pay the price for what he did. He's a fascinating character, and I love that I now have the challenge of playing him again, with an entirely different cast."

Ben recalls his time on London's Burning with a grin: "When I auditioned for it, I thought it was something to do with The Clash and their song of the same name! Then, when I landed it, people were going 'It's the most exciting show on TV' - and for me, it was. You got a two-week training course, then you were immersed in this world you didn't have a clue about before. It was wonderful to be able to pay homage to these people who are honourable, dutiful and full of goodness."

The film of The Shawshank Redemption has been hailed as one of the greatest movies of all time - an opinion shared by Bill Ward, who plays Warden Stammas in the stage version.

"It was one of my favourite films growing up," Bill says, adding of the theatrical adaptation, "It's a beautifully written play about hope emerging from darkness. It has so many other compelling themes, like brotherhood, love and resilience."

Stammas is an amalgamation of three characters from the novella.

"So he's a really multi-faceted personality," Bill continues. "He's ruthless at his core, but he has ways, means and tactics for getting what he wants. He can be very charming and charismatic. He's not a one-note, nasty piece of work who you can see through immediately. A lot of the time, on the surface, he appears to be quite reasonable, but actually what he's doing is being extremely manipulative."

As a fan of the film, Bill maintains that the stage play offers something new.

"You get to meet these characters in the flesh, and to walk in Andy's shoes as he makes this very moving journey, which is a very uplifting one but which has some massively tricky road bumps along the way." Ward's numerous TV credits include stints as Charlie Stubbs in Coronation Street and James Barton in Emmerdale. Of the former, he laughs: "It seems so long ago now, and I've done so much since then, but people remember Charlie because he was such a foul individual."

On stage he's been in Everybody's Talking About Jamie, The Full Monty and Spamalot. "It's so different to doing telly, where you do up to 15 scenes a day. In theatre, you follow the arc all the way through, and I especially love the rehearsal period, where you're trying all sorts of different things. Then, when you're up and running, there's the camaraderie between the cast and the crew, and nothing beats being in front of a live audience. Getting to take a show like The Shawshank Redemption around the country is a joy because it's a wonderful story - and theatre is really just one great big shared experience of storytelling."

The Rep, Birmingham, Sat 18 April; The Hub at St Mary's, Lichfield, Sun 19 April

This imaginative, inclusive, and charmingly playful show finds highly regarded ensemble Half Moon Theatre presenting 'a heartwarming reflection on courage, connection and resilience'. Created for children aged four-plus, including those with complex needs and disabilities, the production revolves around two baggage handlers as they recreate 'a fantastical round-the-world adventure' aboard the final flight of Last Unicorn Airways.

The show directly adapts Hans Christian Andersen's Arabian Nights-inspired fable The Flying Trunk and runs for an interval-free hour, after which audience members will be invited to step into a sensory immersive installation.

QUESTIONS FOR CASH

Christopher Ryan Grant and Christina Bianco chat about playing country music's most infamous couple - Johnny and June Carter Cash - in a brand-new musical...

A brand-new musical about country music royalty Johnny and June Carter Cash comes to Birmingham this month. As well as being a celebration of their enduring music, The Ballad Of Johnny & June is a warts-and-all account of the couple's often tempestuous love story. What's On caught up with the show's stars, Christopher Ryan Grant and Christina Bianco, to find out more...

The Ballad Of Johnny & June is far from just another musical tribute to legendary country singer Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash. Rather than being a vehicle to air a multitude of hits, the critically acclaimed production takes audiences on a journey through the highs and lows of fame, covering the controversies that dogged their lives and careers - not least the addiction and substance abuse that affected them both. Created with the support of their family, and told through the eyes of their son, John Carter Cash, the show is effectively based on fact, something which its lead actors are especially excited about. Christopher Ryan Grant reprises the role of Johnny, having starred in the original US version, while Christina Bianco - who has a string of musical credits to her name and a growing side hustle impersonating divas in YouTube videos - plays June.

Chris, you're the only cast member from the American production to appear in the UK version. Has working with a British cast - albeit with an expat American in Christina - changed the dynamic for you?

Christopher: Honestly, it's been so refreshing. That isn't to say anything poor about my previous cast mates, but I've been working on this show for almost four years and almost entirely with the same company. While they are near and dear to my heart and I consider them family, it's so interesting to do a piece that you've been working on for so long with an entirely new company. We're finding new things together - new moments, new beats and new energies.

You're completely new to the show, Christina. What drew you to the part of June?

Christina: I was very interested because I'm a fan of Johnny Cash, June Carter and that genre of music in general. That surprises a lot of people, but I grew up listening to it. When I saw that the script had been put together with the blessing and help of John Carter Cash, I thought, wow, this is the real deal, we're going to get to the nitty gritty of it! And that sets it apart from other tellings on stage and screen. It checks a lot of boxes for me, as I'm such a big fan. It's also odd to be happening to me at this point in my life, living in England and all that; it's like a bunch of wonderful worlds coming together as one!

Despite being a big star, June hardly seems like the sort of diva you've been impersonating on YouTube...

Christina: "No, no, no, not at all! That's one of the things I always loved about June - I've watched a lot of old clips and couldn't believe how quick and witty and funny she was. She's so sweet and bubbly but also fiery. Very often she'd say things that maybe she shouldn't have, but I love that energy of hers.

Chris, you first played Johnny 15 years ago, so clearly know him and his music pretty well by now. Were you a fan prior to starring as him?

Chris: I've been listening to Johnny Cash since I cut out a picture of him from a newspaper when I was about 10 years old - it now lives in my dressing room - and I've been playing his songs since I could make my hands into chords. I made my Broadway debut as Johnny back in 2010, in a show called Million Dollar Quartet. I was understudying, but the actor playing Johnny got lost on his way to the theatre - true story. With about 15 minutes to go, the stage manager was like "Okay, you're on." The show ran for a year, and I got to go on about 30 or 40 times. Then I took over for the national tour.

The Ballad Of Johnny & June seems quite different to a typical musical, with arguably more drama as well as a story arc that effectively puts the 'happy ending' in the middle. Does that make it more satisfying for an actor?

Christina: It truly does. Their relationship is so tumultuous - with all the good came a lot of bad as well. This isn't a story that just takes you through to the, quote unquote, happy ending. What happens after the happy ending? And where does it take these two humans as they grow in their lives together in addition to their careers? It's really beautiful because at the end of Act One, you're going to get a very exciting Act Two.

Chris: I think what's most important for the audience to know is that this isn't a jukebox musical. It's a love story that happens to have iconic music in it, but at the heart of the show there's a kind of love triangle between Johnny, June and addiction. Ultimately the show is about redemption. Obviously people are going to leave tapping their toes, but what's so beautiful is that it also leaves people with a sense of hope; a sense that even if they're going through some particularly troublesome times in their lives, there's always hope on the other end. That's what's rewarding [and] gratifying about playing these characters.

The show covers Johnny's and June's childhoods and their first meeting, as well as their 47-year relationship (the couple died within months of each other in 2003) - that seems an awful lot to cram in...

Christina: It is, and what's great about this show is that you really do get something for everybody. It sounds so cliché to say that, but there's so much laughter and comedy, so much incredible music, and it's also going to tug at your heart strings. It's gonna break your heart, but it's also going to inspire you. As Chris says, it's a three-way love story between Johnny, June and addiction, but it's not a tragedy; it's still a love story.

Chris: I don't think there's anything wrong with exploring these concepts or depths within the framework of a musical, and it may actually help to lend more credence to it in this artform. When you couch this in the framework of musical theatre, it kind of sneaks in under the skin like a Trojan horse. We've got [the audience's] attention looking this way, and then all of a sudden we drop some pretty heavy material.

And as much as people will be familiar with Johnny's issues, they might not know about June's addiction to prescription narcotics, which was only really revealed in John Carter Cash's biography after both of his parents had died...

Chris: Johnny's addiction was very public, but I don't think a lot of the viewing audience will know that June Carter also had her struggles, and that it ran very deeply in both families. John Carter has been very open about his struggles with addiction, so it's a very personal exploration of these darker themes. The fact that it's wrapped in the framework of a musical makes it all the more palatable and all the more important.

Ruby Wax: Absolutely Famous

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Sat 18 April; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Fri 12 June; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Sat 13 June

Relatively fresh from her stint in the Australian jungle on last winter's I'm A Celebrity, Get Me Out Of Here!, American comedian Ruby Wax makes a welcome return with a show that recalls her much-loved television series Ruby Wax Meets and The Full Wax. Ruby is joined on stage by lifelong friend and producer Clive Tulloh for a nostalgic look back at some of the most famous interviews from the two TV shows. So, if you fancy hearing some scandalous and never-before-told stories about the likes of Donald Trump, OJ Simpson and Madonna, bag yourself a ticket; it should be a fun ride.

Out With The Buckleys

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Thurs 16 April; Birmingham Hippodrome, Sun 19 April

Inbetweeners actor James Buckley and wife Clair take their long-running vlog, At Home With The Buckleys, offline and out on the road. Expect plenty of their signature banter, interspersed with never-before-heard stories and the occasional song or two, with James playing his favourite guitar.

Kate Butch

Crescent Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 15 April; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 22 April

Having previously made a splash with touring production Wuthering Sh*tes, RuPaul's Drag

Race UK favourite Kate Butch here invites audiences to take control of the evening, allowing them to select each song, each joke and maybe even what she wears!

David Olusoga: A Gun Through Time

Birmingham Town Hall, Tues 21 April

Documentary maker and Celebrity Traitor David Olusoga takes to the stage to tell the story of four firearms that changed the world: the Thompson Sub-Machine Gun, the Maxim gun, the Brown Bess flintlock musket, and the Lee Enfield rifle...

As well as revealing the weapons' hidden social histories, David will also be taking questions from the audience on any historical topic.

RuPaul's Drag Race UK Season Seven Tour

Birmingham Town Hall, Tues 28 April

Drag Race UK Season One star Divina De Campo is the host for this latest live tour, which comes complete with the usual acclaimed production values.

The show features the full season-seven cast: Bonnie Ann Clyde, Bones, Catrin Feelings, Chai T Grande, Elle Vosque, Nyongbella, Paige Three, Pasty, Sally TM, Silllexa Diction, Tayris Mongardi and Viola.

John Mulaney: Mister Whatever

The Wulfrun at The Halls Wolverhampton, Thurs 23 April

American stand-up comedian John Mulaney has certainly taken up his fair share of column inches in the last few years, courtesy not only of numerous tours and television specials but also as a result of a highly publicised love life and a couple of trips to rehab. Recently married, and the proud father of a one-year-old daughter, John has plenty of new material for this latest show, which visits Wolverhampton this month as part of a short UK tour.

The Big Pants Party

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Fri 10 April; Victoria Hall, Stoke-on-Trent, Sat 11 April; Rother Street Arts Centre, Stratford-upon-Avon, Sat 25 April; Tamworth Assembly Rooms, Sat 12 December; The Albany Theatre, Coventry, Sat 6 March 2027, Walsall Arena, Fri 12 March 2027

If you're long overdue a carefree night out, then why not grab yourself a ticket for this nostalgia-drenched get-together and dance your socks off in the aisles...

The Big Pants Party is described by its publicity as 'the ultimate ladies night out, celebrating the iconic soundtrack of a lifetime of fun, love and friendship'. Taking the form of a concert, the show has been specially designed to get its audience singing and dancing along. Big pants are optional.

PRINCE-LESS

A sassy musical mash-up of favourite fairytales hits the stage in Lichfield this month...

Lichfield Garrick presents a fairytale with a difference this month. Disenchanted! is a musical which has charmed fans off-Broadway, visited five continents, but never found its way around the UK - until now! What's On spoke to Daniel Buckroyd, chief executive & artistic director at the Garrick, to find out more about 'the musical fairytale that bites back'...

Once upon a time... a princess got her own back! Forget damsels in distress, being rescued by handsome princes, or hoodwinked by witches, Lichfield Garrick is this month bringing you Disney's favourite dames as you've never seen them before, courtesy of a sassy musical called Disenchanted! that's rewriting her-story. "It's a musical comedy, within which we meet 10 disgruntled Disney princesses," explains Daniel Buckroyd, chief executive & artistic director at the Garrick. "There are a lot of 'disses', hence 'Dis'-enchanted. In the course of the show, those 10 Disney princesses tell us their gripes with the way their stories have been taken and manipulated by Hollywood - and by Walt Disney in particular - and then they try to set the record straight."

The version of the musical showing in Lichfield this month has been produced by the Garrick in collaboration with live theatre and events company The Production Garden. "The show's songs are fantastic, as well as being really witty," says Daniel. "I think for any fans of musical theatre, or people interested in the world of Hollywood filmmaking and Disney - the whole Disney universe - there are masses and masses of points of reference. There are standalone comic songs, there are big ensemble numbers, there are dance numbers, and there are much more thoughtful, poignant, reflective numbers as well."

The new version of Disenchanted! is premiering at the Garrick this month, but Daniel explains that the show's Midlands debut is only the beginning of its journey: "It's going to Edinburgh to do a run in one of the Fringe festival's largest venues, so that's its next port of call. And then it's scheduled to tour in Autumn '27 and probably on into Spring '28. We're keen as a theatre not only to be making work - and making work that can feed our audiences and bring rich tones and qualities into our programme here in Lichfield - but also to be part of the way we connect with the wider theatre ecology in the UK. One of the things we struggle to lay our hands on is really good-quality, mid-scale, music theatre... What became clear was that this piece had the potential to do more than just play in Lichfield."

While Disenchanted! might have begun its life across the pond, Daniel is confident that the story will resonate just as well with Midlands audiences - after all, it's based on a set of very familiar fairytales.

"It's very American, but only in the sense that it's totally about Disney's take on these princesses. The stories are plucked from all over the world, from different cultures. That cultural hegemony and appropriation is one of the things that's being talked about within the show. And what that also means is that we have a diverse cast telling this story. We have a cast of six who populate the 10 princesses we meet."

The sassy leading ladies include Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty and Snow White, with references to Aladdin, The Little Mermaid and many more also featuring. The show follows the recent cinematic trend of shaking up classic tales and presenting them in new ways.

"Well, we all love the familiar, don't we? There's a whole strain of human behaviour that pulls towards what we know. But we also like dissent and disruption - more 'disses'! - and things which take on the 'known' and flip it to give us a double point of connection and interest."

Daniel thinks the musical will even land well with audiences who aren't regular theatre-goers. And with an offer of free pre-show prosecco for groups of eight or more (don't hesitate - the deal is valid only on tickets booked before Monday 20 April), the production is promising to offer a great night out.

"If you like Barbie, the movie, you might like this in terms of its humour and its cultural references. [It's for] anyone who loves live entertainment; live music as well - the band is on stage with the show. It's got a very 'live' vibe."

Another place where you're likely to see a lovingly disrupted fairytale is, of course, in pantomime - which is a real mainstay of Lichfield's theatrical calendar. And although next Christmas might currently seem like little more than a twinkle of tinsel on the distant horizon, the Garrick's 2026/27 panto offering - Robin Hood - is already on sale. But Daniel is looking even further ahead: "We're just starting to think about plans for Panto '27 into '28. By the time we get to March, we sometimes find ourselves going, 'It feels like Christmas already,' because there are so many panto conversations. We're looking forward to Robin Hood this year. I think it's the first time this theatre has done that panto title - we've got a great team coming together to prep that."

Daniel is particularly proud that the theatre is holding its own as a producing house: "I've really enjoyed those opportunities to get into a rehearsal room and make a show. There are so many moments along the way that are challenging - but also delightful moments, where something just fantastically clicks. In the panto we've just done, Cinderella, during the end-of-Act One transformation, a horse and coach comes out and ends up flying over the audience to some degree. It's such a complicated technical sequence! So the actors and the technical team all worked together to achieve precisely the right kind of sequence. [I loved] seeing that come together and land with an audience.

"I really enjoy leading a creative, cultural organisation. It's great fun and a great privilege. There was one particular moment, just over a year ago, where as an entire team we pulled together to undertake a huge refurbishment to the Front of House area of the theatre. And I think it was pivotal. The signal there wasn't just 'these seats are tired, we need to tidy it up'; it was also about wanting to signal a welcome, and a valuing of our audience."

And there's no better way to value an audience than by programming some really appealing shows. Daniel is confident that the Garrick's line-up of 2026 productions will tick plenty of boxes for Midlands theatre-goers:

"We're producing a couple of times a year, but we're wall-to-wall with other shows. And our studio is much busier than it's ever been. We've got big, crowd-pleasing productions happening in the main house, but we've got a much more quirky, niche programme of drama, comedy, music and other events happening in our studio."

Exciting times, then, at Lichfield Garrick. And with Daniel's sights firmly fixed on the future, and with plenty to entertain in the meantime, it seems there's precious little chance of local theatre-goers ever becoming, er, Disenchanted!

Film highlights in April...

The Drama CERT 15 (106 mins)

Starring Zendaya, Robert Pattinson, Mamoudou Athie, Alana Haim, Hailey Gates, Zoë Winters Directed by Kristoffer Borgli

At the time of writing, The Drama’s producers are keeping their cards pretty close to their chest when it comes to their film’s storyline... The official synopsis is short and sweet: A happily engaged couple is put to the test when an unexpected turn sends their wedding week off the rails.

That ‘unexpected turn’ is a disclosure of some kind by Zendaya’s character, Emma. Film fans have been busy online speculating about its nature. Theories include that she’s maybe transgender or possibly a psychopath; or that she’d once planned a school shooting but didn’t go through with it.

Publicity for the film has been interesting, with the producers posting an official RSVP for the couple’s wedding. They’ve also taken the step of uploading a wedding website - charlieandemmaforever.com - which explains how the pair met, features a helpful FAQ section about their forthcoming wedding, and even includes some handy information about ‘things to do in Boston’ while you’re in town for the big day.

Zendaya and Robert Pattinson are two of Hollywood’s hottest properties right now, so it’s fair to assume that The Drama is set to do some serious business at the box office. Released Fri 3 April

The Super Mario Galaxy Movie CERT PG (98 mins)

With the voices of Chris Pratt, Anya Taylor-Joy, Jack Black, Benny Safdie, Brie Larson, Keegan-Michael Key Directed by Aaron Horvath and Michael Jelenic

This second Super Mario Bros cinematic outing has been inspired by the 2007 space-themed Nintendo Wii game Super Mario Galaxy and its 2010 sequel.

And if the success of the first Super Mario Bros film, in 2023, is anything to go by, Galaxy Movie is set for a spectacular payday at the box office - the previous release earned a staggering $1.36billion worldwide. Having last time helped to save the Mushroom Kingdom from dragon-turtle arch-nemesis Bowser, lead characters Mario, Luigi, Princess Peach and Toad now head into space and find themselves in conflict with Bowser’s son. Guardians Of The Galaxy and Jurassic World star Chris Pratt returns to voice Mario.

Released Wed 1 April

Fuze CERT 15 (98 mins)

Starring Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Theo James, Sam Worthington, Gugu Mbatha-Raw, Naveed Khan, Luke Mably Directed by David Mackenzie

Fresh from a modest critical success (but box-office bomb-out) with Relay - a clever riff on the paranoid thrillers of the 1970s - Scottish director David Mackenzie turns his attention to the heist-movie genre.

When London construction workers discover an unexploded World War Two bomb - leading to thousands of local residents being forced to evacuate for fear of its detonation - a team of military experts led by Major Will Tranter (Aaron Taylor-Johnson) are sent in to bring the situation under control. In the prevailing chaos, a band of ne’er-do-wells set about the business of pulling off an elaborate precision heist. But not everything is quite as it seems...

Released Fri 3 April

Father Mother Sister Brother CERT 12a (110 mins)

Starring Tom Waits, Adam Driver, Mayim Bialik, Charlotte Rampling, Cate Blanchett, Vicky Krieps Directed by Jim Jarmusch

Veteran indie director Jim Jarmusch makes a welcome return with a movie that won the prestigious Golden Lion award at the 82nd Venice Film Festival.

Presented in the form of a triptych, Father Mother Sister Brother focuses on the relationships between adult children, their somewhat distant parents, and one another. “I was trying to accumulate things that would build to something without you noticing,” Jarmusch told Indiewire, in talking about the film. “So that the third story, it would reach a kind of emotional - not a dramatically emotional thing - but reach a kind of emotional moment.”

Reviews have generally been favourable.

Michael CERT tbc (130 mins)

Starring Jaafar Jackson, Juliano Valdi, Colman Domingo, Nia Long, Miles Teller, Kendrick Sampson Directed by Antoine Fuqua

Jaafar Jackson takes on the role of his late superstar uncle in this biographical drama, widely believed to be the first of two movies recounting the singer's life and career.

The film is being produced by Graham King, whose previous projects include Bohemian Rhapsody.

"Michael's life was complicated," King told Variety. "As a filmmaker, I look to humanise but not sanitise, present the most compelling, unbiased story I can capture in a single feature film, and let the audience decide how they feel after watching it."

Perhaps not surprisingly, given the controversies that swirl around the Michael Jackson story, not everybody is of the opinion that the movie is unsanitised - including Jackson's own daughter, Paris. Taking to her Instagram Stories to comment on both the film and Hollywood biopics in general, she wrote: "The narrative is being controlled, and there's a lot of inaccuracy, and there's a lot of just full-blown lies. At the end of the day, that doesn't really fly with me. I don't really like dishonesty. I spoke up. I wasn't heard. I f*cked off. That's it. Y'all are gonna like the f*cking movie. So just go watch it. Go enjoy it. Do whatever. Leave me out of it."

Released Wed 22 April

You, Me & Tuscany

CERT 12a (104 mins)

Starring Regé-Jean Page, Halle Bailey, Marco Calvani, Aziza Scott, Isabella Ferrari, Stefania Casinij Directed by Kat Coiro

One little lie, one large Italian villa, and two people getting lost in the sauce of love. That's the line with which the producers of You, Me & Tuscany are aiming to tempt romantic-comedy lovers to check out their movie.

Halle Bailey stars as Anna, a young woman down on her luck - until, that is, she has a chance encounter with Matteo, a handsome Italian who happens to have a villa sitting empty in Tuscany. Inspired to jet off to Italy, Anna's plan to crash at Matteo's villa, without permission, falls apart when his mother unexpectedly shows up at the house. In a panic, Anna allows her to believe that she is Matteo's fiancée...

Her little lie becomes a big problem, though, when Matteo's cousin Michael shows up, and Anna discovers that the heat between them may ignite a fire that will transform her life...

Released Fri 10 April

Rebuilding CERT tbc (96 mins)

Starring Josh O'Connor, Meghann Fahy, Amy Madigan, Lily LaTorre, Kali Reis, Zeilyanna Martinez Directed by Max Walker-Silverman

A ruminative and moving exploration of resilience and human connection in the wake of loss, Rebuilding follows the fortunes of the downtrodden Dusty, a divorced father whose ranch has burned down in a wildfire. Now living in a trailer community on a government-run campsite - and finding solace with his neighbours, who have also lost everything - he quietly sets about the task of reassembling his life, gradually reconnecting with his former wife and estranged daughter... Released in the US pre-Christmas, Rebuilding has met with a broadly positive response from the critics, with Josh O'Connor's performance as Dusty being widely praised.

Released Fri 17 April

The Wizard Of The Kremlin

CERT tbc (152 mins)

Starring Paul Dano, Jude Law, Alicia Vikander, Tom Sturridge, Will Keen, Jeffrey Wright Directed by Olivier Assayas

For a certain generation of cinemagoers, Jude Law will always be the heartthrob star of movies like The Holiday and Alfie. So if you're among those who best remember him that way, it might be a little tricky to imagine him not only playing Vladimir Putin but by all accounts being pretty impressive at it. Law's performance garnered plenty of critical acclaim when The Wizard Of The Kremlin showed at the Venice Film Festival - which is more than can be said for the actual movie itself. Indeed, reaction was so lukewarm that its producers subsequently struggled to secure US distribution, the film's bacon eventually being saved by Vertical Entertainment. Still, if you want positive proof that Jude has plenty more to offer than a pretty face, check it out. Telling the story of Putin's rise to power, it runs for 150 minutes and also stars Paul Dano, who, like Jude, emerges from proceedings with his reputation intact.

Released Fri 17 April

SINGULARLY SINISTER

Kym Marsh is starring in a new stage adaptation of hit 1990s psychological thriller Single White Female...

A new stage adaptation of 1992 film Single White Female tours to the region next month and stars one-time Coronation Street actress Kym Marsh, who flexes her stage-acting muscles in the complex role of Hedy - an outwardly charming character who isn't quite what she seems.

Kym here talks about taking on the iconic role, how the gripping story has been updated, and explains that even for diehard fans of the movie, there will still be a few surprises in store...

"This is my villain era!" says Kym Marsh, with a laugh so warm it's hard to imagine the actress being remotely villainous.

Yet, in her latest role as Hedy, in the world-premiere stage adaptation of the 1992 psychological thriller Single White Female, audiences are in for a surprise.

The play is on a six-month tour of the UK, taking in 20-plus venues across the country. It tells the story of recently divorced mum Allie - played by TV presenter, actor & author Lisa Faulkner - who is trying to juggle childcare with starting a new business. When she advertises for a lodger to help make ends meet, along comes the seemingly delightful Hedy - but quickly we see that all is not as it seems, and their new friendship takes a sinister turn.

Kym, perhaps best known for starring as Michelle Connor in Coronation Street for 13 years, is no stranger to playing characters with a hidden darker side: "Actually, my last few roles have been pretty villainous - and I love it! It's so easy to play the typical moustache twiddler. But I want to make Hedy a little bit more layered and actually have people be a bit taken aback - unsure if she's good or bad right up to the last minute - and even feel sorry for her, particularly near the end."

So how did Kym come to take on such an interesting and chilling role?

"After I played Alex Forrest in the stage version of Fatal Attraction, we started to have discussions about other projects. We came up with the idea of Single White Female because it had never been done before. It was also within that kind of genre of those epic, classic films that had a real impact on people at that time. So I've been attached to it from the start and it's really exciting - the character of Hedy is so interesting and challenging to play. Without giving too much away to anyone who hasn't seen the film, the character is very complex, and from an acting point of view, it gives me an opportunity to explore so many different places that you don't necessarily go to normally."

Updated by author, journalist & broadcaster Rebecca Reid, the stage version of Single White Female has a focus on social media and explores themes of ambition, identity and isolation.

"There obviously wasn't social media back in the 90s," says Kym. "But if you know the essence of the plot and what it's about, it works very well..."

"I think the world of social media is a wonderful place, but it's also to be handled with care, because there is always that element of danger about it. And when you have a character like Hedy, and then you put social media into her hands, it can be tricky to the point of dangerous."

Will fans of the original still recognise the film they know and love - and will they be treated to the iconic stiletto moment?

"The essence is very much still the same. But the story is slightly changed. As well as being more up to date, it's based in the UK rather than being in America..."

"So there are differences, but the big, important, epic moments are still in there. And it's very much still a thriller with a real shock factor - we want to have people on the edge of their seats. I think people will very much love the story, whether they've seen the film or not. As for the iconic stiletto moment - you'll have to wait and see!"

Kym says that being in several stage productions recently, including Mike Leigh's Abigail's Party, has given her a real love of live theatre. She also continues to relish her television career.

"I'm so lucky that I'm able to enjoy both - being in front of the camera and also being on stage. Obviously, on stage you get an instant kind of reaction, which is very rewarding; you know immediately how much people are enjoying what you're doing. Television can be very different from that. There's a real buzz being on stage; you get that atmosphere straight away. And I really like travelling around, seeing different places and some beautiful theatres. It's interesting that everywhere you go, the audience reacts differently to different parts [of the show]. Then again, in front of a camera, you always get to go again!"

So does she get nervous?

"Of course I do! Theatre is way more nerve-wracking, that's for sure. My dad passed away last year, and I've found myself standing in the wings before I go on stage saying, "Come on Dad, come on Dad," because you want to feel that someone is helping you out when you're out there. You really hope that nothing's going to go wrong, that you give a great performance and people enjoy it."

Mother-of-three Kym hasn't stopped working since she auditioned for TV show Popstars 25 years ago, joining the band Hear'Say. She says she's grateful that she has such a warm reception from the British public.

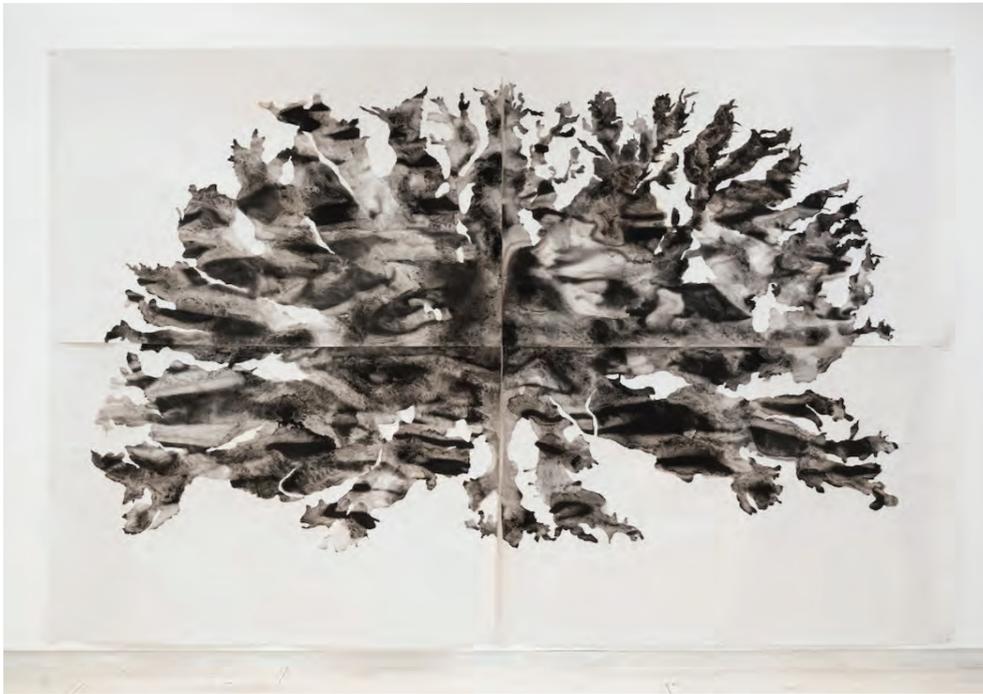

"I feel very fortunate and very lucky that I've been allowed to have the career that I've had, and to have been received in the way that I have. I think maybe it's because I come across as a sincere individual. I've never tried to hide anything. I make mistakes and hold my hands up, and I think that gives me a 'girl next door' feel - perhaps everyone knows someone a bit like me.

"I was brought up by a family who are very caring and open. My family means everything to me. I absolutely adore my kids and my grandchildren. I think I try to only ever be caring and open, too, when I'm being interviewed or meeting new people, because, to be honest, I don't know how to be anything else!"

There are many places on the Single White Female tour that Kym is excited to visit - but the very last night 'on the road' will be particularly memorable for her: "We will be in Malvern, and it's my 50th birthday. I'm not sure exactly what we'll be doing that night after the final show, but I do know Malvern won't be quite as peaceful as it usually is!"

Single White Female shows at The Alexandra, Birmingham, from Tuesday 5 to Saturday 9 May, the Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, from Tuesday 26 to Saturday 30 May, and Malvern's Festival Theatre from Tuesday 9 to Saturday 13 June

Genevieve Robertson

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC),
Birmingham, Sat 25 April - Sun 5 July

Working at the intersection of visual art and environmental studies, Canadian artist Genevieve Robertson produces work which is powerfully informed by a personal and intergenerational history of forestry labour in remote locations across British Columbia. Genevieve's practice is grounded in drawing and painting but also extends to video, installation and various forms of collective work and collaboration. Her exhibition in Birmingham will explore the interconnection between natural and industrial histories, vegetal intelligence and ecological trauma.

The display examines two forested sites separated by 310 million years and 7,000 kilometres: the ancient swamps of the Black Country and a recently fire and logging-affected slope in British Columbia, Canada.

Compton Verney, Warwickshire, until Sun 28 June

More than 60 works on loan from the Royal Museums of Fine Arts of Belgium sit at the heart of this historically informative exhibition.

Showcasing artists from across the 16th and 17th centuries - and artworks created using charcoal, ink and chalk - the show explores the magic of drawing, both as an artistic tool and as a means of storytelling during what was a period of significant social, political and religious change. The exhibition includes Pieter Bruegel the Elder's Prudence (1559/60) - a rare work from his celebrated Seven Virtues series - as well as pieces by Rembrandt, Rubens and Jordaens.

Complementary loans of paintings, prints and drawings from numerous UK-located collections, including London's National Gallery, also feature.

Wildlife Photographer Of The Year Exhibition

Shrewsbury Museum & Art Gallery, Sat 25 April - Sat 20 June

"We are facing urgent biodiversity and climate crises, and photography is a powerful catalyst for change."

So says Dr Doug Gurr, director of the Natural History Museum, which has developed and produced this prestigious competition.

Now in its 61st year, the show features a host of awe-inspiring images capturing fascinating animal behaviour and breathtaking landscapes.

The Churchill Screen: Dudley's Lost Masterpiece

Stourbridge Glass Museum, opens Sat 25 April

This fascinating exhibition, exploring The Churchill Screen, opens just a handful of months after the unveiling of one of the artwork's conserved original panels.

Produced by artist Edward Bainbridge-Copnall for Dudley's Churchill Shopping Precinct, the Screen was a 40-foot-long appliqué glass mosaic weighing five and a half tonnes and consisting of 17 panels.

The new exhibition explores its complex history - from Bainbridge-Copnall's creation of it in 1969, through to the impact of vandalism in the 1980s and its removal from public view in the 1990s. Archival photographs, conservation documentation, surviving fragments of the destroyed portrait, and public responses all feature in the exhibition.

Space Vault Exhibition

Thinktank Birmingham Science Museum, Millennium Point, until Sun 17 May

Immersive visuals and unique artefacts tell 12 stories of human space exploration in this illuminating exhibition.

Highlights of the display include the mission checklists that saved the crew of Apollo 13 when its oxygen tank exploded, lunar dust from the Hadley Rille landing site of Apollo 15, a rare Soviet pressure suit, and part of the nose cone of the first starship to reach space.

Joy Labinjo: A Place Of Our Own

Wolverhampton Art Gallery, until Mon 4 May

British Nigerian artist Joy Labinjo is clear about her purpose with new exhibition A Place Of Our Own; she is reclaiming the nude, and celebrating identity, belonging, and Black womanhood through the presentation of bold, intimate portraits. Marked by muted tones and simplified backgrounds, the paintings are explorations of the complexities of sexuality, reflecting on how Black women's bodies are often hypersexualised in mainstream media.

Saturday Town

Herbert Museum & Art Gallery, Coventry, until Mon 4 May

Saturday Town is an award-winning photographic project celebrating youth style, fashion and self-expression. The exhibition showcases the work of Casey Orr, who has travelled the length and breadth of the UK to photograph young people in towns and cities on Saturday afternoons.

Easter Holiday Fun

Black Country Living Museum, Dudley, until Sun 12 April

Easter at the Black Country Living Museum (BCLM) sees characters going about the task of spring cleaning - and sharing some old-fashioned tips and techniques along the way. Visitors can meet the rag & bone man, explore blooming gardens and charming shop displays, and enjoy a number of hands-on activities, from breadmaking to taking on the challenge of traditional laundry with a dolly tub and washboard.

The chance to try out at the Easter choir practice, play traditional street games, follow a family discovery trail, and learn the global story of chocolate further add to BCLM's Easter holiday line-up of attractions.

Easter Holidays at Compton Verney

Compton Verney, Warwickshire, until Sun 12 April

Compton Verney is hosting a selection of workshops and events for visitors of all ages this Easter.

The popular Kineton RAF STEM are back with their super sphero robots (Wednesday 1 & Wednesday 8 April), younger children can celebrate spring at the family forest school with Get Mucky Get Making sessions (Thursday the 2nd & Thursday the 9th), and older children can enjoy an intensive four-day Animation Camp (Tuesday the 7th to Friday the 10th).

Compton Verney's creative learning team are on hand for Artist Play Days (Friday the 3rd & Friday the 10th), while brick and block fans can get creative with the Spring Into Lego and Big Blue Blocks sessions (both until Sunday the 12th).

The venue's Sketching Studio will be open, too, providing creative visitors with the chance to cover the walls, floor and tables with drawings and doodles.

Spring Into St George's

Telford Town Park, Shropshire, Sat 25 April

Telford's St George's Day event makes a welcome return this month, complete with a wide range of attractions and hands-on activities to enjoy, including birds of prey flying demonstrations, archery and axe throwing, and wood carving demos. Creative activities are available for children across the site, with younger visitors also having the opportunity to meet some friendly donkeys.

Arena entertainment comes in the form of some high-energy jousting displays from the ever-impressive Knights of Nottingham.

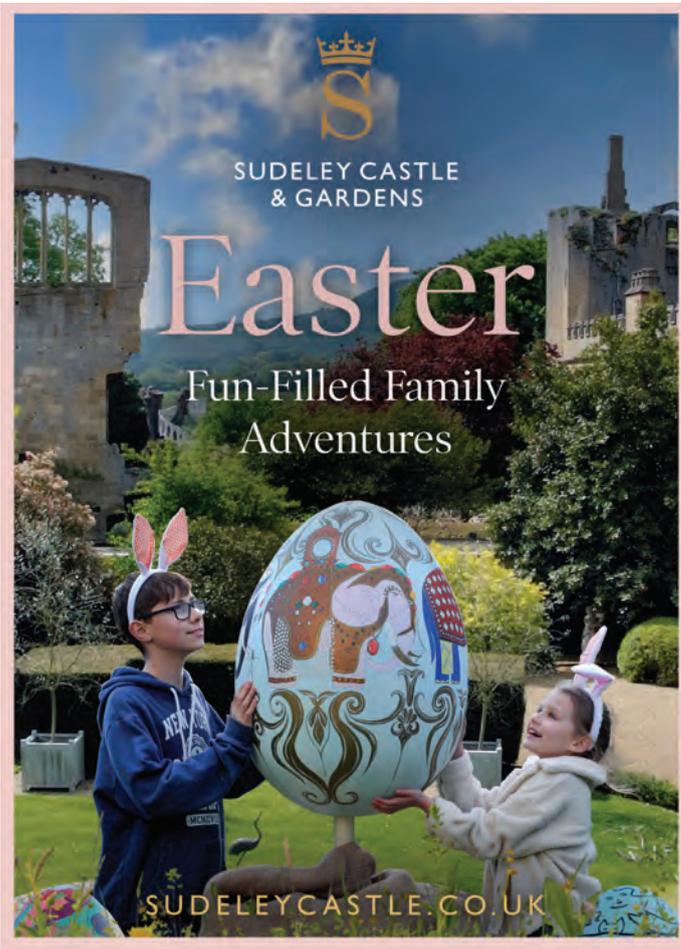

CountryTastic Three Counties Showground, Malvern, Thurs 2 April

Family-friendly countryside and farming event CountryTastic returns this Easter. This year's theme, Hold Your Horses, celebrates all things equestrian and features the brand-new Hobby Horse Arena. Young visitors can learn how to care for horses, enjoy pony rides, and take part in interactive activities.

Alongside the horse & pony theme, the show offers a selection of hands-on farming and rural-life experiences.

Three entertainment rings deliver non-stop action throughout the day with displays, demonstrations, including a lively mock livestock auction in the Livestock Ring.

Titanic Exhibition Birmingham NEC, Birmingham, Sun 19 April - Tues 26 May

The renowned Titanic Exhibition docks at Birmingham's NEC this month. Visitors can step back in time and follow Titanic's extraordinary journey, from its construction at the Harland & Wolff shipyard in Belfast, through its ill-fated maiden voyage, to its rediscovery on the ocean floor and its legacy more than a century later. The exhibition showcases a collection of authentic Titanic artefacts, including personal items recovered from the sea in the aftermath of the disaster and objects discovered on the seabed decades later. Through compelling storytelling and real belongings, visitors encounter first, second and third-class passengers, as well as the crew members whose lives and work shaped the ship's story.

Living History Festival Avoncroft Museum, Bromsgrove, Sat 25 & Sun 26 April

Avoncroft Museum's Living History Festival returns for a fifth year late this month. The 300-plus reenactors taking part will be showcasing over a thousand years of history, from the Bronze Age to the Cold War. Both military and domestic history will be on show, including Roman gladiators battling it out in the arena, Ancient Britons, Vikings, Napoleonic troops and soldiers from the First and Second World Wars. Depictions of agricultural life, including cooking, traditional crafts and pastimes, also feature. Meanwhile, New Guesten Hall will host the Stream Of Sound choir and historical dance group Gloriana... Bromsgrove Society of Model Engineers will be running their miniature trains throughout the weekend.

Spring Steam Gala

Severn Valley Railway, Bewdley, nr Kidderminster, Thurs 16 - Sun 19 April

Severn Valley Railway's popular four-day festival of steam will feature both guest and home-fleet locomotives operating a busy timetable between Kidderminster and Bridgnorth. Guests can ride behind every locomotive, visit The Engine House at Highley, and sample real ales in pubs along the line. Guest locomotives for this year's event include BR 71000 'Duke of Gloucester', Port of Par 'Judy' (pictured) and LMS Pug 11243.

Giffords Circus: Waterfield

Sudeley Castle, Cheltenham, Thurs 23 April - Tues 5 May

Giffords Circus first visited Sudeley Castle in 2014 with Greek tragedy The Thunders and has returned to the venue every year since. This spring sees the troupe performing Waterfield, a show inspired by the English countryside and the creatures that inhabit it. Presented in Giffords Circus' 600-seat big-top tent, the production features handmade costumes, hand-painted sets, catchy songs, and performances by acrobats, magicians, aerial artists, entertainers and clowns (including local favourite Tweedy!).

Earth Day Weekend

Thinktank Birmingham Science Museum, Sat 25 & Sun 26 April

Thinktank is celebrating Earth Day with a weekend of hands-on activities, creative workshops and inspiring demonstrations. This year's theme, Planet vs Plastic, invites visitors of all ages 'to explore our relationship with the environment and imagine a cleaner, more resilient future'. Featuring eco-crafting, science experiments, music and expert talks, the action-packed weekend has been designed 'to spark curiosity, creativity, and climate-conscious thinking'.

Enter now at whatsonlive.co.uk to be in with a chance of bagging one of these fabulous prizes!

Win! A family ticket to see Zog

A roaring, soaring musical for brave little dragons everywhere, Zog flies into Coventry's Warwick Arts Centre (WAC) from Friday 22 to Sunday 24 May.

The smash-hit musical features joyful songs by Joe Stilgoe and beautiful puppets by Little Angel Theatre.

We have a family ticket (four tickets) to give away to see the show at WAC on Saturday 23 May...

Competition closes Friday 15 May

Win! A pair of tickets to see Stephen King's The Shawshank Redemption

Based on a Stephen King novella, The Shawshank Redemption tells a dramatic story of friendship in the claustrophobic environment of a maximum-security facility.

The show visits The Alexandra, Birmingham, from Tuesday 26 to Saturday 30 May. We are offering one lucky reader the chance to win two tickets to the performance on Tuesday the 26th.

Competition closes Monday 18 May

Win! Two tickets to see the RSC's Driftwood

Set in the Caribbean in the 1950s, the Royal Shakespeare Company's Driftwood tells a deeply evocative story of self-determination and the search for family and belonging. The production shows at The Other Place in Stratford-upon-Avon from Friday 17 April to Saturday 30 May.

We have two tickets to give away for the matinee performance on Saturday 30 May...

Competition closes Friday 15 May

Win! Two tickets to see The Last Laugh

Smash-hit West End play The Last Laugh imagines three of Britain's all-time greatest comedy heroes - Tommy Cooper, Eric Morecambe and Bob Monkhouse - coming together in a dressing room for a no-holds-barred discussion about life, death and the secrets of comedy... The show runs at Shrewsbury's Theatre Severn from Wednesday 13 to Saturday 16 May - and we have two tickets to give away for the Wednesday the 13th performance...

Competition closes Tuesday 5 May
