Red Arrows Challenge (until Saturday 3 October). Participants can walk, run or cycle a route that suits them, completing the challenge at their own pace.

For more information and to sign up, visit the website at rafmuseum.org.uk. Everyone who registers will receive fundraising advice, tips and encouragement from the Museum team, to help them achieve their goals.

Major new arts initiative to celebrate Smethwick

A major new arts initiative is set to put Smethwick's people, places and stories centre stage.

Presented by Black Country Touring, Smethwick Folk is a two-year programme exploring the town's identity through a celebration of 'creativity, folklore and community'.

The initiative will culminate in two major public celebrations: the Smethwick Lantern

Parade in autumn 2027 and the Smethwick Day Parade in summer 2028. Organisers hope the events will become landmark occasions that showcase the creativity, heritage and cultural diversity of the town.

Comedy festival offers a platform for new talent

Birmingham Comedy Festival once again takes place across the second city next month (Friday 2 to Sunday 11 October). This year's event includes contributions from - among many other talented laughter merchants - Daniel Sloss, Stevie Martin, Laura Smyth, Jason Byrne and Olga Koch. The festival also sees homegrown comedians from across the West Midlands region going head-to-head for the Breaking Talent Award. The event, held at the Glee Club on Friday 2 October, will see Tarik Badwan, Andy Bucks, Naph, Nina Semples and Eden Voss (all pictured below) battle it out for the coveted title... Heritage Open Days is England's largest festival of history & culture, taking place every September and involving thousands of local volunteers and organisations. Stories are told, traditions explored and histories brought to life. The festival provides members of the general public with the chance to see usually hidden places and try out brand-new experiences. And what's more, it's all absolutely FREE... The event returns this year from Friday 11 to Sunday 20 September - and here are just some of the venues you can explore around the region...

Black Country

Aldridge Transport Museum

Shenstone Drive, Aldridge, Walsall, WS9 8TP

Explore a fascinating collection of historic buses and commercial vehicles at this road transport museum, which showcases vehicles that were built in or operated across the West Midlands. Alongside the buses, a range of transport-related artefacts and smaller vehicles help to tell the story of the region's transport heritage. The museum offers easy wheelchair access and the chance to step aboard selected buses for a glimpse of what public transport was once like. Subject to availability, visitors may also be able to enjoy short rides on one of the museum's vintage buses.

Sat 19 & Sun 20 Sept | 10.30am-4pm, pre-booking not required

Dudley Museum at The Archives

Dudley Museum at The Archives, Tipton Road, Dudley, DY1 4SQ

Step into the world of Black Country industry and explore the lives of the workers who helped shape the region's industrial heritage. Through artwork from Dudley Museum's collection, visitors can uncover the stories, skills and everyday experiences behind the factories, foundries and workshops of the past. A guided talk offers further insight into these fascinating artworks and the people they portray, while free craft activities for children make this an enjoyable experience for visitors of all ages.

Sat 12 Sept | 11am-2pm, pre-booking preferred

Galton Valley Pumping Station

Galton Valley Pumping Station, Brasshouse Lane, Smethwick, B66 1AQ

Take a stroll along the Old Mainline Canal and visit Galton Valley Pumping Station, a small but fascinating museum located beside the towpath in Smethwick.

Once used to regulate water levels between the Old Mainline and New Mainline canals, the station now tells the story of its important role in the canal network, as well as the lives and work of the people who depended on it. Packed with local history, it offers an interesting insight into Smethwick's canal heritage and industrial past.

Sat 19 Sept | 11am-3pm, pre-booking not required

Wolverhampton Art Gallery Stores Tour

Wolverhampton Art Gallery, Lichfield Street, WV1 1DU

Go behind the scenes at Wolverhampton Art Gallery with a special tour led by the Collections Officer. Home to more than 20,000 artworks and objects, the collection features everything from pieces reflecting the Black Country's industrial heritage, to works by internationally acclaimed contemporary artists. Learn how the collection has grown since the late 19th century through donations, acquisitions and pioneering collecting policies, and gain a rare insight into items usually kept out of public view. Please note that the stores are not wheelchair accessible.

Wed 16 Sept | 11am-12pm, pre-booking required

Wolves Museum

Wolverhampton Wanderers Football Club, Molineux Stadium, WV1 4QR

Follow the colourful story of Wolverhampton Wanderers at Wolves Museum, which charts the club's illustrious history, from its role as a founder member of the Football League to its status as one of the game's most influential teams. Visitors can explore dedicated displays, historic artefacts and an evolving timeline showcasing the club's greatest triumphs and challenges.

The museum also features a Wolves Women section, a film celebrating more than 150 years of the club's history, and a Hall of Fame honouring legendary players. Suitable for all ages, it offers a fascinating insight into both the club and the city it represents.

Tues 15 & Wed 16 Sept | 10.30am-4pm, pre-booking preferred

Shropshire

Benthall Hall

Benthall Hall, Broseley, TF12 5RX

Step inside this beautiful Tudor home, on the site of which the Benthall family has lived for more than 1,000 years. The house was built in 1535, features mullioned windows, an impressive carved oak staircase, decorated plaster ceilings and oak panelling, and boasts a fascinating history that spans the Civil War and the Industrial Revolution. Visitors can explore the carefully restored plantsman's garden, kitchen garden and Victorian glasshouse, complete with seasonal crocuses, roses, orchids and cherry trees. A special exhibition celebrates Victorian polymath George Maw, once a tenant at Benthall Hall and a leading figure in the encaustic tile industry.

Sat 12, Mon 14 & Sun 20 Sept | 12pm-4pm, pre-booking not required

Broseley Pipe Works

Broseley Pipe Works, Duke Street, Broseley, Telford, TF12 5LX

Explore two historic factories which were at the heart of the Industrial Revolution and discover the lives of ordinary women who worked in the ceramic industries during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Visit Broseley Pipe Works and Coalport China Museum to uncover stories of generations of workers through archive material, including a recently donated wages ledger from Broseley. In partnership with Findmypast, visitors can also begin researching their own family history and learn more about the people who lived and worked in Ironbridge Gorge.

Fri 11 - Sun 13 & Fri 18 - Sun 20 Sept | 10am-4pm, pre-booking required

Shropshire Museums Collections Centre

Shropshire Museums Collections Centre, 7-9 Parkway, Ludlow, SY8 2PG

Go behind the scenes at Shropshire Museums Collections Centre and see the remains of five woolly mammoths discovered at a quarry in Condover in 1986.

During this curator-led tour, visitors can view the Ice Age giants in their purpose-built stores and learn how they were discovered and excavated with help from the local community.

The experience is suitable for all ages.

Sat 12 Sept | 10am-11am, pre-booking required

St Alkmund's Church Tower Tour

St Alkmund's Church, Church Street, Whitchurch, SY13 1LB

Take the opportunity to climb the tower of the Grade I listed St Alkmund's Church and enjoy spectacular views across the surrounding countryside. Along the way, explore each level of the parish church, including the ringing room, clock mechanism and church bells, before reaching the roof. At the top, diagrams help identify the major landmarks visible from the impressive vantage point.

Fri 11 & Sat 12 Sept | 10.30am, 11.15am, 12pm, 2.15pm, 3pm and 3.45pm, pre-booking required

Tour of Wenlock Abbey

Wenlock Abbey, Bull Ring, Much Wenlock, TF13 6EN

Enjoy a special afternoon at Wenlock Abbey, beginning with a guided tour of the remarkable Grade I listed building and including an intimate performance in the Great Hall. Acclaimed impressionist and comedian Alistair McGowan will perform alongside his wife, singer Charlotte Page, and pianist Lana Bode, presenting a personal selection of popular songs and lesser-known poems by Noel Coward.

Set within the historic former Cluniac priory, this unique event combines heritage, music and entertainment in an atmospheric setting. Advance booking is essential, with limited places available.

Sun 13 Sept | 2.30pm-4.30pm, pre-booking required

Staffordshire

Brampton Museum: Costumed Tours

The Brampton Museum, Brampton Park, Newcastle-under-Lyme, ST5 0QP

Step back into Victorian England with a series of short, costumed tours of Brampton Museum and its recreated Victorian street. Hear about the family who lived in the house during the 1890s and discover more about the businesses that once formed part of Victorian Newcastle. For this special event, visitors can also take a peek inside Pidduck's watch & clock shop, listen to its clocks chime and handle some of the historic objects.

Sat 19 Sept | 11.30am-4pm, pre-booking preferred

Biddulph Grange Garden Open Gates

Biddulph Grange Garden, Grange Road, Biddulph, ST8 7SD

Follow in the footsteps of an 1850s visitor to Biddulph Grange Garden and explore the wider estate once shaped by landowner & horticulturist James Bateman.

Take the Bateman Walk into the adjacent churchyard, complete the mile-long route to the cave, or wander along Lime Avenue to St Lawrence Church, where Bateman once preached. For a longer adventure, head through the Long Walk gates and into Biddulph Grange Country Park, now managed by Staffordshire Wildlife Trust...

The open gates offer a rare chance to explore these historic landscapes beyond the garden itself.

Fri 11 & Sat 12 Sept | 10am-5pm, pre-booking not required

Everyday Histories: Showpeople Of North Staffordshire

25 Merrial Street, Newcastle-under-Lyme, ST5 2AE

Explore the colourful world of North Staffordshire's travelling showpeople and discover the families who bring the excitement of the fair to communities across the region. Through photographs, memories, stories, film and talks, learn about their traditions, resilience and remarkable history, celebrating the generations behind the rides, shows and attractions. The event also highlights local connections to Philip Astley, the North Staffordshire-born pioneer known as the father of the modern circus.

Fri 11 - Sat 12 & Thurs 17 - Sat 19 Sept | 11am-4pm, pre-booking not required

Kinver Edge & the Rock Houses

Holy Austin Rock House, Compton Road, Kinver, Stourbridge, DY7 6DL

Step inside the quirky Holy Austin Rock Houses, where families lived until the 1960s, and experience these unusual homes carved directly into the red sandstone. Explore the restored dwellings, settle by the fire and hear stories from volunteers about the people who once lived there.

Visitors can also enjoy a freshly baked cream tea or light bites in the tearoom... Outside, explore Kinver Edge, with heathland, woodland and sandstone landscapes, as well as spectacular views across several counties from the Iron Age hill fort.

Live music from across the region...

Arkayla

The Sugarmill, Stoke-on-Trent,
Sat 19 September

Layered guitar tones and telling lyrics combine to create complex yet dreamlike innovations in the music of Arkayla, a Manchester rock band who burst onto the scene a handful of years ago with a string of singles. Since that breakthrough period, they've earned themselves a legion of dedicated fans by virtue of some seriously captivating live performances. The boys have been likened to The Strokes, The Smiths and The Doors, comparisons which speak volumes for the impact of their style and the quality of their sound.

As It Is

KK's Steel Mill, Wolverhampton,
Fri 4 September

"It's so easy to make a safe record," says As It Is vocalist Patty Walters, "but artistic freedom is why this is exciting. We didn't start a band to create a company and look at spreadsheets. We do this because being in a band is fun." Minnesota-born Patty formed the Brighton-based As It Is in 2012 with no expectations and very few ambitions: "We were just hoping to have some fun and be part of the thriving punk scene in Brighton." Fourteen years on, the group has significantly exceeded Patty's expectations: "I'm so proud of the band we've become."

The international pop-rockers visit KK's Steel Mill early this month as part of a UK tour in support of their recently released and critically acclaimed self-titled album.

Anastacia The Civic at The Halls Wolverhampton, Wed 23 September

Large-lunged pop icon Anastacia returns, complete with a fistful of hits and happy to let her music do the talking. With a startlingly distinctive voice that could shatter glass through its sheer force, she contrives to be both inspiring and uplifting without descending into trite and hackneyed cliché. Her Wolverhampton show forms part of a short tour to celebrate the quarter-century anniversary of her critically acclaimed debut album, Not That Kind.

Marillion

Symphony Hall, Birmingham,
Wed 23 September

They've been going strong for more than 40 years now, and given that they're visiting the second city with a collection of new songs to perform, it's fair to say that Marillion remain in impressively rude health.

One of the UK's most dynamic live bands, the boys maybe don't tour as much as some other groups, but when they do, they're well worth the ticket price.

"If it was practical and made financial sense to play everywhere, we would," they explain. "The spirit is willing. The reality is more complicated... Touring takes us away from writing, recording and our families. We have to remain alive, and sane, so schedules have to be sustainable as well as practical. We're not as young as we used to be..."

Steve Hackett, for example, has called their music "powerful and inspiring", while Motorhead favourite Phil Campbell was even more effusive, describing their sound as "fing beautiful".

The Dunwells

LOOP, Shrewsbury, Thurs 24 September

Leeds-based indie-folk-pop favourites The Dunwells have been ploughing their musical furrow since the noughties, earning themselves a reputation for being reliable purveyors of strong vocals, powerful melodies and heartfelt lyrics.

Featuring brothers Joseph (vocals) and David Dunwell (guitar, vocals), along with friends Adam Taylor (drums, vocals) and Rob Clayton (bass, vocals), the quartet have supported some major names in the music industry, including Mumford & Sons, Tom Jones, Scouting For Girls and Bryan Adams.

The Blackheart Orchestra

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury,
Sun 20 September

As orchestras go, Blackheart is a particularly small one, comprising just two members: the multi-award-winning Chrissy Mostyn and Rick Pilkington. Hailed as a modern-day Pink Floyd and creating highly emotional contemporary rock music - in the process playing in excess of a dozen instruments - the talented twosome are widely admired within the music industry. A CURIOUS TALE

Joe McFadden talks about starring in a new version of
The Curious Incident Of The Dog In The Night-Time...

Mark Haddon's bestselling novel, The Curious Incident Of The Dog In The Night-Time, has captured the imaginations of readers all over the world. Since being adapted for the stage and premiering at the National Theatre in 2012, the story has consistently wowed audiences and critics alike. A new production of the show premieres at Birmingham Rep this month, with Joe McFadden top-billing alongside ex-EastEnder Charlie Brooks. Joe recently chatted to What's On about his love of the original novel - and his delight at being involved with this latest stage version...

When actor Joe McFadden first read Mark Haddon's bestselling novel The Curious Incident Of The Dog In The Night-Time more than 20 years ago, he immediately fell in love with its story and its characters. So he's genuinely delighted to now be a part of a brand-new staging of the novel.

Premiering at Birmingham Rep early this month, the show sees Joe playing the character of Ed, alongside Charlie Brooks as Judy - the parents of autistic teenager Chris Boone. Discovering that neighbour's dog Wellington has been killed with a garden fork, Chris turns detective to uncover the perpetrator. However, in doing so, some shocking secrets within the Boone family are also revealed...

The production uses the Simon Stephens adaptation - which proved such a hit for the National Theatre in 2012 - but recreates the story with new sets and designs by Eleanor Bull. Ned Bennett is in the director's chair.

Joe is very much enjoying being part of the process: "I absolutely loved the book back in 2003. It was one of those books that it seemed everyone was reading. I loved it so much that I then went and saw the play because I was fascinated with what they were going to do with it. And I loved the play! It was such a hit, and it was great in so many different ways.

"The Simon Stephens adaptation is just brilliant, and we're very lucky that that's the adaptation we're using. We were very fortunate that he came in and talked to us during rehearsals. It was really interesting hearing his take on it all and his process of adapting such a loved book, capturing all the elements that everyone loves but still making it work as a piece of theatre.

"I'm just really excited knowing that this is a new production, and how exciting it's going to be to reinvent a story that is so loved by so many people."

Ed is far from the perfect dad, but for Joe, that's what makes the part so interesting: "Ed doesn't always get everything right as a parent. He makes mistakes, he's fallible, and that's the thing that I related to in him. The great thing about this story is that no-one is perfect. There's no good guys and bad guys; it's very nuanced storytelling. Sure, we all do some quite horrendous things, but we do them for the right reasons. Ed loves his child dearly, and he's absolutely doing his best for her."

This is definitely the point at which we should mention that this new telling sees the character of Christopher, the boy in the original book, being replaced by the character of a girl named Chris. Alex Keenan and Imi Price will share the role during the show's run.

"Having female leads is really interesting because the dynamic changes," Joe says.

"The fact that this family unit has broken down, and how that plays itself out. So it's a father and his daughter being left behind and how devastating that would be and how a daughter absolutely needs her mother.

"It feels so important that we do this. There has been a lot of misconception that more boys are autistic than girls, and that's absolutely not true. It's just that it presents itself in different ways, and I think it's harder to diagnose, so it feels really important that people realise that it's just as prevalent in girls. The two girls we've got, Alex and Imi, are brilliant and heartbreaking and completely immersed in it, so the scenes feel really fresh.

"If you've seen this story told from a male perspective, now you can come and see it from a female perspective - and it absolutely will be different. If you loved it before, you'll still love it now. It's a re-invention and a re-interpretation.

"You're sort of seeing inside someone who is neurodivergent, and you're seeing the processes of their mind. Mark Haddon did it brilliantly in the book, where absolutely we are seeing the world from Chris' perspective.

"The question is, when is Chris going to figure it out? What the play did really well, and I think our production is also going to do really well, is show you the whimsy and the fantasy and the excitement of being a 15-year-old, of having this wonderfully adept mind. Chris is so wonderful at mathematics and is really into space exploration, and you get to see into their mind and it's really entertaining.

"Her school and her father underestimate her. One of the things that Simon talked about is that essentially this story is about bravery and people's kindness at a time when we need those qualities more than ever. We do sort of put Chris into this box that she can't cope, and it turns out that's her journey and her quest during the play. How much can she cope with? And can she do a lot more than the people around her feel that perhaps she can?"

Produced by Birmingham Rep and Melting Pot, the new show will tour the UK after premiering in the second city this month. The hope is that neurodivergent people will go along and enjoy the experience.

"I think for the first time we are making it friendly for neurodivergent audiences. It's going to be explained at the beginning, and how loud and how bright it's going to get. I think the reasoning behind that, which I absolutely agree with, is that as this story is about neurodivergent people, they should be able to come in and see it - there shouldn't be any barrier to stop them.

"The aim is that, in the same way 15-year-old boys came along, spotted themselves [in Christopher] and thought 'I'm like that, my mind works like that,' hopefully we are now going to get 15-year-old girls coming along and feeling the same way."

It isn't the first time Joe has played to Birmingham audiences, having previously starred as Andy Dufresne in The Shawshank Redemption and drag queen Tick/Mitzi in Priscilla Queen Of The Desert, both at The Alexandra. Curious Incident will mark his first appearance at The Rep.

"I hear it's a really big space, and it's exciting to be able to fill a space that size. On the tour, we're playing some really big places but some much smaller venues as well, and that's the challenge for the designer: different-sized shows. Eleanor's design is a feast for the senses; there's so much lightness and so much humour. At Birmingham Rep, it's going to look amazing."

Before we finish chatting, I ask Joe about his own dog, black cockapoo Douglas, who died last year.

"I decided against getting another dog. I'm on the road too much, so for the moment it doesn't make sense. It's great, though, that having loved a dog, you know how devastating and heartbreaking it is when they die. And so I realise the gravity of the death of this dog in the show for Chris. It's a shocking and a brilliant way to open a novel and a play because everyone wants to know who has done this horrible thing, just as much as Chris wants to know and goes on this quest to find out."

The Curious Incident Of The Dog In The Night-Time shows at Birmingham Rep from Saturday 5 to Saturday 19 September. The production then returns to the Midlands in 2027, showing at Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, from Tuesday 6 to Saturday 10 April & Malvern Theatres from Tues 18 to Saturday 22 May

CBSO.CO.UK

This is your invitation to a CBSO concert: a place to try something new, hear something familiar, be amazed, be moved, be surprised. Birmingham's orchestra exists for moments like these and there's a seat right here with your name on it.

Classical music from across the region...

CBSO: Elgar's Enigma Variations

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Wed 30 September

Conductor Stephanie Childress here makes her debut with the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra. She takes the helm for a concert comprising two hugely popular works by famous 20th-century composers and a brand-new offering from Welsh pianist Gwilym Simcock.

Gwilym's Triple Concerto - which has been co-commissioned by the CBSO - will be performed by three talented musicians, one of whom is saxophonist Jess Gilliam...

The afternoon of musicmaking begins with

Benjamin Britten's Simple Symphony, a four-movement composition based on pieces he wrote as a pre-teen and which he then reworked in his early 20s.

The concert is brought to a conclusion with a performance of Elgar's Enigma Variations, included within which is the hugely famous and familiar Nimrod movement.

The line-up also includes cellist Sheku Kanneh-Mason (pictured) and Ben Goldscheider on horn.

Munich Philharmonic Orchestra with Martha Argerich

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Fri 4 September

This early-month concert provides West Midlands-based classical music fans with not one but two rare opportunities: to enjoy a UK performance by Munich Philharmonic Orchestra outside of London, and to delight in the talents of legendary pianist Martha Argerich (pictured), who last performed in Symphony Hall way back in the 1990s. The long-established orchestra's recently appointed chief conductor, Lahav Shani, takes the baton for a concert which features 19th-century French pianist-composer Louise Farrenc's attention-grabbing second overture and Beethoven's exuberant second piano concerto. Brahms' fourth symphony - complete with its lilting opening movement and much-loved thrilling finale - will bring proceedings to a memorable conclusion.

Andre Rieu

bp pulse LIVE, Birmingham, Sat 19 September

Often referred to as the King of Waltz, Andre Rieu is a superstar violinist whose album sales have now topped the 40 million mark.

Andre is also the creator of the waltz-playing Johann Strauss Orchestra, which he conducts using his violin bow, mimicking the famous characteristics of Strauss himself.

His concerts are well known for inspiring audience members to leave their seats and dance in the aisles, an activity which counts as something of a phenomenon at a classical music gig!

Verismo Opera: Puccini's La Fanciulla del West

Shrewsbury Abbey, Sun 20 September

As operas go, the setting for Puccini's La Fanciulla del West is somewhat unusual: the California Gold Rush of 1849!

The storyline sees gun-toting saloon owner Minnie fall head over heels for charismatic gentleman Dick Johnson. Problem is, local sheriff Jack Rance sees Minnie as marriage material and isn't going to give up on her without a fight. And particularly not to a man who, it soon becomes apparent, is actually a notorious Mexican bandit named Ramirez... The opera will be semi-staged at Shrewsbury Abbey and accompanied by a full orchestra.

The Devine Musick Piano Trio

Maidment Building, Shrewsbury School, Fri 25 September

Conductor and keyboard virtuoso Steven Devine is joined by regular collaborators Caroline Balding (violin) and Andrew Skidmore (cello) for this latest Shropshire Music Trust concert.

The evening's programme features three works which were written within 10 years of one another at the end of the 18th century: Haydn's Piano Trio in E major, Hob. XV:28; Mozart's Piano Trio in G major, K 496; and Beethoven's Piano Trio in E-flat major, Op 1 No1.

WHEREFORE ART THOU, RUSSELL?

Comedian Russell Kane is this month making his debut in a Shakespeare play, starring as a middle-aged Romeo...

Much-loved comedian Russell Kane is dipping his toe into fresh waters this month, making his stage debut as Romeo in a modern-day retelling of ‘the world’s greatest love story’ at Newcastle-under-Lyme’s New Vic Theatre. What’s On recently caught up with the host of the hit TV series Evil Genius to find out more...

Russell Kane is best known for the quick wit of his stand-up comedy shows, but this autumn he fulfils a long-held ambition - to tread the boards in a Shakespeare play.

Russell is starring as Romeo, alongside Natalie Casey as Juliet, in Not Too Tame Theatre Company’s new staging of the Bard’s classic love story at the New Vic Theatre in Newcastle-under-Lyme. But it’s a re-telling with a difference, because the couple, who are usually played as bright-eyed teenagers, are instead presented as fortysomethings discovering true love for the first time.

The idea for the show was sparked by a conversation between Russell and Jimmy Fairhurst, Not Too Tame’s artistic director.

“I went to see their Twelfth Night at Shakespeare North and it was fantastic,” Russell recalls. “I was standing up and clapping at the end; a few of the cast saw me, and that got back to Jimmy. He said ‘You’d make a great Shakespearian actor - meet me for a coffee.’ So I met him for a coffee and he said ‘If you could do anything in Shakespeare, what would you do?’ And I said ‘I won’t do a clown or a comedy part; I would love to do an older Romeo. The tragedy of finding love later on in life would say a lot about where men are, and where we are as a culture.’ Then he texted me and said ‘Let’s do it!’”

Alongside stand-up, Russell has written books, created the podcast and subsequent television show Evil Genius, and appeared in numerous television programmes. Now, playing Romeo is a dream come true.

“I’ve always wanted to do Shakespeare. I’ve toured three of my own plays, and two of them were in a sort of mock blank verse, so it’s not as though it’s an alien world to me - but I’ve never had the nerve to do real Shakespeare.

“I love language and the musicality of Shakespeare. I love the wordplay, the rhetorical devices, the use of metaphor, paradox, contrast. I use it in my stand-up. I think Shakespeare is the greatest writer in any language - certainly in English - ever to have lived. Why wouldn’t I want to be part of that tradition?”

Russell hopes an older Romeo gives the story of his fated love with Juliet a new dimension: “Every single person will know men aged 40 who still haven’t grown up, who are still living in the studio flat above the Chinese, still going to Marbella, doing cocaine in the pub and so on. We all know men who are still boys. Never underestimate the ability of fully grown-up people to act like children and ruin their whole life in an impulsive moment.

“Then there are more people than you realise who will die never having been in love.

And it’s not a good thing to not know true vomiting-in-the-toilet, wanting-to-tear-each-other’s-skin-off love. So to get that Cupid’s arrow through the heart at 40, for the first time and when you have all that wisdom, that raises the stakes. If you finally, after living with your cat and not having had a partner in years, fall in love with someone, and your family say you cannot fall in love with this person, you cannot be with this person - just imagine that.”

Although the production moves the tale to contemporary times and includes a few tweaks to cater for the older characterisations, the story remains true to the original, says Russell: “We haven’t re-written the words, but I’d call it a radical re-staging. Part of the reason I love working with Jimmy Fairhurst is that he loves to play - all of it is up for grabs.

“The people who say they’ve never understood Shakespeare are the ones I’m interested in bringing to Shakespeare for the first time. If you’ve been to see Shakespeare and you were bored, then it wasn’t done properly - end of. When it’s done right, the audience should come out and say ‘It’s a shame they used modern language, I’d like to go and watch one of the originals now.’ That’s what happens with Jimmy’s work all the time: people leave saying ‘that was Shakespeare?!’”

When we chat, Russell has been on a photo shoot in St Mark’s Church near Newcastle-under-Lyme for the production. And he’s waxing lyrical about the New Vic Theatre - partly because of its in-the-round staging.

“In-the-round is better for Shakespeare and stand-up because you want to feel you’re part of the audience, that you’re connected to them. The other great thing is the front row being on the same level as the performers, so their feet are touching the same surface I’m touching. That is a direct electrical link and changes everything from being up on an eight-foot stage front-on with a proscenium arch - it’s a completely different experience.

“As an audience member, you want that feeling that you’re invisible, watching someone in their bedroom or lounge. This love story plays out and you cannot believe you have such a voyeuristic view.”

Russell is only too aware that he’s stepping outside his comfort zone with Romeo And Juliet - but that is the attraction: “I don’t know if any other British comedian has gone from just generating laughter in the most gut-wrenching way to true naked vulnerability on stage - metaphorically; it remains to be seen whether physically!

“I’ve never kissed another person on stage in my life. I’ve never even held hands with another performer, I don’t think. It’s so far from what I’ve done, and there’s only one way to do it - to actually truthfully fall in love every night when I step into that world, so that it will be raw, real, funny, different and clear as a bell.”

Aware of these challenges, Russell is keen to ensure he brings all his talents to the role: “If you knew the amount of training and processing I’ve done for this play, on top of my schedule. I’ve got the bit you can’t teach at drama school, which is years and years of comfort and being able to connect with an audience when onstage. You can’t learn that at RADA, but the bits I was missing are the bits you can learn at RADA! I won’t necessarily use them, but they’re a box ready for an emergency. It’s like if you go on a long drive and pack a first-aid kit and a glittery triangle. You may not need it, but you drive more calmly knowing it’s in the boot.

“I did a workshop about a year and a half ago, when we first started this project, to try and find out what I was weak at. I felt like I was struggling with my listening and reacting, so I’ve done some training that’s helped me really become obsessed with what the other person is saying. My wife has loved this training; I’ve become her best listener!”

And the hard work had an unexpected bonus...

“I’m in the gym 24/7, and my fitness is really high because I wanted my body to be up to the task of these long performances, and as a consequence, I got myself a cover shoot for a health magazine out of it! I was the cover of Men’s Fitness in April - that was a giggle.”

Comedy previews from across the region...

Lucy Beaumont

Victoria Hall, Stoke-on-Trent, Fri 25 September; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Thurs 8 October

No less a comedian than the highly praised Arthur Smith once described Lucy Beaumont as 'the next Victoria Wood in the making'. Others have called her 'a riot' and praised her 'devastating comic timing'. For Lucy's part, though, she's just grateful that performing no longer feels like an out-of-body experience.

"I started out acting but quickly realised I needed to try something else," says the Hull-born comedian, who was diagnosed with ADHD a couple of years back. "I've had all sorts of humorous things happen to me in my life, so I thought it made sense to see how I'd do at being funny."

Lucy visits the region this month and next with new stand-up offering Bad At Quiz Shows, Good With Weirdos.

Maisie Adam

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Mon 28 September; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Fri 9 October; Birmingham Town Hall, Thurs 5 November; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Fri 26 February; Victoria Hall, Stoke-on-Trent, Thurs 4 March; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Fri 12 March

Quirky. Effervescent. A female Peter Kay. Descriptions of Maisie Adam abound - a sure sign that she's serving up a brand of comedy that critics are keen to talk about. Widely considered to be one of the brightest stars in the UK comedy firmament, Yorkshire-born Maisie has become a familiar face on television screens, appearing in everything from Live At The Apollo to her very own comedy special on Sky... She's out on tour this autumn and winter with her latest stand-up show, Whatsherface.

Jen Brister

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 23 September

As she attempted to establish herself on the circuit back in the early noughties, Jen Brister received a much-needed boost from a comedy legend.

The occasion was the BBC New Act semi-finals in Brighton; the legend in question, Spike Milligan, who was one of the judges. Although Jen didn't get through to the final, she did find out from the show's producer that Spike had voted for her. "He'd also remarked that I had 'a great pair of Bristols,'" she recalls. "So clearly he had great taste in comedy and, er, tits!"

Kane Brown

The Core Theatre, Solihull, Wed 23 September; Civic Hall at The Halls Wolverhampton, Sun 27 September; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Fri 9 October

Parenthood, family life, relationships and British culture are among the subjects to which Kane Brown regularly returns during his much-loved live shows. The one-time direct-sales executive kickstarted his current career back in 2006 when he enrolled in a two-week course in standup-comedy, since which time he's honed his rib-tickling talents to excellent effect. Kane visits the region this month with Crowd Work King, a show which is described as 60 minutes of purely unscripted and unplanned comedy, entirely based around audience participation.

Urzila Carson

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Sat 26 September

South African-born New Zealand comic & actress Urzila Carson's career in comedy is certainly going from strength to strength, not least thanks to her deadpan delivery of delightfully self-deprecating material. Last year making a splash in hit Netflix rom-com Kinda Pregnant, she's visiting the West Midlands region with latest stand-up offering Fatty On A Yacht. Urzila describes the show as being "for anyone who's ever tried to squeeze into a space - physical or social - and thought 'This can't be right.'"

Comedy previews from across the region...

Tez Ilyas

The Glee Club, Birmingham, Wed 2 September; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Sat 26 September; The Old Rep, Birmingham, Wed 11 November; Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Sun 22 November

Silly, smart and subversive humour is the name of Tez Ilyas' comedy game. And as the rapid growth of his fanbase ably illustrates, he's extremely good at what he does.

Tez's political stand-up has been likened to candyfloss with a razorblade hidden inside, while his television work has brought him to the attention of a whole new audience. The fact that he's been able to hit the right notes with so many people comes as no surprise to Tez himself: "It doesn't matter what walk of life we're from, I think we're all united by the British sense of humour. "Whatever creed, colour, sexual orientation or gender type we are, we have a connection based around a mutual appreciation of that sort of comedy."

Fin Taylor

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Wed 9 September; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Sat 19 September; Birmingham Town Hall, Thurs 26 November

Fin Taylor has got some way to go before he becomes a real household name, but he's certainly heading in the right direction.

A comedian who doesn't shy away from engaging with provocative issues, he's stopping off at three West Midlands venues this autumn as part of his biggest-ever tour.

Matt Winning

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Sat 19 September

Acclaimed climate scientist Matt Winning may not find much to smile about in the day job, but that hasn't stopped him looking for laughs with his stand-up offering and Edinburgh Fringe hit, Solastalgia.

"From karaoke with a bunch of bankers, to petrol-station bathrooms and the United Nations," explains the publicity for Matt's show, "Solastalgia is an epic story about fatherhood, finance and facing the future, together."

Gary Pownland

The Wulfrun at The Halls Wolverhampton, Sat 26 September

"Life was tough growing up," says Gary Pownland, the alter-ego of Wolverhampton laughter merchant Jack Kirwan. "My mom and dad popped out for a loaf when I was younger, which is quite an ordinary thing. But I realised as they were leaving that they were carrying suitcases. Straight away I thought to myself, 'How much bread do they think we can eat?'"

Jack is very much enjoying his creation Gary's time in the spotlight, but his own career in comedy hasn't always been plain sailing. "I've done my share of driving up to Newcastle for a 20 quid gig, getting back at 1am and needing to be up for work at five," says Jack. "And then there was the time I played Edinburgh and basically died on my arse every night for a month!"

Barry From Watford

Walsall Arena, Sat 26 September; The Glee Club, Birmingham, Thurs 1 October

'Fierce one-liners, biting satire, plus some effing and that sort of thing for the teens' all feature on the menu when Barry From Watford visits the Midlands with his latest stand-up show, Shooting From The New Hip. The critically acclaimed creation of actor, comedian & voice artist Alex Lowe, Barry is a swearsy nonagenarian who first came to the wider public's attention courtesy of a series of prank calls to a London phone-in show. He later became a regular contributor to BBC Radio Two's Steve Wright In The Afternoon... Alex is also well known for playing the character of hapless clairvoyant, medium & psychic Clinton Baptiste, who will be making a guest appearance in Barry From Watford's two West Midlands shows.

four years ago. Described by spellbound critics as a nutball with a touch of genius, he has since firmly established himself on the UK comedy circuit and developed an enviable television career.

Sam's absurdist loops and razor-sharp observational wit will be much in evidence when he stops off in Birmingham mid-month with latest stand-up offering Kid Gibley.

Mark Simmons

Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Thurs 17 September; The Glee Club, Birmingham, Thurs 26 November

A runner-up in the 2022 'top 10 jokes of the Edinburgh Fringe competition' - "Did you know, if you get pregnant in the Amazon, it's next-day delivery" - Mark Simmons went one better two years later, emerging from the summertime get-together in the Scottish capital with the Funniest Joke award: "I was going to sail around the globe in the world's smallest ship, but I bottled it."

And there's plenty more where those little gems came from, with Mark's talent for one-liners seemingly knowing no bounds. He's visiting the Midlands this month with currently touring show Jest To Impress.

Sam Campbell

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Thurs 17 & Fri 18 September

UK-based Australian comic Sam Campbell spent many a year enjoying a cult following before emerging into the sunlight with a prize-winning show at the Edinburgh Fringe

BOSTIN' TAY PARTY

Jonny Cole chats about his spectacular rise to fame...

Comedian Jonny Cole's meteoric rise has seen him graduate from the back rooms of pubs in his native Black Country to comedy clubs, theatres and - for one night this autumn - Birmingham's Utilita Arena. His overnight success has actually been a decade in the making, and the former diesel salesman is determined not to leave anything in the tank - as he explains to What's On...

The past couple of years have been nothing short of extraordinary for Black Country musical comedian Jonny Cole. His current show, Armagudd'n, kicked off in September 2024 to little fanfare. Eleven shows presented in and around the Black Country struggled to gain traction, with gigs in Tipton and Bewdley on the verge of being pulled - after barely selling 30 tickets between them - and the remaining dates struggling to sell half their seats.

Everything changed when manager and promoter (as well as friend and fellow comic) Wayne Beese put a few clips online that he'd filmed at a 2023 performance at the Glee Club in Birmingham. Two went viral, getting more than a million views each, and Jonny became a star overnight. All 11 shows sold out within days, and the tour was extended by 90 dates, culminating in a sold-out gig at Wolverhampton Civic Hall at the end of 2025. That was supposed to be the finale, but another 64 dates were then added for this year. The final show - which Jonny assures me really will be the last one - takes place at Utilita Arena, Birmingham's biggest indoor venue, in November.

Despite being as surprised as anyone by the stunning turnaround in fortune, the affable Wednesbury native appears to be taking success in his stride, and seems completely unfazed by the prospect of an arena show.

"I'm often just blindly led by Wayne," he admits. "He's come into the dressing room and said 'If you had the opportunity to do this, would you?' Firstly I said, is that even a conversation? And secondly, do you think we'd get anyone to come?"

With over 50 million views on YouTube and more than 150,000 followers on social media ("Wayne does all that - I don't really understand it"), there are serious grounds for optimism. Jonny's hardly expecting to fill the venue, but a crowd of around 4,000 will still comfortably be the biggest of his career, either as a comic or as a musician gigging in bands for years prior to the switch to stand-up.

Had he given much thought to performing in such a vast auditorium? It's clearly a different beast to the three nights he's playing at Katie Fitzgerald's in Stourbridge (capacity 120) just weeks before...

"I'm more intrigued than nervous about it, to be honest. I started out doing the backstreet pubs and clubs, which really did me a lot of good, [making me] pretty thick-skinned and relentless. It's grown to the bigger stages, so I'm aware that when I'm performing, it's got to be a bit bigger. My mannerisms have got to be a bit bigger, I've got to travel a bit further, and my exclamation needs to be a bit larger."

The expanded audience is also likely to include more people from further afield, as this year's tour has seen him performing all over the UK. Given that his act - a mix of gags and comedy songs with a Black Country twist - relies heavily on local dialect and knowledge, had he been surprised by its success, or felt the need to water down any elements when performing away from home?

"You know, I think it isn't so much a Black Country thing as a working-class thing. Wherever you go in the country, you've got pockets of working-class people that have got exactly the same sort of culture as we have in the Black Country and the Midlands, so I think that's what travels. Sometimes, though, I will slow down the accent a little bit, just to make sure they're actually understanding it." That being said, Jonny's use of, and riffs on, the Black Country are precisely what people come to see. The two clips that went viral are a case in point. One was about how locals speak in letters rather than words, the other a routine about what Disney would've been like if it was located in the Black Country. Better yet, his initial breakthrough came from a song he wrote about Wednesbury.

"I woke up with a hangover, wrote this tongue-in-cheek parody and sent it to my dad to give him a laugh. He put it on YouTube and it got a couple of thousand hits. He told me I should do more of the comedy 'because no one likes your other stuff'."

Jonny still runs new material past his dad, as well as a couple of mates, all of whom he credits with helping make things funnier. He also admits that members of the audience or people in pubs have provided some prize material - such as the punter who gave him the title 'No Woman No Sky', about a man whose partner takes the remote control when they break up.

"I don't profess to be any sort of genius," laughs Jonny, suggesting his Black Country 'family' are naturally funny and a constant source of inspiration. "It's so easy to pick up on little ideas and bits of banter that you hear in pubs. I've been doing a gag for years about the pronunciation of the word mosque because I remember when a mosque was something the Lone Ranger wore."

Endearing the accent to non-natives is one thing, but he's also delighted when people who have migrated away from the area turn up to shows when he plays further afield, suggesting the tour posters are effectively "a bat signal" to lure them in.

"You put that up and Yammers far and wide come to have a look what's going on and support it, just because it's Black Country and we look after our folk."

He also admits he's had to start looking after himself in recent times, giving up alcohol four years ago after it was doing him rather more harm than good.

"I'd get very drunk before going on stage - I mean really drunk. So that just had to stop. I came from a rock & roll background, where you'd get hammered and then go and play. When I transitioned into comedy, no one told me that wasn't the gig. One night, when I was warming up for Joe Lycett, I drank a whole bottle of JD Honey. I then went on and did the same song three times!"

Sobering up has improved his ability to perform, as well as changed his mindset about the whole endeavour: "I'm a lot sharper on stage now. I can think two or three gags ahead, and my timing's better. Personally, when I was pissed, it was all about how much fun I was having, but since sobering up, it's about how much fun I can get [the audience] to have. And, coincidentally, my career has gone from strength to strength."

Mrs Doubtfire

Birmingham Hippodrome, until Sat 19 September

When a messy divorce leaves devoted dad Daniel Hillard faced with the prospect of no longer being able to see his children on a daily basis, he decides to take drastic action. An out-of-work thespian, Daniel makes use of his acting skills to create an alter-ego - the splendidly named Euphegenia Doubtfire, a Scottish 'supernanny' - to look after his beloved kids...

That's the basic premise of both this hit stage musical and, of course, the original much-loved 1993 film starring Robin Williams.

"I learned a lot of comedy from watching people like Robin, Steve Martin and Jim Carrey," says Gabriel Vick, who's playing Daniel/Mrs Doubtfire. "There's a lot of Jim Carrey in what I do. You kind of borrow from these people, and then bring your own thing to it."

The Last Laugh

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Wed 9 - Sat 12 September

No discernible plot, three aging men chewing the fat and gently ribbing each other in a shabby dressing room... At first sight, The Last Laugh doesn't seem a top contender for an evening of great entertainment. But when the three men in question are three of the greatest English comedians in living memory, the unpromising surroundings and absence of a strong storyline fade into insignificance.

The show's premise is simple: an imagined meeting between Tommy Cooper, Eric Morecambe and Bob Monkhouse - names that will surely evoke memories of Christmas specials and cheesy game shows for any member of the audience who's reached at least their half-century. The scene is perfectly set, the jokes come thick and fast, and anybody looking for an evening of laugh-out-loud, uplifting entertainment is in for a real treat.

Heathers The Musical

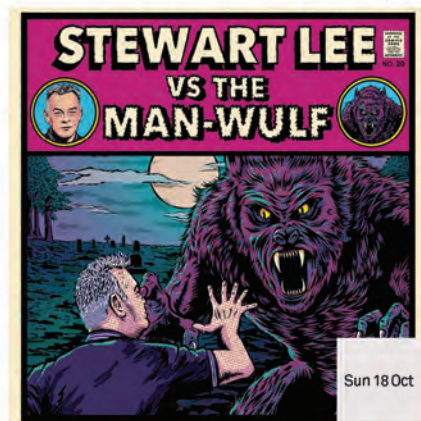

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Tues 15 - Sat 19 September

Although far from being an unqualified success with the critics, Heathers The Musical did great business in the West End, and is equally likely to pack them in on this latest UK tour.

Based on the cult 1989 movie starring Winona Ryder and Christian Slater, the show follows the character of Veronica Sawyer, a high-school student who's tired of being part of a feared and popular clique with three girls named Heather...

Eager to opt out, she finds herself drawn to new student Jason 'JD' Dean, a rebellious young man with murder in mind...

The Mousetrap

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Thurs 3 - Sat 12 September; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Mon 1 - Sat 6 March; Lichfield Garrick, Mon 8 - Sat 13 March; Malvern Theatres, Tues 4 - Sat 8 May

Not only has everybody heard of Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap, everybody's also actually seen the show... haven't they? Okay, maybe not, but as the play debuted some 75 years ago and has been running non-stop in the West End ever since (Covid disruption aside, of course), it's fair to say its capacity to put bums on seats is absolutely beyond question.

Not surprisingly, the play is the world's longest-running show, and has been performed in excess of 30,000 times. This touring version stars Nicholas Bailey and Susan Penhaligon.

Murder, She Didn't Write

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Mon 21 September; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Sat 10 October; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Wed 13 January; Lichfield Garrick, Tues 19 January; Swan Theatre, Worcester, Tues 2 & Wed 3 February

Improvised shows are seemingly all the rage nowadays - and this one has certainly got plenty to recommend it...

First and foremost, it was a multiple-sell-out hit at the Edinburgh Fringe...

Secondly, it's presented by a critically acclaimed company - Degrees Of Error - who are past masters of the improv genre...

Thirdly, the show is a real hoot. An Agatha Christie-inspired whodunnit, it features a classic murder-mystery which is created 'on the spot'... The show runs for two hours, including an interval.

Private Peaceful

Lichfield Garrick, Fri 11 - Sun 13 September

On the eve of battle, First World War soldier Private Tommo Peaceful recalls his short but joyful past growing up in rural Devon - his schooldays, his father, the deep bond with his brother, and the innocence of first love... A short play that packs a real punch - and is perfectly pitched for the young audience at which it's aimed - Private Peaceful is based on the same-named novel by War Horse author Michael Morpurgo.

"The question I'm asking myself at the heart of my books about war is 'How would I have coped?'" Michael told the paper. "I hope I'd have coped well enough, but I have my doubts. Private Peaceful is written in huge admiration of generations who did what was expected of them."

Present Laughter

Malvern Theatres, Tues 15 - Sat 19 September

This brand-new version of Present Laughter sees Noel Coward's famous play given a gender-swapping makeover: the main character, actor Garry Essendine, has been replaced by Geri Essendine, a hugely successful actress (who has been 39 for the better part of a decade). As Geri prepares to leave for a tour of Africa, a series of romantic entanglements, personal complications and professional demands threaten to overwhelm her... Tracy-Ann Oberman takes the lead role, having previously gender-swapped in order to play Shylock in The Merchant Of Venice 1936. James Dreyfuss co-stars.

An Evening With Jack The Ripper

Halesowen Town Hall, Thurs 10 September

Fancy spending the better part of a pair of hours in the company of the world's most notorious serial killer? Well, sort of.

Award-winning producer & broadcaster Steve Morgan is using this show to bring to life the legend of Jack the Ripper, having adapted for the stage his celebrated 'Ripper walks' through the East End of London.

An entertaining and educational evening seems very much in prospect.

As You Like It

Royal Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, Sat 26 September - Sat 7 November

Royal Shakespeare Company Co-Artistic Director Daniel Evans directs an all-male cast in this brand-new version of the bard's highly likable comedy.

The story revolves around the character of Rosalind, banished by her usurping uncle to the Forest of Arden, where her exiled father is already living. Revelling in the naturalness of the surroundings, Rosalind and her devoted cousin, Celia, find a happiness they hadn't known existed...

Tony and Grammy Award-winning American actor Jonathan Groff (pictured) makes his RSC debut in the role of Rosalind.

Macbeth

The Amphitheatre, Telford Town Park, Thurs 3 September

Shakespeare's bloodiest tragedy is here played for laughs by the ever-inventive HandleBards. The trio of thespians are promising audiences an evening of mishaps, mayhem and mirth.

The show is being performed outdoors, so dress for the weather.

Theatre previews from around the region

Twelve Angry Men

The Rep, Birmingham,
Mon 21 - Sat 26 September

Reginald Rose's gripping courtroom drama makes a welcome return to the region. Best known from the 1957 film starring Henry Fonda, Twelve Angry Men tells the story of one juror's battle to save the life of a man on trial for the murder of his father. Initially a lone voice in the wilderness, Juror Eight is faced with the monumental challenge of persuading his 11 fellow jurors to spare the defendant's life. His task is made all the harder by the other men's prejudices and preconceptions about the trial. The cast includes soap-opera veterans Gray O'Brien and Bill Ward.

The Haunting Of Blaine Manor

Stourbridge Town Hall, Sun 20 September

When Doctor Roy Earle - a renowned American parapsychologist famous for discrediting hauntings and exposing fake mediums - accepts an invitation to attend a seance at 'the most haunted building in England' (the Blaine Manor of the title), he finds himself, along with his companions for the evening, temporarily cut off from the outside world by a raging storm... And as every lover of the ghost/horror genre very well knows, where there's a raging storm and a haunted house, there are also, inevitably, things that go bump in the night... An award-winning love letter to both the Golden Age of Hollywood and the era of Hammer Horror movies here in the UK, The Haunting Of Blaine Manor is described by its publicity as the new Woman In Black - only scarier.

The Curious Incident Of The Dog In The Nighttime

The Rep, Birmingham,
Sat 5 - Sat 19 September

The National Theatre stage adaptation of Mark Haddon's award-winning novel bagged an impressive seven Olivier Awards in 2013 and was met with almost universal acclaim. The story is here being told in a brand-new production presented by Birmingham Rep and Melting Pot. And there's every reason to believe the show will prove to be just as impressive as that original stage version. At the centre of the action is the character of teenager Chris, who self-describes as "a mathematician with some behavioural difficulties". Initially coming under suspicion after discovering the lifeless body of the neighbour's dog, Chris decides to investigate the crime - and in so doing embarks on a journey that will ultimately see some truly shocking family secrets being revealed... Charlie Brooks and Joe McFadden top-bill.

Woodhill

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Fri 18 & Sat 19 September; Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Tues 22 & Wed 23 September

Documentary theatre and 'gut-punching' choreography combine to thought-provoking effect in this 'explosive' true story from multi-award-winning company Lung.

Suitable for audience members aged 16-plus and with a running time of 80 minutes, the production focuses on events at Woodhill prison, where three deaths leave the families of the deceased desperate for answers.

The show is being promoted as 'a call to arms about the crisis facing prisons'.

The performance at the Belgrade on the 22nd will be followed by a Q&A with the company.

After Party

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry,
Wed 9 - Sat 12 September

The Belgrade here joins forces with Traverse Theatre and Paines Plough to present playwright Morna Young's latest offering. Actress and matriarch Vivienne Blackwood summons her fractured family to an 80th-birthday celebration. As old tensions surface and beliefs collide, Vivienne's real reason for gathering her relatives together soon becomes apparent...

Wilko: Love And Death And Rock 'n' Roll

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Mon 7 - Wed 9 September; Malvern Theatres, Tues 22 - Sat 26 September; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Thurs 22 - Sat 24 October

A play with live music, Wilko: Love And Death And Rock'n'Roll recounts the remarkable story of musician Wilko Johnson. Having been told he had inoperable cancer and less than a year to live, the Dr Feelgood star later discovered that the diagnosis was wrong and that his life could be saved...

A Brief Case Of Crazy

Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Wed 16 September; Lichfield Garrick, Sat 19 September; Swan Theatre, Worcester, Sun 20 September; Wolverhampton Arts Centre, Tues 6 October

A silent love story told via a blend of mime, choreography, clowning and puppetry, this co-production from Skedaddle and Shoddy Theatre focuses on the character of Thomas, an awkward and introverted office worker who has a quiet crush on his equally shy colleague, Daisy...

Tugging a forelock in the direction of Mr Bean, Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton, the show has garnered plenty of five-star reviews since premiering in Edinburgh a couple of years back.

Horrible Histories

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury,
Thurs 17 - Sat 19 September

If you love the Horrible Histories series - and why the heck wouldn't you?! - then Terrible Tudors and Awful Egyptians are two shows well worth catching.

Audience members attending the former will find out all about the fate of Henry's headless wives and his punch-up with the Pope...

Families checking out the latter will be asked whether they're ready to rumble with Ramesses and - somewhat more alarmingly - if they dare to enter through 'the gates of the afterlife'!...

Both productions show at Theatre Severn on each of the three days. Visit the venue's website to check starting times.

Dear Zoo

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Thurs 17 - Sun 20 September; Swan Theatre, Worcester, Sat 26 & Sun 27 September; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Sat 13 & Sun 14 March; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Wed 24 & Thurs 25 March; Birmingham Hippodrome, Thurs 8 - Sun 11 April

First published in 1982, Dear Zoo - a lift-the-flap book by Rod Campbell - has delighted generations of children and accumulated millions of sales worldwide. This hugely popular stage version of the story features music, child-friendly puppets and lots of audience participation.

The Ultimate Bubble Show

Brewhouse Arts Centre, Burton upon Trent,
Sat 26 September

International bubbleologist and Guinness world record holder Ray Bubbles is back in the region and determined to make the ultimate bubble...

Ray will be using various gases to create all manner of bubble sculptures and displays in this fast-paced show that's promising plenty of surprises.

The Dinosaur That Pooped

Lichfield Garrick, Sat 12 September;
Birmingham Town Hall, Sun 8 November

Tom Fletcher and Dougie Poynter's touring production features new songs, a lot of laughs and (not surprisingly given the show's title) a whole load of poo! Based on Tom and Dougie's bestselling children's books, The Dinosaur That Pooped follows Danny and Dino as they try to get hold of the last two tickets to their favourite rock band's final concert. But with a villainous band manager lurking, nothing goes according to plan... Will the band perform? Will Danny rock out? Or will Dino's rumbling tummy save the day?...

Be Like Blippi

Birmingham Town Hall, Sun 6 September

If you're not 'in the know' about Blippi, then here's the lowdown on him...

A digital entertainer and educator - created over a decade ago by American filmmaker Stevin John - he wears a blue & orange outfit with a beanie cap and bow tie. He also posts educational videos, in which he visits places such as zoos, museums, farms and fire stations. For this month's touring stage production - described by its publicity as 'a high-energy live show packed with music, laughter and surprises' - Blippi will be joined by his cartwheel-loving best friend, Meekah.

Fireman Sam Live! The Lost Pirate Treasure

Malvern Theatres, Sun 6 September

Next year celebrating four decades spent putting out blazes in Pontypandy and lighting up children's eyes with delight, Fireman Sam finds himself yet again saving the day. This time he's called into action when perpetual troublemaker Norman Price discovers clues to a pirate treasure and goes exploring deep into the caves...

SISTER SUFFRAGETTE

Midlands-born Beverley Knight will star in acclaimed musical Sylvia when it visits Birmingham Hippodrome next month...

Sylvia, a musical bursting with dance, soul and hip-hop, retells an essential and ever-relevant slice of British history: the fight for universal suffrage. The play revolves around the Suffragettes in the Pankhurst family, particularly hard-line matriarch Emmeline and her daughter Sylvia. After first playing the part of Emmeline in 2017, the Midlands' very own Beverley Knight is returning to the role when the show visits the region next month. What's On caught up with the Wolverhampton-born singer, songwriter & actor to find out more...

Sylvia, a new British musical illuminating the lives of the Suffragettes, visits Birmingham Hippodrome next month. Named after the rebellious and headstrong middle daughter of Emmeline Pankhurst - the leader of the Suffragettes - the story sees Sylvia Pankhurst defy her mother, advocating for universal suffrage.

Midlands icon Beverley Knight originated the role of matriarch Emmeline Pankhurst, and has remained with the production as it's gained traction. Her performance saw her named 'best actress in a supporting role in a musical' at the 2023 Olivier Awards.

"Sylvia Pankhurst goes against her mother's orders and agitates for everyone to get the vote, and that puts her on a collision course with her mother," explains Wolverhampton-born singer, songwriter & actor Beverley. "It's a fabulous, fast-paced show, using R&B, hip-hop, garage and soul ballads to tell the story of how these ordinary women became extraordinary... It's a brilliant piece. There's a lot of humour, there's a lot of darkness, but ultimately there's a hell of a lot of joy."

Involved in the production from its very beginnings - London-based workshops in 2017 - Beverley knew early on that the musical was going to be something special. She recalls the moment she was approached by its writer, director & choreographer, Kate Prince: "Kate said 'I'm developing this show about the Suffragettes, and I would love you to play Emmeline,' and I was in! I'm a history freak; I love history. The first song I heard was a song called March Women March, which is almost like [the play's] theme tune. I lost my mind. I was in, and I've been in it since."

It was at the 2018 premiere performance, at London's Old Vic theatre, when the real weight and impact of the production became clear.

"We got to the interval - that's the real pivot-point of the show. A terrible thing happens to the women - they are beaten terribly by the police - and then the women come back stronger in Act Two. I saw people holding each other in the audience, weeping... I had to take a minute - this is British history. There are people in this audience, especially some of the older people who had come, whose grandmothers or mothers would have been involved in the fight for women's suffrage. I mean, this is that near in terms of history. We're not quite a hundred years into full universal suffrage, and that really puts things into perspective. This is not 'way back many centuries ago'. This is only just falling out of living history."

As a self-professed history fan, Beverley has taken the opportunity to find out more about Emmeline.

"I've loved it. I've gone into the deepest search when it comes to researching her. I have her book, I have Sylvia's book, I've managed to track down a DVD that was copied from a VHS tape of an old series that was on TV in the 70s, about the fight for women's suffrage. I've read everything I can. I've researched old files to listen to Christabel Pankhurst's speaking voice - she sounds really high-pitched, like old transcriptions of the Queen. It's quite funny how people spoke back then. I've done everything I can to try and transport myself back to Edwardian Britain, and for me, I couldn't be in a better place. I'm fascinated by it."

In the national tour, Beverley is joined by Naomi Katiyo, who takes the title role. The familial relationship which the pair bring to the stage is the backbone of the drama.

"It starts out as this wonderful, loving, united Pankhurst family, all of them agitating for the same thing: votes for women. They're all pulling in the same direction, until it becomes increasingly obvious that the government isn't going to bend, isn't going to shift, isn't even gonna listen to these women. Emmeline says, 'Well, a Suffragist would like to have the vote, and a Suffragette will fight for the vote.' It's that fight where the cracks begin to show in the family. Adela Pankhurst is not comfortable with it. Christabel loves it - Christabel is the strategist who is thinking of all these wonderful schemes that her mother implements. Sylvia at first goes along with it, but her pacifism means that she just can't continue on that road. Then she sees how her mother, over time, becomes this autocrat - 'My way or the highway' - and that sets mother and daughter on a collision course. Eventually, the relationship is fractured beyond repair and they never speak again. It's quite a serious drama - high stakes."

Since the early days of the production, the play has been refocused to centre the action around the women themselves.

"When I first started, [Labour Party founder] Keir Hardie and his relationship with Sylvia was very much at the forefront. It takes a little bit more of a back seat this time round, to concentrate on the dynamic between Sylvia and her mom, and Sylvia with the other women. Christabel is also important because she's very much her mother's henchwoman. The focus is around the Pankhursts as a family."

The play doesn't shy away from the realities of the Suffragettes' protests - including the famously public death of Emily Wilding Davison at the 1913 Derby. Beverley believes that these historical events remain shockingly relevant: "The cruelty of what happens to these women and how they are ridiculed - we see the echoes of that today. A lot of the arguments and the problems that the women came up against almost 100 years ago are things that we are seeing repeating today. The right to protest - who has that right, what protest is acceptable, when does it cross the line? What is the role of women in today's society - has it changed? The more things change, the more they stay the same."

While there are undoubtedly some heavy themes, the uplifting and rousing music brings joy back to the production. And, with the tour's second stop-off being Birmingham Hippodrome, Beverley is buzzing with excitement to perform on home turf once again.

"Just glorious! There's this extra frisson of excitement from my point of view because I know I'm going to be coming back to God's own country, and to know that I'm in a place where people know my journey. They know what it's taken for me to stand on these stages - that's always extra special, and I appreciate them. There's gonna be a lot of people who are part of my story in that audience watching, and I don't take a single one for granted. It's always a joy to come home and to play - and the Hippodrome is one of the great stages in this country."

Piff & Pops Magic Shoppe

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Wed 16 September

Alongside its winning blend of 'jaw-dropping magic, unforgettable showmanship and side-splitting comedy', this brand-new show is notable for one other reason: it marks the first time that legendary magician Penn Jillette has performed in the UK without his equally legendary partner-in-magic Teller (who, in a legal move many a year ago, dropped his other names).

Penn is joined in the show by London-born America's Got Talent and Las Vegas favourite Piff The Magic Dragon - aka John van der Put - who will be performing in the UK for the first time in more than a decade... Mr Piffles - 'the world's only magic-performing Chihuahua' - will also be making a sure-to-be-telling contribution to events.

Living The Dream

Utilita Arena Birmingham, Sat 12 September

Almost 30 years after first coming to the wider public's attention in observational documentary series The Cruise on BBC One, singer, songwriter & television presenter Jane McDonald is still going strong, touring to arenas and recently releasing her 11th studio album, Living The Dream. Recorded in Nashville, the record is a celebration of Jane's little-known passion for country music. Not surprisingly, she's now supporting the album's release with a UK tour, with this Birmingham gig marking her only visit to the West Midlands region.

Memories and mammaries, Arsenal and a*seholes, politics, filth, and absolutely everything in between is the menu which veteran entertainer Miriam Margolyes is promising to serve up when she stops off in Wolverhampton this month. Miriam is urging her West Midlands fans to secure their seats for the show asap - at nearly 85, she says, "this old dyke can only go on so long."

5 Mistakes That Changed
History

Lichfield Garrick, Tues 8 September; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Sun 27 September

The death of Alexander The Great and the introduction into Europe of the humble tomato have featured among the history-changing errors to which the title of this Edinburgh Fringe hit refers (the five mistakes vary across the show's tour cycles). The production is written and presented by historian/comedian Paul Coulter, who has published an associated book entitled 10 Mistakes That Changed History.

Paul Zerdin:
Shut Your Mouth

Swan Theatre, Worcester, Thurs 3 September; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Fri 25 September

"As a ventriloquist, I can get away with jokes that other comedians can't," Paul Zerdin explains. "I've got the luxury of taking the p*ss out of myself, but through the characters, rather than me just being relentlessly self-deprecating. I can get away with having a go at the audience much more, too; you get to be cheekier. Mocking the front row is a trademark of my characters, but I'm evolving my audience interaction beyond that."

Comedian & ventriloquist Paul, the 2016 winner of America's Got Talent, here returns to the Midlands with a show that's definitely not appropriate for young children (the age suitability is 14-plus). "They might be cute little puppets," Paul says of his numerous characters, "but leave the kids at home!"

GLORIOUSLY GRACEFUL

Birmingham Royal Ballet presents Sir Peter Wright and Galina Samsova's magnificent retelling of Swan Lake...

Birmingham Royal Ballet (BRB) returns to the Birmingham Hippodrome stage this month with one of the company's most popular works: Sir Peter Wright and Galina Samsova's Swan Lake.

Set to a dramatic score by Tchaikovsky, the ballet tells the tale of Princess Odette, who has been turned into a white swan by the evil sorcerer Baron Von Rothbart. Her only chance of freedom is true love, and when Prince Siegfried meets her and pledges his heart, it seems the spell will be broken. But Rothbart has a trick up his sleeve: the black swan Odile. So can Odile tempt Siegfried, or will the prince remain true?

BRB principal Céline Gittens has played Odette/Odile many times and says the two swans need to have very different characters: "Audiences want a form of escapism, to be taken away from their everyday life into this magical world of ballet, and I think the way to succeed with that is to really understand the character fully so that I can portray the story and the character properly.

"So when I first approached the role in 2012, I did a lot of background research on other ballet dancers and different productions, which provided inspiration for how I interpreted the role. In 2012, I also became the first mixed-race female ballet dancer to perform the role of Odette/Odile in the UK" Born in Trinidad, Céline grew up in Vancouver, where she trained with her mother, Janet Gittens, and at the Goh Ballet Academy. It was from watching Canadian principal Evelyn Hart that she found the key to creating Odette/Odile.

"Evelyn was just stunning in the way she made both roles so different, and that really inspired me. That is where I've drawn a lot of my interpretation from.

"I feel that Odette is maybe a little bit naïve and very tender. What's driving her is to find love. And then along comes Odile, who is quite different. There are a variety of possible interpretations, whether Odile is a transformation of Odette or a completely different character, and I feel like Rothbart has transformed her and given her a new persona to lure Siegfried."

A gold medallist and audience choice award recipient at the prestigious Margot Fonteyn international ballet competition, Céline joined BRB in 2006, becoming a principal in 2016. She has danced many of the lead roles with the company, including Juliet in Sir Kenneth Macmillan's Romeo And Juliet, the Sugar Plum Fairy in Sir Peter Wright's The Nutcracker, Aurora in Sir Peter's Sleeping Beauty, Kitri in Carlos Acosta's Don Quixote and Fortuna in Sir David Bintley's Carmina Burana. And it is getting to the heart of a character that matters for her: "Sir Peter Wright says this - you have to act to be a classical ballet dancer, you have to act to be in love or in hatred or remorse, but also you have to feel it. When you feel it, that's when it carries through to the audience. And that is when you get the audience on your side."

Taking the role of Prince Siegfried in the full-length ballet for the first time, Mason King joined BRB2, a two-year initiative for young dancers, in 2022, becoming a member of the main company in 2024.

"This is my first big character ballet," he says, "but I actually played Siegfried in the White Swan pas de deux from Act II the year I joined BRB2, and then the next year as well. In fact, I've done it every year but one in my professional career.

"BRB2 set us up really nicely because I was able to do these big solo roles and these big pas de deux; not in a full ballet context, of course, but a snippet - and I think that did help me.

"Any young dancer would hope that eventually they would get to do the role of Prince Siegfried, and I was the same. I didn't think it was going to come around so fast, but I always had the drive for it."

Born in the UK, Mason grew up in New Zealand, training at New Zealand School of Dance. He then attended The Royal Ballet School in London, after which he joined BRB2, where he's performed pieces including Carlos Acosta's Dying Swan pas de deux, Agrippina Vaganova's Diana & Actaeon pas de deux, and Ben Stevenson's End Of Time. But Siegfried is one of ballet's most demanding male roles.

"From watching other principals do it when I first joined, I'd say the challenge is partly the length. This is probably the longest ballet for a male dancer. In Swan Lake, you're in all four acts, so you're doing quite a lot of work. "You really have to carry the story throughout all four acts. and you need to be able to show the emotion at the end of the ballet. So you need the technique but also the stamina - that will be the biggest challenge."

Mason's approach is to focus on the constituent parts of the work: "It's almost broken down into acts for me. So in Act I, Siegfried is very sorrowful; you're by yourself, you're surrounded by all these other people dancing for you, but you're very internal. And then you progress, and in Act II you meet Odette and you slowly fall for her and you have to show the progression through that.

"Then Act III is with Odile. For me, that's almost a completely different role because of how Céline will portray that part, and I will respond to that. And then there's all the emotion of Act IV. That emotion is essential - if you don't feel it and show it to the audience, then it's just steps on stage." Mason is also benefiting from partnering with Céline.

"Because Céline has performed this role so many times, she knows what she wants, so then I just have to find my way of doing it." BRB founding director laureate Sir Peter Wright is due to turn 100 later this year, but he has always made a point of attending rehearsals for his ballets, to help the dancers fine-tune the roles. And Céline says his input is appreciated: "Sir Peter will tell you when you've done a good job. Even in a principal position, principals still need to hear that. I'm open to corrections because that's what ballet dancers do - we live off being corrected and receiving constructive criticism. But don't forget to also praise the dancers! The fact that Sir Peter is almost 100 and still praising the dancers, that means a lot."

Former ballet mistress Marion Tait, who now holds the role of guest répétiteur, will also be in the rehearsal room.

"Marion often comes to set Sir Peter's ballets," says Céline. "She's been a huge influence in my career, because coming from Vancouver, she helped me switch into the British style of dancing.

"She's very understanding of the dancers. For example, Mason and myself are tall, and she understands what works to bring out the best in ourselves as tall dancers, using the space on the stage and making the most of our aesthetic."

So why does Céline believe Swan Lake has remained central to the world of ballet?

"It's a classic which has stood the test of time. I think what makes it stand out is the fact that it's so technically demanding; it has every classical step, thrown into one ballet. And then there's the music. Tchaikovsky's score elevates this ballet to another level entirely.

Birmingham Royal Ballet: Swan Lake

Birmingham Hippodrome, Wed 23 September - Sat 3 October

Birmingham Royal Ballet here presents its much-loved Sir Peter Wright & Galina Samsova version of a timeless favourite. Set to Tchaikovsky's mesmerising score. Swan Lake tells the story of Odette, a beautiful princess who, caught under the spell of the evil

Von Rothbart, must spend the daytime hours as a swan, returning to human form only when night falls...

A sumptuous visual feast, the production offers a spectacle which is ideal for the first-time trier as well as the more-seasoned ballet-goer.

Lord Of The Dance

The Alexandra, Birmingham,
Mon 28 September - Sun 4 October

Since catapulting Irish music into the limelight back in 1996, Michael Flatley's choreographed adventure has become an international phenomenon. The production presents a tale of good versus evil, in the process combining precision dancing with state-of-the-art lighting and pyrotechnics... This Birmingham performance is part of a nationwide 30th-anniversary tour.

production which sees them taking a deep-dive into the challenges of navigating a relationship while 'trying to make something with someone else'... The show is a last hurrah as performers for husband & wife team Alex and Charlotte. Following the birth of their daughter, they decided to focus their attention on the challenges of directing shows, so are framing the production, which is titled Collaborator, as a 'farewell to performing'.

Practical Magic 2 CERT tbc (110 mins)

Starring Sandra Bullock, Nicole Kidman, Stockard Channing, Dianne Wiest, Joey King, Maisie Williams Directed by Susanne Bier

The season of the witch has returned - 28 long years after Nicole Kidman and Sandra Bullock last stepped into Practical Magic's world of moonlit mischief and powerful ancestral sorcery.

The Hollywood A-listers once again play Gillian (Kidman) and Sally (Bullock), sister witches who find themselves having to confront the dark curse that threatens to finally unravel their family...

The original 1998 film, based on the same-named novel by Alice Hoffman, was by no means a resounding success, either with critics or at the box office. However, subsequent decades have seen it achieve cult status, which is nowadays a surefire reason for film studios to back a sequel.

Kidman and Bullock are co-producing the new movie alongside Denise Di Novi, who also produced the first film.

"I think the big mistake people make with sequels is when they kind of want to reinvent the wheel and be totally original and surprise people," Di Novi told People.com. She added that they "[get] how important the first movie is to so many people, women in particular, and we want to honour that for sure."

The Incomer CERT 12a (102 mins)

Starring Gayle Rankin, Domhnall Gleeson, John Hannah, Emun Elliott, Michelle Gomez, Grant O'Rourke Directed by Louis Paxton

Dark comedy combines with modern folk fairytale in The Incomer. The winner of the Next Innovator Award at the Sundance Film Festival, the movie stars Domhnall Gleeson as Daniel, a painfully awkward land-recovery coordinator whose boss sends him to a remote and tiny Scottish isle on which two siblings - Isla and Sandy - have lived alone since the loss of their parents 30 years earlier. Daniel's brief is straightforward enough: to evict the pair and have them return to the mainland within 10 days. But Isla and Sandy are set in their ways, survive by hunting and eating seabirds, speak to mythical beings, and most pertinently of all from Daniel's point of view, have vowed to fight off any 'incomers'...

Pressure

CERT 12a (100 mins)

Starring Andrew Scott, Brendan Fraser, Kerry Condon, Chris Messina, Damian Lewis, Tamsin Topolski Directed by Anthony Maras

There can't have been many bigger decisions to make in the 20th century than the one facing General Dwight D Eisenhower and chief meteorological officer Captain James Stagg in the three days prior to the D-Day Landings. With the fate of the free world hanging in the balance, do they launch the largest and most dangerous seaborne invasion in history, or risk losing the war altogether?

Based on the 2014 stage play of the same name by David Haig - who co-wrote the screenplay with director Anthony Maras - Pressure focuses on the impact which meteorological conditions had on crucial decisions about the D-Day operation. It's certainly an impressive work of cinema, which in itself is no small achievement given that its action basically revolves around the rather prosaic subject of a weather forecast.

Released Wed 9 September

The Runner CERT 15 (107 mins)

Starring Alan Ritchson, Owen Wilson, Leila George, Rodrigo Santoro, Peta Sergeant, Geraldine Hakewill Directed by Scott Waugh

A former soldier is thrown into a brutal race against time when a critical medical delivery makes him and his unlikely partner the targets of a ruthless cartel. As the mission spirals into a deadly manhunt, they must survive the chase and successfully deliver their cargo, to save the life of a little girl...

That's the synopsis for a film that pairs Owen Wilson - perhaps best known from Ben Stiller comedies such as Zoolander and Starsky & Hutch - with Alan Ritchson, who's come to prominence over the last few years for his portrayal of Midlands born-and-bred author Lee Childs' action-hero Jack Reacher.

"Runner is the kind of theatrical film audiences have been waiting for," says the movie's director, Scott Waugh. "Big action, real heart, and a story that brings light into this world. When everything's on the line to save a life, real men don't run from the fire; they drive straight into it."

Starring Daisy Edgar-Jones, Esmé Creed-Miles, Bodhi Rae Breathnach, Fiona Shaw, Caitriona Balfe, George MacKay Directed by Georgia Oakley

Focus Features and Working Title Films once again team up to present another cinematic adaptation of a Jane Austen novel; they previously harnessed their talents for a 2020 adaptation of Emma, while their 2005 version of Pride & Prejudice earned four Academy Award nominations and secured Focus' status as a leading independent film company. For those whose interest in Austen has at best been cursory, Sense And Sensibility revolves around the characters of Georgian-era sisters Elinor and Marianne Dashwood. The storyline follows the siblings as they busily make their first forays into the excitingly decadent world of 18th-century high society, where the giddy excitement of love and the terrible pain of heartbreak await them...

Resident Evil

CERT 15 (90 mins)

Starring Austin Abrams, Paul Walter Hauser, Zach Cherry, Kali Reis, Johnno Wilson, Devon Stewart Directed by Zach Cregger

The latest entry in the well-established Resident Evil franchise sees medical courier Brian unwittingly finding himself in a race for survival 'as one fateful, horrifying night collapses in chaos around him'. Based on the famous Japanese video-game franchise, the Resident Evil movies have done exceptionally well at the box office, despite almost universally being panned by the critics.

This brand-new offering is the second reboot of the series and runs parallel to the timeline of the Resident Evil 2 computer game.

"So I had this idea for a story in the world of Resident Evil," explains the film's director, Zach Cregger, "but it's kind of like me; like if I was dropped into a Resident Evil game. I'm terrible with guns. I wouldn't know how any of them work. I would miss 99 percent of all of my shots!"

Directed by David Ayer

After a harrowing plane crash, Special Forces officer James Belmont (Brad Pitt) and his combat dog, Odin, find themselves stranded deep in the Alaskan wilderness. Together, they are forced into a brutal fight for survival against the elements...

Described by its publicity as 'an intense adventure thriller exploring the unbreakable bond between a man and his best friend', Heart Of The Beast is helmed by David Ayer, who brings to bear his experience of being involved with such muscular two-handers as Training Day and The Fast And The Furious. "Working with animals is its own experience," he told GQ, "and sometimes you can see the lack of connection when people do these movies, but we really made the dog a living, breathing, fully formed character, with a soulful presence. And you can feel their history, their connection."

FEELGOOD FACTOR

Jonathan Maitland's new play pays tribute to Dr Feelgood legend Wilko Johnson...

Wilko: Love And Death And Rock 'n' Roll - a brand-new play with live music that tells the miraculous tale of how Dr Feelgood guitarist Wilko Johnson survived a terminal-cancer diagnosis - comes to Coventry this month. Here, its writer, Jonathan Maitland, explains why the incredible story will appeal to a wide audience, not just fans of the legendary Essex rock band...

"It is one of the greatest, if not the greatest rock & roll story ever told. If it wasn't real and you invented it, people wouldn't believe you."

Playwright and former journalist Jonathan Maitland is animatedly effusive about the inspiration for his latest play: the truly extraordinary life of Wilko Johnson - guitarist and founder member of legendary 1970s pub rock band (and punk trailblazers) Dr Feelgood.

In 2012, the iconic and bullet-headed star - who also had a recurring role in TV's Game Of Thrones - was given the devastating news that he had inoperable cancer and less than 12 months to live. The notoriously grumpy rocker refused all treatment, deciding instead to spend time with friends, make a final album (with The Who's Roger Daltrey) and play a farewell concert tour. It proved an unlikely new lease of life for the perennial curmudgeon, according to Maitland.

"When he got the diagnosis, he was on the verge of giving up rock & roll - he'd had enough of travelling to gigs and playing to audiences of five, 10, 15 people," he says, noting that the diagnosis not only rejuvenated Wilko but changed his typically antagonistic, downbeat demeanour.

"The way he dealt with his illness and the way he just said [adopts note-for-note Canvey Island accent] 'I'm not taking any chemotherapy. I'm gonna die, and it's made me a new person - I love life. It's incredible. I'm tingling all over.' It was amazing. There's footage on YouTube of him saying, 'I'm alive. I feel alive.' He wasn't faking it."

And then a miracle happened. At his farewell gig at KOKO in Camden, which included a poignant singalong encore of Bye Bye Johnny - Wilko's real name was John Wilkinson - a cancer doctor and amateur photographer called Charlie Chan (yes, really) told Wilko 'for a man who's about to die, you look surprisingly well' and convinced him to get a second opinion.

Charlie introduced him to a French surgeon called Emmanuel Huguet, who determined he had a cancerous tumour but not actual cancer. Without treatment it would kill him, but it could be removed... which it was, during a risky 12-hour operation at Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge. Wilko went on to live another decade, eventually passing away in 2022, aged 75.

The extraordinary tale of his (mis)diagnosis, acceptance of his fate, new-found love of life and miraculous survival are now the subject of Maitland's latest play, Wilko: Love And Death And Rock 'n' Roll.

The writer has penned a number of dramas based on real-life people and events - subjects have included Margaret Thatcher, Lady Diana, Boris Johnson and Jimmy Savile - but this one evidently means more, given his lifelong admiration of the subject.

"I've always been a massive, massive fan of Wilko, primarily because of the music he made with Dr Feelgood, but also afterwards because he was so exciting and so funny and so mesmeric and brilliant. You listen to the music and it just sends 50,000 volts of electricity through you."

Not that he ever intended to write a play about the man, he admits: "There was always something extraordinary about him, but I didn't think there was a play there. You can't just write a play about somebody you like. I love the Electric Light Orchestra, and Jeff Lynne is wonderful, but he's probably the most boring man in the world."

That said, Jonathan had been trying and failing to develop a play involving a musician who faked his own death in order to become famous.

"The best thing you can do for your career if you're a rock star is die like all those kids who died at 27 - Jim Morrison, Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin, Kurt Cobain... the 'Stupid Club', as Cobain's mother called them. I didn't get very far with it, but I thought, what a great story; this rock star goes missing, he goes to number one, and then they find out he's still alive. When Wilko got ill, I thought, my god, it's happened for real - these two things have come together! One of, if not my favourite rock star, has done my idea for real - not pretending but basically being given 12 months to live! In the process, he does a sell-out tour, his album goes to number one and he becomes a national treasure all over again."

Jonathan instantly got to work bringing the two threads together, even contacting Wilko to get his blessing, something the English Literature graduate and self-professed 'man of letters' was delighted about.

"He understood theatre and loved it. He used to take his son, Simon, to see Shakespeare, so I think he was quite honoured that somebody who could write plays wanted to make a play about him. I said 'I'm going to have to take a bit of a dramatic licence' and he said [adopts accent again] 'Well, it's a play, right, just f*cking make it up.'"

Once he had a first draft, Jonathan visited

Wilko to get his opinion and instantly found himself being corrected on an all-important element. Having been read a stage direction saying 'Wilco sniffs a line of coke', the guitarist jumped in: 'No, no, stop - it's not coke, it's speed.'

"He then tells this story about how he and Lemmy from Motorhead used to stay awake all week on speed," recalls Jonathan. "He said day three was the best 'because it's like someone's taken off the top of your head, poured in Rice Krispies and then milk on top - snap, crackle and pop inside your brain'."

"It's such a great line - I put it in the play and it gets a massive laugh every night."

There are plenty of laughs in the show, of course, but there's angst, tragedy and heartbreak too. Wilko was effectively kicked out of his own band (they had their biggest chart hits less than a year later, as singer Lee Brilleaux was quick to remind him), his wife died of cancer in 2004, and sadly he never got to see the play performed before he passed.

It all adds up to a drama that Jonathan believes has a life way beyond lovers of Dr Feelgood - something demonstrated by the show's sold-out runs in London: "The reason the play's been a success and has made people laugh and cry is because it's imbued with Wilko's spirit and his words. A lot of the best gags in it are his gags - I just fashioned a narrative and scenes around it."

The mixture of drama, quotes from the man himself and live music - including a number of Dr Feelgood hits as well as cover versions such as Route 66 - make for a suitably emotional but ultimately uplifting journey of redemption that also draws comparisons with a certain well-known festive tale.

"It's a real-life Christmas Carol but with cancer and guitars," laughs Jonathan.

"[Wilko] is Scrooge, gets cancer, sees his death, sees his demons and thinks 'Oh my God, I've been appalling.' After his death sentence, he became a better person. Or, as he put it: 'less of an arsehole.'"

Raqib Shaw: Night Sonnets

Compton Verney, Warwickshire,
Sat 19 September - Sunday 21 February

It's been more than a decade since Raqib Shaw mounted an exhibition of new work in the UK, so his admirers will surely be eager to check out this brand-new offering. Night Sonnets brings together a cycle of nocturnal paintings and tapestry which has been informed by the 52-year-old artist's lifelong interest in moonlight and the conditions of the night.

The paintings act as vehicles via which Raqib Shaw contemplates difficult issues such as human consciousness, environmental loss and destruction of knowledge, exploring questions about the human condition and the complexities of modern-day existence. The exhibition includes a number of works which have never before been exhibited in the UK. These include The Retrospective 2002-2022, an epic, highly detailed painting which functions as a visual inventory of the Calcutta-born artist's impressive career.

Surreal Solihull

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Wed 16 September - Sun 22 November

Art lovers are being invited 'to see the familiar in unexpected ways' in this brand-new exhibition. The display is a celebration of the legacy of Emmy Bridgwater, who was born in Edgbaston, spent her final years in Solihull, and whose bold, uncanny artwork made a significant impact on British surrealism. Art historian & author Ruth Millington is the curator of the show, which takes the theme 'surreal' and features work by 29 West Midlands-based artists.

Tereza Buřková: Mothers Without Hands

New Art Gallery, Walsall, until Sun 15 November

Prague-born and Birmingham-based artist Tereza Buřková is the driving force behind the international project Mothers Without Hands.

The initiative, which aims to raise awareness of violence against women and girls, saw diverse communities in Folkestone, Prague, Brno, Erdington and Walsall engage in creative workshops and public processions. The exhibition includes photographic prints, a major video work, and a selection of costumes, headdresses and ceremonial crowns.

Every Thing Must Go by Joe Lycett

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Sun 21 February

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery here plays host to a first major solo exhibition of art by Brummie comedian Joe Lycett. Exploring the theme of 'things that are no longer with us', and inspired by objects from the City of Birmingham's collection, Joe's exhibition covers subjects including deceased celebrities, extinct animals, destroyed buildings and discontinued chocolate bars, all presented in the popular funnyman's usual tongue-in-cheek style.

Joe's stated desire with the show is to "overwhelm and delight with a neon graveyard".

Andy Warhol: Art Star

Wolverhampton Art Gallery, until Sun 4 October

Wolverhampton Art Gallery's tribute to Andy Warhol includes both iconic and lesser-known drawings, screenprints, paintings and photographs from the 1950s to the 1980s.

Warhol's famous Campbell's soup tin features in the show, taking its place alongside images of The Beatles, Marilyn Monroe and Elizabeth Taylor.

Reflections

Worcester City Art Gallery & Museum, Sat 12 September - Sun 3 January

Immerse yourself in the fluid beauty and immense power of water...

That's the suggestion being made by Worcester City Art Gallery & Museum in its publicity for this brand-new exhibition.

Featuring works from Worcester City's own collection - presented alongside high-profile loans from national collections and numerous pieces by contemporary artists - Reflections aims to inspire the viewer's imagination. It also serves as a vital reminder of the human responsibility to protect seas, rivers, streams and waterways, all of which are so important for the future.

Paula Rego: Visions Of English Literature

Rugby Art Gallery & Museum, Sat 19 September - Sat 21 November

Unseen preparatory sketches and etching plates are among the items on show in this exhibition of work by the late Paula Rego, who is widely considered to be one of the finest artists, printmakers and storytellers of modern times. The display features three series of graphic works by the Lisbon-born artist: Jane Eyre, Nursery Rhymes and Peter Pan.

Each series is accompanied by a variety of Paula's personal items, many of which have never before been displayed in public.

What's On recently caught up with one of the team responsible for bringing the festival to the Shire...

Lord Of The Rings fans are being invited to explore their inner hobbit when the immersive Middle-earth festival Brandywine comes to the UK for the first time this month. A live-action role-playing (LARP) event, Brandywine will turn the grounds of Weston Park near Shifnal into The Shire, home of the hobbits in JRR Tolkien's beloved books The Hobbit and The Lord Of The Rings trilogy. Festival-goers will take on the role of a hobbit and follow immersive storylines created by a team of performers. Plus, they can join in with a whole host of hobbit-related activities, including games, live music, dancing, and workshops exploring cookery and textiles. Visitors to the festival have the option of staying for the full event and camping, or just attending for one day on Saturday the 12th. The first Brandywine Festival took place last year in Kentucky and was an immediate sell-out. The organisers, German-based LARP experts Burgschneider, were keen to bring the event not just to the UK but as close as possible to Birmingham - the childhood home of Tolkien.

"How Tolkien imagined The Shire was specifically the West Midlands and the Cotswolds," says Burgschneider chief creative officer Thomas 'Beol' Miller. "Those regions are really the spiritual home of Middle-earth, and Tolkien was clear about this in some of his writing. Therefore, we very much loved the idea of having the festival so close to his home in Birmingham. This was very much on the wish list, and when it came to finding the right venue, the team at Weston Park were able to help us bring that to life by having a wonderful site there on the estate. They are a wonderful team - capable and knowledgeable - and helped us with all the questions that we had as we developed the event."

Once visitors step into the festival, they will be entering a whole different world.

"The Brandywine Festival is a fully immersive, multi-day experience set in The Shire," explains Beol, "so from the moment you arrive, the modernity of the world fades and we're focused on being 'in character', roleplaying and being as hobbits; everything from lantern-lit little lanes between tents, woodsmoke over fires, live music, and a living community of hobbits who are there to roleplay that world and embody that world for the four days of the event."

"We have the Four Farthings Games and a series of Shire games, camping, and the storytelling of what is happening within The Shire in that period. We've picked a very specific date within The Shire, which gives us a lot of context [in terms of] what is happening within the world of the hobbits. So what would be the gossip? What would there be to do? And then we try to explore those ideas in the story."

From the time the Burgschneider team were first asked by Middle-earth Enterprises - which holds the worldwide rights to The Hobbit and The Lord Of The Rings books - to create Brandywine, it took around 18 months to develop the concept. Beol says it was essential from the outset that the festival be faithful to Tolkien's novels.

"We treat the event almost as if it is a re-enactment of that world, just as much as it is a game of make-believe at its core. We are treating Tolkien's work almost as a primary source for a historian. We look at the books and then try to surmise and understand what and how he described it, so that we can attempt - as best we can within reason - to recreate that feeling and those moments."

On the Brandywine website, the team provide helpful guides to costuming, creating a character and all the other elements of the festival, to ensure visitors can fully immerse themselves in the fun.

"The idea is that you are stepping into the world that exists there, and you aren't Bilbo but you can decide who you are. And because we are giving players a very clear set of guidelines and railings [within which] they can interact and roleplay, it's very easy for them to go through the process of designing a character."

"We have wonderful tools on our website that help you to design a character, and tools to help you to understand what it is to roleplay as a generic hobbit of your own accord. There is no limitation to the creative opportunities within the world of Tolkien. We want to see a visitor's story through their character; we want to see their creativity come out, and the expression and the love that they have for Tolkien's work."

This even extends to the camping, where visitors have the choice of recreating a Shire camping experience or stepping out of the game and bringing more modern equivalents. The aim, says Beol, is to ensure Brandywine is as accessible as it can be.

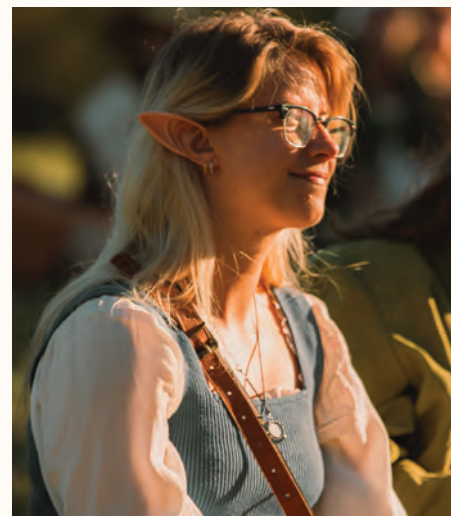

"This event is really for everyone, even if you haven't done LARP before. This is a wonderful place to be able to explore roleplaying and being in a character in a way that is very accessible and fun. The event very much welcomes you in with open arms, with a wonderful community of like-minded people who are there to play to life.

"If you love The Lord Of The Rings and you can imagine yourself enjoying a Saturday spent relaxing, having a picnic as a hobbit, playing games, listening to music, dancing, eating food and spending time with good friends, then this is the event for you. Tolkien said 'If more of us valued food and cheer and song above hoarded gold, it would be a merrier world' - and that is what we are trying to bring here."

Tolkien's The Hobbit and The Lord Of The Rings are among the most popular books ever written and were memorably made into a series of hugely successful films by Peter Jackson. Beol believes the key to their success lies in Tolkien's vision.

"At the end of the day it's an endearing story that touches the core of our wanting a world in which there is a clear division between good and evil and a clear opportunity for us to make a difference in the world; and then, further than that, to explore a space in which myth and legend still hold sway. I think that speaks to who we are as people, and to our love for adventure and for the triumphing of a classic hero story, despite the fact he's nothing but a simple hobbit."

Brandywine Festival takes place at Weston Park, on the Shropshire/Staffordshire border, from Wednesday 9 to Sunday 13 September

Malvern Autumn Show

Three Counties Showground, Worcestershire, Fri 25 - Sun 27 September

Malvern Autumn Show returns to the Three Counties Showground late this month with a packed programme of entertainment, family activities and food & drink experiences. Visitors can enjoy animal encounters, dinosaur-themed shows, circus skills, arts & crafts, a vintage funfair and live arena displays featuring everything from agility dogs to Exmoor ponies. Food lovers can browse artisan markets, sample street food from a range of independent traders, and discover local producers in dedicated food & drink areas. The popular Great Malvern Cake Off also returns, alongside giant vegetable displays, harvest exhibits and expert demonstrations. New for this year, visitors can explore the reimagined On The Farm area and enjoy an expanded programme of free family-friendly workshops and activities. Special guests from the worlds of gardening, baking and television will also be making contributions, including Monty Don and Gavin & Stacey favourite Joanna Page.

A Place In The Sun Live

NEC, Birmingham, Fri 18 - Sun 20 September

The live version of long-running Channel Four television series A Place In The Sun returns to the NEC mid-month, bringing together special guests, exclusive content and practical advice for anyone considering a new life or holiday home abroad. Visitors can browse property-purchasing opportunities in destinations including Spain, Portugal, France, Cyprus and Dubai, while a series of live seminars, Q&A sessions and expert-led presentations provide valuable insights into the challenges of navigating the overseas property market.

Living History Weekend

Moseley Old Hall, Wolverhampton, Sat 26 & Sun 27 September

Step back in time at Moseley Old Hall this month as the Sealed Knot brings to life the dramatic story of King Charles II's escape. The Living History Weekend recreates the events of 1651, when the young king arrived at the hall following his defeat at the Battle of Worcester. Visitors can explore a 17th-century living-history camp, discover traditional crafts and clothing, meet soldiers and civilians, and watch musket, pike and drum drills. A selection of child-friendly interactive activities is also included in the event's line-up of attractions.

Medieval Experience

Avoncroft Museum, Bromsgrove, Sat 12 & Sun 13 September

History lovers can sample a taste of life in the 15th century at Avoncroft this month, where the Wars of the Roses takes centre stage. Expect dramatic re-enactments featuring sword fighting, cannon fire and archery, presented alongside demonstrations of weaponry and gunpowder. Visitors can explore living-history camps and learn all about everyday life during medieval times, from cooking and clothes-making to traditional trades, skills and games. The Beaufort Company will be on hand to showcase costumes and crafts, while families can enjoy rides on the museum's miniature railway.

The Strongman Open

Utilita Arena Birmingham, Sat 5 September

Prepare for an evening of jaw-dropping shows of strength as Giants Live brings The Strongman Open to Birmingham. The world's strongest men will go head-to-head in five gruelling tests of strength, speed and raw power, all competing to be crowned Strongman Open Champion. Expect incredible feats of lifting, throwing, dragging and flipping, as some of the biggest names in the sport battle it out. The action-packed show is promising spectacular entertainment for the whole family and forms part of the Official Strongman World Arena Tour.

Firework Champions

Eastnor Castle, Herefordshire, Sat 5 September; Ragley Hall, Warwickshire, Sat 19 September; Arley Hall, Cheshire, Sat 26 September

Firework Champions is celebrating its 20th anniversary with a number of spectacular events this autumn, bringing explosive entertainment to Eastnor Castle, Ragley Hall and Arley Hall.

Each event sees three professional firework teams go head-to-head, creating dazzling displays set to music as they compete to be crowned the evening's winner.

A spectacular finale brings proceedings to a sky-illuminating close.

Summer Fun at Lichfield Cathedral

Lichfield Cathedral, Staffordshire, until Sun 6 September

If you haven't yet visited Lichfield Cathedral's two popular summer attractions, there's still a few days to catch them before they finish.

Artist Tessa Campbell Fraser's impressive installation Whales features three sperm-whale sculptures suspended in the cathedral's nave. The sculptures have been created from materials including recycled ghost netting, silk chiffon and latex, to highlight the impact of plastic pollution and climate change...

Meanwhile, outside the cathedral, early-autumn visitors can check out The Beach. Returning for its fifth year, the free-to-enjoy seaside escape comes complete with sand, buckets, spades and deckchairs.
